"GIB THE BLOOD" IS CAPTURED

Taken with "Lefty Louie" in Brooklyn House by New York Police, After Search Lasting 59 Days, Covering Wide Area

Missing Two Men of the Seven Indicted for Murder of Herman Rosenthal Now in Custody; Woman Questioned

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—"Lefty Louie" and "Gib the Blood," the missing two men of the seven indicted for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, in front of the Metropole Hotel on July 16, were arrested tonight by detectives from police headquarters. The much-wanted men were found living in a small brick house at No. 756 Woodward avenue, in the Ridgewood section of Brooklyn. They were taken by the detectives to the 83d th Precinct in which the house is located, and later brought to police headquarters in Manhattan.

They were joined there later by two young women brought in by detectives. The quartet were closeted for some time in the office of Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, who refused to give out any statement regarding their capture until he had conferred with Commissioner Waldo and a representative of District Attorney Whitman.

Elude Police 59 Days.

In accordance with this plan word was sent to the police commissioner and to Frank Moss, one of Mr. Whitman's assistants, who is acting District Attorney during Mr. Whitman's absence from the city. Mr. Moss refused to discuss the matter before going into Deputy Commissioner Dougherty's office.

The two gangsters, who had succeeded in eluding the police for fifty-nine days, were brought to headquarters in a police automobile. In the machine with them were Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, his secretary, Mr. Youngs; Lieutenant Detective Dominick Reilly and Detectives Meyer and Cassano.

A reporter who recognized the prisoners as they stepped from the automobile asked Dougherty where he had caught them.

"In Brooklyn," replied the Deputy Commissioner, "and it was entirely the work of the police."

One of the other detectives said that the two men had been living for some time with their wives at the Woodward avenue address. Although every effort was made to withhold the details of the arrest, what purported to be an authentic account of it leaked out from somewhere and was accepted as correct by everyone at headquarters.

According to this report "Gib the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" were sitting on a fire-escape in the rear of the Woodward avenue house watching a moving picture show in an open space in the rear, when they were observed by Detectives Reilly Meyer and Cassano. The detectives had had the house under observation for several days, having received information that two men resembling the published pictures of the indicted gangsters were living there.

Satisfied that the men on the fire escape were the ones they were after, the detectives descended upon the place and placed them under arrest. The two women were taken into custody later. The arrest of "Gib the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" had been reported several times since they disappeared on the night Rosenthal was killed, but each time the report turned out to be without foundation. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty was confident tonight, however, that he had the right men at last.

Sam Schepps, the fifth one of the indicted men to be arrested, was caught at Hot Springs, Ark., by a reporter for the New York American and brought here by officers acting under the direct orders of District Attorney Whitman. The District Attorney is now in Hot Springs gathering evidence to use in the prosecution of Former Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, one of the indicted men, who will be the first one to be tried for Rosenthal's murder.

At Table With Wives.

The officers saw "Gib" and "Lefty" disappear from the fire escape of the Brooklyn house and enter an apartment on the second floor. The arrests were made without any show of resistance.

One Armed Balloonist Fatally Hurt in Fall

Bride Among Ten Thousand Spectators Who Witness Death Plunge.

NORTH BERGEN, N. J., Sept. 14.—Bride and bridegroom of a year, they came, blithely chattering down the steps of their little home here this afternoon.

"But you must be careful," she scolded prettily. "It isn't the thousands of people who see you flying over their heads, and really revel in your danger—it isn't they; it's I, Harry, who really cares."

The young fellow—Henry Weinsteing, twenty-old years old, daring bicyclit and of recent days a parachute jumper of local fame—laughed away her fears.

"Dearest, there isn't any danger," he said. "Because I have only one arm, they think it's wonderful, but it isn't even that. My one arm is as good as most any man's two."

Weinsteing was back at the little home within two hours. Within a hundred yards of it he fell, battered, crushed and dying, while hundreds who had seen his fearful fall from a balloon were speeding in automobiles to find him.

Ten thousand persons who had assembled in Schuetzen Park at the barbecue of the John J. Egan Association, a political organization of Hudson County, saw him fall.

CHILD A STOWAWAY.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 14.—When a deckhand was making the circuit of the upper deck of the steamer City of Erie, en route from Cleveland to Buffalo early today he discovered the youngest stowaway ever found on the great lakes. It was a mite of a girl asleep in a chair in a spot secluded from the wind and cold. He aroused the child, learned that her name was Ethel Tagt, of No. 1840 East Seventy-ninth street, Cleveland, and that she had slipped aboard the boat at that point last night. She said she wanted to go to Florida to see her father.

Large delegations from Milton, Lakeville, North Abington and surrounding towns attended. The wage agreement between the company and the men expires on Sept. 30. A general increase will be demanded. Patrick F. Sheen, who presided at the meeting, said that the men did not intend to strike.

EXETER, N. H., Sept. 14.—Winston Churchill, Bull Moose candidate for Governor, who was to open his campaign here tonight, was unable to get here. It was announced from the platform of the meeting arranged, because of his illness.

A crowd of about 500, many of whom were women, were here to hear him and the large list of other speakers. The leading orator was S. O. Titus, of Rollinsford, the candidate for Congress against C. Bullowy. Mr. Titus spoke strong for women's suffrage and was warmly applauded.

AIRSHIPS CRASH IN FLIGHT—ONE KILLED

Howard Gill, Victim of Extraordinary Accident at the Chicago Meet.

MESTACH BADLY INJURED

He Saves Himself from Death by His Quick-Witted Action.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Colliding in mid-air with a swiftly moving monoplane driven by George Mestach, Howard Gill, one of the most brilliant aviators of the Wright school, was dashed to the ground this afternoon at the Cicero flying field and so terribly crushed that he died on the way to St. Anthony de Padua hospital.

By almost marvelous quick wit, Mestach depressed the head of his machine and though he crashed to the ground a second or two later, he escaped with severe cuts and bruises on the face and head. Suffering more from shock than his bodily injuries he was taken to the same hospital.

The accident occurred just at the close of a day of brilliant and exciting flying and it fulfilled a foreboding that had haunted Gill for months.

Only two days ago, after having been forced to make a quick descent by reason of high wind combined with engine trouble, Gill remarked:

"I'm beginning to be afraid. If I live through this week, I am going to cut out aviation for ever."

Gill in Other Accidents.

Little more than a year ago, at the aviation meet in Grant Park, Howard Gill had a narrow escape from death. He had made a successful flight and was attempting to land when the wheels of his landing gear struck a deep rut and the machine turned over, flinging Gill headlong and crashing down on top of him. He escaped death or very serious injury simply because his motor landed alongside instead of on him.

Last January he had another narrow escape at Domingues Field, Los Angeles. Night had fallen on the field, and he was flying at a height of about 250 feet, when he shut off his motor and attempted to volplane to earth.

Failed to See Wire Fence.

In the darkness he failed to see a wire fence, against which his machine dashed, and he was flung out, breaking several ribs and sustaining severe injuries. As soon as he was out of the hospital he again started to fly, despite the protests of his family and friends in Baltimore, and only a month ago, when attempting to land at Cicero Flying Field in a practice flight he was again injured.

His Wright "Ex" racer had landed and was skidding along the ground when one of the landing wheels struck a hummock and again he was flung against a fence. That time, however, he managed to leap from his seat just as his mechanicians seized the wings of the rapidly moving biplane swerved it away from the fence, and Gill escaped with merely a severe shaking up.

But all of these various accidents tended to worry him and his remark of two days ago was regarded by his fellow aviators in the nature of a prophecy.

Spencer's Warning From Death Cell Says Last Farewell to His Mother Refuses to Petition for His Life

DOOMED SLAYER WAS LURED BY A MYSTIC FORCE

GOES TO CHAIR TUESDAY

BERTRAM G. SPENCER, condemned to die in the week beginning today, and who will probably be put to death in the electric chair shortly after midnight on Tuesday morning, through his devoted mother, Mrs. Kate Spencer of Lebanon, Conn., has given his death-message to the world through the Sunday AMERICAN.

Young Spencer, who was convicted of the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, a school teacher of Springfield—a crime which came as a climax to a remarkable series of burglaries by a daring masked man who carried a revolver and flashlight—sends forth from his death cell in Charlestown prison the declaration that he would rather be where he is now than be set free and again find himself in the power of the mysterious agent that forced him to commit the crimes with which he is charged.

Spencer has a suggestion, born of his own tragic life, to the fathers and mothers of the country.

"Fathers and mothers," declares Spencer in the shadow of the death chair, "rule your children by love rather than by fear."

This is Spencer's statement:

By BERTRAM G. SPENCER.

I realize that I am facing death in the electric chair. I have no complaint to make. The first thing that I should like to say from this death cell is to publish to the world my appreciation of the faithful and steadfast stand that has been taken by my beloved mother since my arrest.

The one particular thing that has concerned me since I was removed from the Hampden County Jail in Springfield to the prison in which I am now confined has been my concern for the welfare of my mother.

If I die, as I have been sentenced to, and as I am prepared to, the last name that will be on my lips will be "Mother."

It is unnecessary for me to recall to the people of Massachusetts how she has stood by me since I was taken into custody in Springfield. My mother went on the witness stand at my trial in Springfield. She testified to facts there that no family would make public except under the most exacting circumstances. I do not care to rehearse the sad story that

"I'M READY TO DIE," SAYS SPENCER AFTER BIDDING MOTHER LAST GOOD-BYE

BERTRAM G. SPENCER, the Springfield masked burglar and murderer, who will probably die in the electric chair in the Charlestown State Prison just after midnight next Tuesday morning, refused to sign his name to a petition to Governor Foss and the Executive Council asking that his life be saved.

This fact became known yesterday through his counsel, Richard B. Stapleton of Holyoke, who has worked steadfastly in behalf of the doomed man, together with his devoted mother, Mrs. Kate E. Spencer.

"I am ready to die," said Spencer, "it do not want any one to worry about me. I shall not raise a hand to save my life if the law demands it."

Spencer uses up the few remaining hours of his life in reading from his religious books and in playing chess. He induced the guard to join him in the chess game after a good deal of argument. The guard could not understand how a man within the shadow of the death chair could concentrate his mind on a chess game. But Spencer has.

Hears Band From Death Cell.

Teel's Band was taken to the prison yesterday to entertain the prisoners. The band made the visit at the invitation of Chaplin Stebbins and Deputy Warden Allen, the latter taking the place of Warden Bridges, who is away for a time. About 750 of the prisoners gathered in the yard listened to the music.

Spencer, of course, could not go into the yard. He is not allowed to leave his death cell.

The strains of the music, tunes light and gay, reminiscent of Spencer's happier days when he sang with a splendid baritone voice, reached him a hundred yards away. He was deep in his game of chess at the time.

"What's the parade?" he asked.

"That isn't a parade," replied the guard, "it is a band that is playing for the boys. It is out in the yard."

"The boys are having a good time, then, aren't they?" replied Spencer.

Eats Baked Beans for Supper.

"I am glad of it," said Spencer, stopping in his chess game for a few minutes and listening to the blare of the brass music. "I like music, too. I used to sing a good deal, you know—but—well—we can't play chess while the band is playing, can we?"

The game was given up for a time. Spencer read from his religious books.

Spencer was asked what he would like for supper. An ordinary prisoner is not allowed this privilege. But in the case of a condemned man the officials think that they are justified in manifesting as much consideration as possible.

"This is Saturday evening," said Spencer, "and I'll have some Boston baked beans like other people of this section of the country."

Last Good-bye to Mother.

Spencer's mother bade her son good-bye yesterday. He does not expect that she will see him again. When his mother left Boston yesterday afternoon, knowing that there was no chance for her son, she had not decided whether or not she would try to see him again.

The mother was buoyed with the feeling that her son was meeting his fate calmly, even cheerfully.

The parting between Spencer and his mother was a notable scene, exhibiting as it did the coolness that has of late come to him, and the remarkable strength that has characterized his mother all through the heart-breaking ordeal of the past two years.

They were unable to kiss each other good-bye. They were unable to shake hands. They looked each other's eyes, faltered the parting words and the mother turned and walked from the grim prison.

Deputy Warden Allen, appreciating the agony that was tearing at the heart of the suffering, but silent, woman, put his arm about her and led her to a seat in the office. She was able to compose herself in a short time. Then, thanking the prison officials for their kindness to her and her son, she left for her home.

SNEAD KILLS BOYCE, WHO STOLE HIS WIFE

AMARILLO, Tex., Sept. 14.—John Beal Snead, the Amarillo banker who shot and killed Captain A. C. Boyce in Fort Worth on February 14, late this afternoon shot and killed Al Boyce, son of Captain Boyce. The killing took place in front of the First Methodist Church. Snead was disguised as a farmer, wearing dirty overalls, a beard, and carrying a double-barrelled shotgun. One load was fired through Boyce's body at close range.

Today's killing is the tragic climax of a series of startling events, which began when Al Boyce eloped with Mrs. Lena Snead, wife of the slayer, last Winter. Mrs. Snead, just before her elopement, had been placed in a Fort Worth sanitarium by her husband.

When the couple eloped Boyce carried with him $100,000. The couple went from here to Ft. Louis and New York, and were arrested in Winnipeg, Canada. Young Boyce had been in Amarillo only one week. It was not known that Boyce had been in the city. Al Boyce, until he came here a week ago, was running a big ranch in Western Canada. He didn't recognize Snead on the street, and his death was instant.

Snead immediately surrendered and refused to make any statement. Feeling is running high here, as the Boyces have thousands of friends and supporters.

SPENCER SAYS LAST GOODBYE TO MOTHER was brought out during those tragic days.

Last Message to World.

But there is something at this time that I would like to speak even as a last word to the world.

I want to say this: That even if I were to be set free and allowed to wander about with absolute freedom, I should refuse to changes places with any free free man in Massachusetts if I thought for one moment that I would be subject to the mysterious power that controlled me when I did the great wrongs with which I have been charged.

I do not purpose at this time to go into any descussion of the sad incidents of my career that preceded my arrest in Springfield. During my trial the details of all this came out, not only to my shame, but to my amazement.

I want to say here, speaking as I do in what appears to be a sane and normal moment, that I regret every wrong that I ever did and cannot comprehend for a moment what possessed me to do the things that have been charged against me.

Cannot Explain Crimes.

I have talked to my mother many times about this. She has been always kind, but she has asked, and I could not blame her for doing so, this question:

"Bertram, why did you do this?"

"Mother," I have told her, "I do not know."

I want to say now, and it is the truth, as though I were saying it with my dying breath, that I never realized that I was committing a crime at the time that I did it.

Something which I cannot locate nor describe, seemed to possess me, and have me completely in its power, when I committed the acts that have resulted in bringing me to where I am today.

I do not know what this mysterious power was. It is as deep a mystery to me as it must be to my mother and others who have believed in me from the beginning. I probably will never know what it is. But I am its victim and I do not propose to fight against fate.

My inclinations are at this time not to preach a sermon, but at the same time I am compelled by the great force of the facts connected with my case to speak about one phase of my career that has proven of vital import.

Brutally Treated as a Boy.

I was treated brutally in my youth. This has all been proven in connection with my trial and I have no desire to rehearse the distressing details. This one suggestion, deduced from my life's experience and thought over through long, dreary days and nights, I give to the public:

Fathers and mothers, rule your children by love rather than by fear!

I believe that if this attitude had been taken toward me, a great deal of the distress of my life would have been obviated, and that I would not be where I am today.

I have had a great many hours in which to think over my life during the last year. It seems incomprehensible to me that there should be so much of wrong, bitterness and cruelty in the world. I don't believe that it was ever intended that it should be so. I think that it was meant that this should be a world of happiness.

"Strange Peace in My Soul."

If I had my life to live over I would do everything in my power to promote the happiness of those about me. It seems to me, as I have looked at life during the last few weeks, that there is nothing higher or nobler than one's efforts to help a fellow creature.

During the last few weeks I have felt a strange peace in my soul. It does not seem that this would ever have come to me if I had been responsible for all the crimes that have been charged against me. I am sorry from the depths of my heart for anything wrong that I have done. I think that I can say honestly that I never meant to harm a human being.

The mysterious power that has been responsible for my wrongdoing has been beyond my control.

ISRAEL KREAMER MISSING.

His Father Says He Left the Lynn Home on September 4.

Samuel Kreamer, of No. 73 Wyman street, West Lynn, has asked the Boston AMERICAN to locate his fourteen-year-old son, Israel, who has been missing from home since Sept. 4. The lad for the past year has worked in the cigar store owned by Samuel Peterson at 63 Federal street, West Lynn. When the boy left home he wore a blue serge suit, blue cap, black shoes and black stockings.

LEARN GIBSON DREW $7,397 SZABO MONEY

Transferred It to Self as Executor and Then to His Own Account.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—While Burton W. Gibson, who is accused of causing the death of Countess Rosa Menschik Szabo, was busily engaged in the jail at Goshen today preparing his defense, A. A. Kremer, counsel for the Austro-Hungarian consulate general was trying to trace the funds of the dead woman's estate.

It was learned that Gibson had withdrawn $7,397 from three of the four banks in which she had deposits aggregating $10,000. The balance of about $3,000 was in the Franklin Savings Bank, but officials of that institution refused to turn it over to Gibson.

The total of $7,397 was then deposited by Gibson on August 7, 1912, in a certain bank, the name of which is being withheld. On the same date he drew a check against the account as executor of the estate, which he deposited to his personal account in the same bank.

Drew All But $297.28.

On August 8 he drew another check for $300, on August 10, one for $2,800 and on August 16, one for $3,800, leaving a balance of $297.28 in the account of the estate. What became of the money drawn from the account outside of the $200 referred to, Mr. Kremer has not yet been able to discover.

In the belief that Gibson may have placed the money in other banks under his own or an assumed name, Mr. Kremer has invited the co-operation of bank officials of the city in tracing the funds, under the promise to respect their confidence. In the course of his inquiries he learned that Gibson has only $31.80 balance in his personal account with the bank where he opened the account as executor of Mrs. Szabo's estate.

A letter made public today by Mr. Kremer is pointed to by him as further evidence that Mrs. Szabo was intending to return to her home in Austria, contrary to the statement attributed to Gibson that she went to Grenwood Lake to find a place to stay for a fe wweks. The letter was dated July 29, and was written to Franz Szabo, brother of Mrs. Szabo by George Teichman, the friend of the dead woman who started the investigation into her death.

"I will investigate the matter and will write fully in the next few days," wrote Teichman. "She (Mrs. Szabo) has several times told us about a lawyer who was a fervent suitor of your sister and wanted to travel to Vienna with her."

Although Gibson persists in his denial that the Mrs. Szabo he knew was the Viennese Mrs. Szabo, Anthony Gaytz, proprietor of a lodging house here, made an affidavit today recounting his acquaintance with Mr. Szabo and her husband that tends to confirm the statements of the Austro-Hungarian Consul General that she was the Austrian woman

What Affidavit Says.

Gaytz stated that he bought a rooming house at No. 211 West Seventeenth street in 1898. Dr. Vila Szabo had a room there at the time. He told Gaytz that his father was a nobleman in Austria and intimated that he had been disinherited because of his marriage to Rosa Menschik, a model.

"Szabo showed me a crown on his linen," said Gaytz, "and one tattoo on his left arm. He said he and Miss Menschik were married here at the City Hall. Mrs. Szabo did not live with her husband, but had an apartment in Forty-third street between Seventh and Eighth avenues. The man had no means, but obtained an income, part of the time by giving music lessons."

In 1904 Gaytz learned that Szabo had died and had left his widow penniless. He called to see her and met, he said, two men, one of whom he asserted resembled the published pictures of Burton W. Gibson.

BLOCHLINGER AVERS STRIKE WILL SPREAD

Prepare to Carry the Fight in Boston Further, Union Organizer Says.

Edward Blochlinger, national organizer for the striking hotel workers, predicted the spread of the strike now in four of the leading hotels in this city, upon his return from New York late last night.

"We are fully prepared to continue the fight now on in Boston, and to carry it further in the immediate future," he asserted. "There will be no let-up from now on.

"The defi to our union by Edgar Pierce, president of the J. R. Whipple Company, will be dealt with as it deserves. The trike at the Touraine, Young's, the Parker House, and the American House, will be prosed to a successful conclusion.

"Uur general executive committee also will end out three experienced organizers from New York tomorrow. These men immediately will proceed to form new unions the country over. In a short time we will be prepared to call a general hotel strike from the Atlantic to the Pacific, if the necesity for such action exists."

Statements Differ.

Mr. Pierce and Thomas Ahern, secretary of the Hotel Workers' Union, issued opposite statements on the local strike situation last night.

Mr. Pierce said: "The statement that twenty-five New York strike breakers went on strike at the Touraine is an unqualified falsehood. Only one man, who came from New York, has left. On the other hand, several of those who went on strike a week ago have returned to work and are now employed."

Mr. Ahern said: "Not only did the strike breakers quit, but the Touraine people tried to prevent their leaving by using force. The men in question were members of our union in New York and got places with the Waddell-Mahon Detective Agency in order to secure inside information. When the men struck on Friday night they were locked in a room and detained until Saturday morning by detectives who guarded the doors."

Ettor Demonstration Today.

Members of the Hotel Workers' Union will parade to the Common today to participate in the Ettor-Giovannitti demonstration.

Chief Whitney yesterday asked Attorney-General Swift for an opinion as to what lew hotel employes come under—the fifty-four, fifty-eight or other law on the books. Chief Whitney ordered Inspector Charles Clerk, of the Inspection Department, to make a rigid investigation and the result will be reported to the head of the State police tomorrow.

It was arranged yesterday that Lawyer Connolly should consult with District Attorney Pelletier tomorrow to ascertain if there had been a violation of the labor law. It has been stated that if such violation is found the matter will be brought before the Grand Jury.

How Word Tip Originated.

Andrew Drives, a striking waiter from the Touraine, explains the derivation of the word "tip," which is under so much discussion just now.

According to Drives, who is a pleasant spoken son of Greece, some hunters used to come out from London and begin hunting at a little town a few miles outside. Sometimes, to insure prompt attention, they would give a small money inducement to the waiter.

This got to be a habit, and the waiter, with his eye to wider profit, built himself a little box, cut a slit in it and over the slit painted the letters "T. I. P.," meaning "To insure promptness." And from that time on the word "tip" has become part of the English language."

LAST OF ROSENTHAL SUSPECTS CAPTURED

while the men were sitting at a table with their wives, neither of whom has reached an age that would make full length skirts becoming. As the officers forced the door of the apartment on the second floor of the flat house, each man flashed a revolver which was aimed at the heads of the prisoners about to be taken.

"Gib the Blood" was the first to speak. He said quietly: "Gentlemen, put your guns up; we are not armed."

There is every evidence that these two murderers, for whom a world wide search has been conducted since a few days after the assassination of Rosenthal on July 16, have been in New York all along with the exception of a few days spent in the Catskills immediately after the crime was committed.

The hiding place was finally discovered by shadowing the wives of the two murderers and every member of their respective families. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty's own story of the search reveals a piece of detective work that for thoroughness and perseverance has but few equals in the records of the police department.

"Gib Is All Right."

The clew which led directly to the arrests was a part of a conversation overheard by one of the detectives while listening to the wife of "Gib the Blood" tell a friend that her husband was safe and not worrying. She is alleged to have said: "Gib is all right. He is living in a house where he can watch the 'Movies' from the rear window. There is also a laundry in the house, so you can see he does not have to do much running around."

The police made the deduction that they must find a house with a laundry and with an open air moving picture show operating in the rear, so that the performance could be seen from the window. The success of this search resulted in the arrests.

In the house with the men at the time of the arrests was Michael Polechuck, who is described by Deputy Commissioner Dougherty as a pickpocket from New Haven, Ct., who served a term in the Elmira reformatory with "Gib."

Deputy Commissioner Dougherty carried the officers who made the arrests to the Woodward avenue house in his own privately owned automobile. As soon as "Gib" and "Lefty" had been made prisoners he conveyed them to police headquarters, himself acting as chauffeur.

To Be Arraigned Tomorrow.

Two of the officers were detailed to bring the wives of the men to Manhattan by the elevated trains.

The entire party reached headquarters sometime after 7 p. m., and Commissioner Dougherty immediately sent for Assistant District Attorney Moss, who is in charge of the Rosenthal case, in the absence of Mr. Whitman.

At a late hour tonight the officials were closeted with the prisoners seeking such information as might throw further light on the events that led up to the killing of Rosenthal.

It was announced that "Gib the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" would be locked up in the headquarters jail at the conclusion of the examination until Monday, when they will be arraigned on the murder indictments before a justice of the Supreme Court and committed to the Tombs.

Commissioner Dougherty was undecided what to do with the two women and Polichuk, but said they would probably be held as material witnesses.

SHOT GIVES SIGNAL FOR A ROBBER RAID

Eleven Police Inspectors Swoop Down on Three Men Accused of $2,700 Larcenies.

At a signal shot from the revolver of Police Inspector Lynch yesterday afternoon, he and ten other inspectors who had been watching in the vicinity of a cobbler shop at No. 3140 Washington street, Jamaica Plain, for four days and nights, made a rush and arrested three men. Two are charged with larceny of $2,700 worth of goods and the third with receiving part of the plunder.

Patrick J. Culhane, thirty-two years, and Charles Sidney, twenty years, each refusing to tell where he lives, were arrested in front of the cobbler's shop, charged with the larcenies.

Samuel Stone, forty-one years, a shoemaker living at No. 8 School street, Jamaica Plain, and proprietor of the cobbler's shop, is charged with the receiving part of the goods.

Horse and Wagon Stolen.

Culhane is charged with stealing on September 9 a horse and wagon, the property of Whipple & Co., No. 311 Charles street, and six bundles of leather, one bundle of stockings, 314 pairs of shoes, 5 gross of shoe laces and a roll of paper, all valued at $1,700.

Sidney is charged with stealing on September 12 a horse and wagon and seven bundles of leather, worth $1,000, from A. Towle & Co., of No. 41 Matthews street, city.

When the Whipple and Towle people made complaint to Chief Inspector McGarr he detailed a man who kept watch of places where bundles of leather might be disposed of. Finally information was gained, the police say that Culhane and Sidney had been in the neighborhood of Stone's place. Constant watch was kept. Yesterday morning a tip was received that the loot was to be removed in the afternoon.

Chief McGarr sent Inspector Lynch up there with ten men to be ready. At 3:30 the trap was sprung.

Men Changed Hats.

According to the story told at headquarters, Culhane and Sidney drove up in front of the shop in a hired rig, with a hired driver.

The two men, for some reason, changed hats, entered the shop and came out with two rolls of leather which they put in the wagon.

Then Inspector Lynch fired a shot from his revolver. Then ten other inspectors appeared from doorways and behind buildings. The neighborhood had not blossomed so with police officials since the Jamaica Plain bandit case.

Culhane and Sidney were arrested. Then Stone. In the general clatter the driver of the hired rig whipped up his horse and escaped, but the police had no charge against him, anyhow.

After getting the men the police secured two rigs and brought to headquarters a large quantity of leather, shoes, stockings and other goods which they say they found in Stone's shop.

MAYOR STOPS RUNAWAY.

Three Hurt in Chelsea; Two Taken to Hospital.

A runaway horse, which started from Franklin avenue, Chelsea, threw the driver, Max Goldstein, and his brother William from the seat of the wagon, drove a crowd to cover that was waiting for street cars in Bellingham square, ran over John Coleman of No. 17 Suffolk street, Chelsea, when he tried to stop the horse on Broadway near Fourth street, then ran a mile and was stopped by Mayor James H. Malone on Broadway.

TWO FIREMEN INJURED.

Thrown From Wagon Responding to Needless Alarm.

Two firemen were seriously hurt yesterday afternoon while responding to a needless alarm from Box 521 in Jamaica Plain. James Welch, twenty-three, of No. 11 Adams street, Roxbury, temporary driver, received severe contusions on the right shoulder and the right wrist; Lieutenant William Hart, of No. 47 Rose Clair street, Dorchester, was badly bruised on the left hip and the right shoulder.

The two weer thrown from the hose wagon of Engine 42 when it ran into a telegraph pole at the corner of Green and Washington streets.

A New Principle in Complexion Treatment

(From Society World.)

Most creams are injurious when used habitually. They clog the pores and eventually form a permanent, soggy, stifling film which interferes with eliminative action and makes the skin sickly and pasty. There is an application—mercolized wax—which acts upon an entirely different principle. While perfectly harmless, it contains active ingredients which remove by absorption the dead and half-dead particles of scarf skin, as well as unhealthy matter in the pores. Thus it takes away from instead of adding to the complexion, differing in this respect from cosmetics. The result is a perfectly natural and healthy young complexion. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store (one ounce is sufficient), is applied at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

The correct principle in the treatment of wrinkles is to tighten the skin, which naturally irons out the lines. A face bath, remarkably effective in this direction, may be made by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The funeral of Mrs. John R. McLean, who died at Bar Harbor on Monday, was held privately at 11 a. m. today, at the McLean residence, No. 1500 I street, Northwest. The body lay in state in the ball room famous for its tapestries, where Mrs. McLean had been the hostess of some of the most brilliant entertainments held in the national capital.

The choir from St. John's Episcopal Church entered from the basement, forming a procession. They marched around the foot of the casket and took their place in the smoking room. Rev. G. Livingston Bayard, chaplain of the United States Navy, who is acting as pastor of St. John's Church, in the absence of Rev. Roland S. Smith, paid a brief tribute to Mrs. McLean. The St. John's choir then sang a recessional.

The body was taken to Rock Creek Cemetery, where it was placed in the McLean mausoleum. Only relatives and a few intimate friends of the McLeans attended the funeral, which was strictly private. There were no honorary pallbearers.

RIDING TEST TOO MUCH.

Major Simpson, U. S. A. Forced to Retire from Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Major Wendell L. Simpson, Fifteenth Infantry, U. S. A., detailed in 1908 as purchasing agent in New York city for the Panama Canal Railroad, under direction of the Isthmian Canal Commission, has been retired from the army with the rank and retired pay of a lieutenant-colonel, and is expected to continue in his semi-civilian capacity.

His enforced retirement from the army after thiry-two years of service is attributed directly to the hardships of the annual riding test.

MEXICAN REVOLTOS RIOT IN CAPITAL

"Long Live Diaz! Death to Madero!" Cry Throngs on Former President's Birthday.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 14.—In a widespread, popular, but unarmed form, the revolution which for the past seven months has spread throughout Mexico, reached this capital tonight, and mobs of thousands crying "Long live Porfirio Diaz! Death to Madero!" paraded the streets, halting finally in front of the Chamber of Deputies, and demanding that President Madero be driven from the chair and the aged ex-ruler recalled from Europe to take his place.

The demonstrations followed the hissing of Madero's name in the halls of Congress by the opposition deputies during one of the heated sessions of the past week. The Congress is in session, considering the government's petition for a $50,000,000 bond issue, the proceeds to be used in putting down the revolution.

The mass of the people are opposed to this loan, as the pulic debt of the republic has increased nearly 25 per cent. since the Madero government came in on November 6, 1911.

Carrying immense framed photographs of Diaz and colored transparencies bearing his picture, leaders of the opposition to the government appeared on the streets early in the evening. Saturday is a holiday when it falls before September 15, which is the birthday of Porfirio Diaz, and the great central plaza, all the streets and the market places were filled with merry makers from all parts of the Federal district.

PELLETIER ASSAILS JUDGE CHURCHILL

Scores Him for Jailing Frail, Hungry Woman and Fining a Bigamist.

Judge Joseph R. Churchill, the sixty-seven-year-old Solomon of the Dorchester police court, who distinguished himself during the week by fining a bigamist $100 and sending an emaciated woman to Sherborn for having sold furniture bought on lease, said yesterday, when it was called to his attention that District Attorney Pelletier had rebuked police court justices for their methods, "Oh, well, Pelletier is running for office!"

"I wish to God," District Attorney Pelletier said last night at Faneuil Hall, "that Churchill had the heart to play politics!

"Churchill is a disgrace to the bench, a disgrace to the law and a disgrace to the city."

Judge Churchill, who has been on the municipal bench since 1872, was asked by the AMERICAN last night if he cared to justify himself before the storm of criticism that had come up in every quarter of the town.

Woman Said She Was Hungry.

"I don't think it proper for me to discuss my sentence," the judge said. "In fact, I don't think I ought to express an opinion on the matter. It is impossible to suit everybody."

Mrs. Mary Stanton's defence, when they arraigned her before Churchill for selling the leased furniture, was that she was facing starvation. She looked it.

The policeman who made the arrest recommended clemency.

When Judge Churchill ordered the woman to Sherborn prison an appeal was taken and Mrs. Stanton remained in jail until Friday, when the District Attorney nol prossed the case.

On Thursday along came a man—also in Judge Churchill's court—charged with having taken two wives, one living in Lynn and the other in Dorchester.

Bigamist Freed With Fine.

"I think my findings are all right," Judge Churchill said. "In some respects I thought the woman an impostor. How's that? Oh, Pelletier is running for office."

The District Attorney, speaking to a crowd of 1,400 in Faneuil Hall, "came back" vigorously.

"If I was playing politics when I made my comment," Mr. Pelletier said, I am going to play that kind of politics so long as I am District Attorney. I should not speak of the matter if Judge Churchill had not started a tirade in the newspapers.

"It seems to me that Judge Churchill does not know we have such a thing as a probation system. He is seemingly unaware, also, that the Legislature has provided for such a thing as a 'suspended sentence,' intended for just such cases as that of this unfortunate woman."

The District Attorney's references to the case of Mrs. Stanton and Matthew Connell, Lynn leather merchant, accused of bigamy, got the big applause of the night at the Faneuil Hall rally.

CITY IS LIVING HIGH.

Cost of Running Boston Is Steadily Increasing by Thousands.

Department expenditures for the first eight months of the present year show that the cost of running the city is keeping pace with the high cost of living—going up fast.

There are three city departments over which the Mayor has no control. They are the police, licensing board and school departments, and they spent $482,189.46 in excess of what was expended during the first eight months of 1911. To maintain these departments up to the first of August cost the city $4,449,374.67 in 1911 for the same eight months the figures were $3,967,185.21.

It has cost $814,597.08 more to run the 40 city departments under the control of the Mayor for the first eight months of the current year than for the same period last year. The figures are $8,511,063.35 as against $7,696,466.27 for 1911.

Susan Appleton Has Her Way

Parents Demur, but She Weds

MRS. GEORGE HAYWARD BINNEY, JR.

Vincent Club girl objected to waiting a year as her parents wished so at last they yielded and she was quietly married to Dr. Binney on Friday at the Hotel Touraine.

That was the smiling comment made at the Chilton Club yesterday, over the Back Bay tea tables and wherever society had returned to town at the news of the quiet bridal of Miss Appleton and Dr. George Binney, Jr., of No. 13 Marlboro street, Harvard '08.

The bride's friends in the Chilton Club, the Vincent Club and in the Back Bay set generally were aware that the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William Appleton, did not wish the wedding to take place yet, not for several months, possibly a year.

Dr. and Mrs. William Appleton are rich and influential. Mrs. Appleton was Nina Hargous. They are listed in the famous catalogue of the "400 Ultra-Fashionables of America" and Dr. Appleton has a string of initials after his name a column wide, showing the exclusive clubs of which he is a member.

But parental behest and Dr. Appleton's most portentious frown and Mrs. Appleton's most severe remonstrances didn't avail, according to the chatter now heard, against the highly cultivated will of Miss Susan J. Appleton, age nineteen years, and an only child.

The aforesaid society chatter puts the argument something after this fashion:

Parents Demur.

Dr. Appleton—No, your marriage is not to take place for several months. You came out only last Winter. There is plenty of time. You are not yet twenty years old.

Miss Susan—Now, father, you must give in to me. George and I love each other, and there's no reason why we shouldn't get married now, and we are going to.

And they did.

Dr. and Mrs. Appleton and Miss Susan were down at the Appleton country place at New London. They came up to town in the middle of the week and engaged a suite at the Hotel Touraine. The Appleton town house at 74 Beacon street is still "boarded up," as they say, for the Summer, and was in no shape for a bridal, quiet or otherwise.

The marriage took place at the Touraine Friday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William L. Clark, vicar of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension on Washington street, which is the mission church of Emmanuel Church on Newbury street.

The mother of the bridegroom, the Appletons and a few other relatives were present. Dr. and Mrs. Binney left on a brief honeymoon. For the present at least they will make their home at No. 74 Beacon street. Dr. Binney is a graduate of Harvard Medical and is now engaged on his duties as an interne at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Has Her Way Finally.

Only a modest announcement of the wedding was made by the bride's family yesterday, but society, knowing the determination always exercised freely by the bride, also knowing that the parents did not wish her to marry yet, have figured out that Dr. and Mrs. Appleton yielded again to their daughter's girlish will.

Last Winter, when Miss Appleton made her debut, it was said that she insisted on coming out at that time, despite her parents' wishes that her entrance to society be delayed a few months. But Miss Appleton had made up her mind to come out last Winter. She came.

TAFT AUNT DELIA'S GUEST ON BIRTHDAY

President 55 Today and He Celebrates by Visiting Miss Torrey at Millbury.

WORCESTER, Sept. 14.—President Taft, motoring to Millbury to celebrate his fifty-fifth birthday tomorrow at the home of his aunt, Miss Delia M. Torrey, stopped at Worcester this afternoon and received one of the most enthusiastic receptions ever accorded to a public man here.

Tomorrow he will quietly and with the help of some of his aunt's famous pie (which she has confessed she does not make) have a private birthday party.

The President was accompanied by his daughter, Helen, who was on her way to the Verdi-Lasell wedding at Whitinsville, and by Major Rhoads. Mayor O'Connell heard yesterday that the President was coming to this section of the State and he got busy with Julius Beauregard of the Republican City Committee to give him a fitting reception.

A committee of citizens in automobiles met the President at Shrewsbury. They escorted him to this city. The procession passed down Front street, while fully 30,000 people, waving flags, cheered the Chief Magistrate. The President doffed his straw hat and bowed his response frequently.

When the President reached City Hall he found 5,000 school children, from public and parochial schools gathered, all carrying flags. The children sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and the patriotic air was followed by great cheering.

President Taft made a ten-minute speech. It was devoid of politics. He referred to the pleasant recollections of his boyhood days at Millbury and Worcester.

"I am proud," said the President, "to be a descendant of one of the oldest families in Worcester County. I commend this city for its patriotic fervor and congratulate Mayor O'Connell on the gigantic strides in prosperity Worcester has made within my memory."

The President closed with a fervent appeal to the citizens of Worcester to be "true to the highest ideals of American citizenship."

After the meeting the President went to Millbury. Quite a crowd gathered at the home of Miss Torrey. They cheered the President. The President and his daughter later attended the Whitinsville wedding.

Opening Sale in the New Store

Proffers Values in Every One of the Thirteen Shops That Are Positively Not Duplicated in Boston

We make this assertion advisedly, appreciating fully our responsibility to our patrons. Bold-face type could add nothing to these plain statements of fact, so we refrain from using it.

Every Regular Price mentioned in these pages is the bona fide retail price at which the individual article is sold. No exaggeration in any instance, and the opening sale prices eclipse in money-saving advantages anything we have ever seen—anywhere—on similiar high qualities of merchandise. We are entirely confident you will heartily agree with us when you come tomorrow. It will be our fixed policy in all advertising announcements to under rather than over rate any article described. We want to picture to you accurately the merchandise as you will see it. We want you to find, when you come, nothing less than you expected. Our aim is that you shall not be disappointed.

Look for the style illustrations of Millinery, Suits and Gowns in the magazine section of this paper. Make note of all that appeals to you, then COME to BUTLER'S APPAREL SHOPS on Monday, and you will no doubt find just what you are looking for at a price that will please you.

This advertisement is prepared and carefully edited with this policy vividly in mind, and you may rely on the authenticity of its information as to styles, qualities and prices—absolutely.

Butler's Apparel Shops

In the Young Ladies' Shop

Third Floor, Washington Street and Corner

A shop, by the way, planned along somewhat unusual lines, to meet the particular requirement of misses ranging between the ages of 12 and 20, and we fully realize our responsibilities. The merchandise must be exceptionally trig—smart, youthful, but not too youthful. There's a fine distinction, but we believe we have provided just the things the young ladies will like.

Norfolks are popular—there's no denying that—so then, tomorrow we are going to present an opportunity to buy a very smart little model at a very large saving.

In the Blouse Shop

Second Floor, Washington Street

This shop also has been the recipient of many compliments for the wearable nature of the blouses shown. There are no eye-catching show pieces, made to look at but not to wear. Every blouse shown is practical as well as beautiful — nothing extreme, nothing freakish, either in color or design.

Tomorrow we offer some very interesting numbers, specially priced for the occasion, and call your attention to others that represent superior values at our regular price.

One of the most attractive offerings is a group of Lingerie Blouses in two styles, one an allover embroidered crepe blouse, made on simple, well tailored lines; black velvet jabot and crystal buttons. The other a daintily embroidered marquisette with lace collar and jabot. Sleeves embroidered and finished with lace frill. Both models high neck and long sleeves, a regular $3.00 value. Priced $2.00. Also a white satin striped voile blouse with hand-made lace yoke, high neck and long sleeves, finished with frill of lace at bottom. Specially priced $1.00.

An accordion plaited Chiffon Blouse in the Autumn suit shades, trimmed with self colored messaline, net yoke; a regular $7.50 value. Priced $5.00.

A few Chiffon Blouses in two styles that we do not expect to be able to duplicate again at this price. They are over lace and net, with soft cascade of lace. Both models have lace collar and trimmed sleeve—the price $3.98.

A black Shirt of heavy silk poplin, exceptionally well made, for business or mourning wear, at $2.50.

White Middy Blouses, made of heavy drilling, with navy blue flannel collar and cuffs, all sizes for school wear, at $1.00.

In the Neckwear Shop

Ground Floor.

There are so many charming bits of neckwear to see that one finds it difficult to decide which to buy—a trying position that seems to offer no alternative but to select several, and you go away pleased with the thought of the several refreshing changes they will lend to your costumes—the new styles are so different.

Tomorrow the Neckwear Shop will be a much-visited place, with these values to invite.

Celebrated Blackstone Ruffling, sleeve and Robespierre widths, Cream and Ecru, value up to 75c Yard, 25c.

Their real value is $20.00; an opportunity that will not present itself again at this price, $9.98.

In the Costume Shop

Fourth Floor

Paris model gowns at lower prices than one would be required to pay in Paris, because of the fact that they are part of our Fashion Service, is a feature of the Costume Shop that should certainly prove interesting to every woman who prefers the imported above the American reproductions. Paris, of course, is the source of all our own fashion ideas, but all Parisian models do not necessarily represent the last word in Fashion.

The famous Paris dressmakers create designs, but it remains with the fashionable set of Paris to say what shall or shall not be accepted as the style idea for the season. Before selecting our gowns we waited until the trend of style was clearly defined, and those on display we know to be absolutely authentic.

Our stunning American productions express the "style trend" with absolute fidelity, a fact which makes selection in this shop safer from the viewpoint of correct style than would be the case in Paris shops during the height of the season.

Then, of course, the difference in cost is worth considering.

In the Dress Shop

Fourth Floor, Washington Street Annex and Corner

Special Offerings in Afternoon Gowns

A new model accordion plaited chiffon afternoon dress (Velour effect plaiting), yoke of shadow lace and finished with crushed belt and sash. $21.75 value, for $16.50.

Serge Dresses Specially Priced

Two smart models in serge dresses. The serge is of a mannish texture of good color and guaranteed to be fully shrunk. The waist of one model is made with lap-over pointed Gibson effect, with contrasting shades of piping, the skirt to harmonize. Plush cuffs and collar give a smart touch to this tailored style. Another model has new lapped effect skirt trimmed with moire buttons. Waist to match, with small moire and velour vesting and standing collar. The color combinations are navy and amber, navy and white, navy and green, black and white, also plain navy and plain black. These are $15.00 dresses, and when you see them there will be no question on that point. Our price tomorrow $10.50.

Dancing Frocks for Less

Misses and small women who are looking for something new and charming to add to their Fall wardrobe will be pleased and profited by this unusual offering. Here are a number of entirely new models in dancing frocks that we believe you will like.

Charmeuse Dresses, excellent quality and attractive, simple style. Lace jabot at neck and crushed girdle at belt, with sash. Black, taupe and navy. Assortment of sizes, $13.50.

Misses' Dresses for School

We have a reason for calling your attention to these two groups other than a desire to sell them; they represent the sort of values that make many friends. The first is a little French Botany Serge dress in navy and brown with satin Robespierre collar or braid trimmed, at $5.75. We should like you to see them. Another model is of storm serge in the new coat style; another made with high neck, piped collar with ratine trimming and piping of silk, and still others with fancy touches here and there that lend youthfulness to their lines—and the price is so little as—$7.50.

A $13.50 Misses' Serge Dress for $10.50

This is still further evidence of our ability to provide better values in really good merchandise. A dress of fine quality mannish serge with sailor collar of silk, trimmed with white pearl and velvet button—well tailored in every detail; colors taupe, wine, brown, navy, black and copenhagen—for $10.50.

For Maids' Wear

WASHINGTON AND WINTER STREETS

Opening Sale in the New Store

We have been the happy recipients of congratulations from all sides upon the appearance of our new store and the high standard of its merchandise. We wish to express our deepest appreciation and thanks to one and all for the many kindly words of commendation and good will with which we have been generously showered during these past few days. We can assure our host of friends, old and new, that we shall untiringly bend our whole effort to live up to the best ideals of merchandising that we may continue to deserve their confidence and regard.

The Opening Sale to be inaugurated tomorrow will prove substantial evidence of our determination in this respect. Every dollar's worth of merchandise, of course, is fresh and new. The truly remarkable values offered embrace only the most fashionable and worthy articles of apparel wanted at the moment. The comparative prices given tell truthfully of the amounts to be saved on every item specially priced. We have set out to win your unqualified approval. Have we started right?—We think you will say yes tomorrow.

Butler's Apparel Shops

In the Millinery Shop

Second Floor—Main and Winter St. Annex

Among our present showing, and on the way, are models by Talbot, Jeanne Lanvin, Lambert, Bernheim, Evelyn Veron, Reboux and Louison, Georgette, Carlier and others of equal note.

These Paris creations sound the fashion note of the season. They are the inspiration for our own clever designers, and we know now that, beautiful and magnificent though these originals be, our own productions will reach the feminine heart with equal certainty.

On the opening days, on every hand, we heard expressions such as: "Aren't they lovely!" "Isn't that sweet!" "Oh! I think that is so becoming!" and other exclamations even more enthusiastic, as group after group was examined. And they were not expensive hats, either. The $5.00 group came in for much of the pleased comment. Many were the surprised expressions at the remarkable values shown. But that is not surprising to us, for 25 years we have held steadfastly to our policy to design and trim our $5.00 hats with the same degree of skill and workmanship exercised in the production of the higher-priced models. The result is that a great many people of New England have come to realize that Butler's $5.00 hats cannot be approached in Boston.

Our splendid new Millinery Shop so far outstrips the old in point of size and equipment, that we set ourselves confidently to the task of tripling our millinery business this year.

Of one thing you may rest assured—we will never permit a hat to be shown, at any price, that is not authoritative in style and perfect in detail of workmanship.

Untrimmed Hats

Almost the entire second floor, main, is devoted to untrimmed shapes. Among the imported styles are the large, flat effects, so fashionable this Fall, in plush with velvet underbrims, shown in black, seal brown, taupe and purple. The new Niniche, shapes of plush with velvet underbrims, in black, white, purple and brown.

Trimmings Section

Here you will find all the requisites for the making of Fashion's latest creations; black and white aigrettes of a style to produce those sweeping effects drooping over the brim, so much in vogue; imported narrow breasts in all the new shades for use in the new brim trimmings; beautiful aigrettes in black and white for bow effects; others with different colored birds' heads attached; imported Dahlias in the new shades of purple and cerise for side effects; Camellias, in white, pink and cerise; imported single velvet roses, in white, pink, rose and the new cerise shades; imported single roses of velvet and satin, in old rose and the new fuchsia colorings; velvet berries, greatly favored for children's hats, in small clusters of green, royal, cerise and old rose.

In the Shoe Shop

Second Floor—Corner

The styles, the qualities, the values are here, so is it any wonder that the shoe shop became a busy place the very opening day and has grown busier each succeeding day.

Here the footwear needs of women, girls and boys are being supplied in that thoroughgoing Butler fashion that everybody seems to appreciate.

We have unswerving confidence in being able to please the most critical, because we have drawn solely upon the resources of the best manufacturers in the country.

We are certain that Boston has never seen a finer showing of footwear and all at such reasonable prices. But the real opening, however, is to be tomorrow, when the word "reasonable" will be inadequate to describe special prices announced for the occasion.

Butler's Apparel Shops

In the Underwear Shop

Ground Floor

Almost from the moment the doors of the new store opened, interested groups of women began to congregate about the tables upon which were displayed those dainty bits of feminine apparel so dear to the heart of every woman, and when they saw they bought. There were no price cards displayed—nothing to attract but the merchandise.

It merely proved that quality is recognized and appreciated without the aid of price-ticket allurements. We haven't boasted about giving unusual values—we have simply given them.

Some of the values:

Cotton Underwear

Petticoat Section

In the matter of style we are prepared to meet all requirements. But the news of greatest interest just now is that there will be values—rather surprising values—for those who visit us early tomorrow.

A large manufacturer over-estimated his outlet for this season, and we happened along about the time he was wondering what in the world to do with the overstock. We simplified matters by agreeing to take them—at a price.

So, then, tomorrow a goodly number of cotton taffetas, moreens, glorias, halcyon, messalines, gloria tops with taffeta silk flounces and all silk messalines, all cut on the newest lines and worth at retail up to $2.98, will be priced 98c.

A $35.00 Rug for $18.85

One of the Many Marvelous Anniversary Bargains

People wonder how we give such wonderful Rug Values. For seven years we have undersold the other stores. Siegel United Four-Store Purchasing Power enabled us to do this. Today our business is so big that we fix the prices—not the mills. And we are selling Rugs at lower prices than ever—giving bigger and better values all the time.

Kinemaco Pictur

Many more are now identical pictures in their stores, but you are requested to do is to come to the 4th floor and ask for a ticket or tickets, which are free of charge. These tickets are given out with merchandise. They are given out with

Mr. Henry Siegel believes that there is something more than merely material in these entertainment and provide entertainment and provide for the children. Never before has there been the exhibition of Kinemacolor in Boston, and it is the action of the Anniversary Sale that has brought it about by lowering drop curtains in the Auditorium of the Siegel House. About 200 people can be accommodated at one time. The motion pictures are then shown in all their natural colors.

The Kinemacolor pictures are entirely different from those at the moving picture theatres, as they are not as fatiguing to the eyes as the ordinary moving picture, as science can make them. The Kinemacolor motion pictures produced in the natural colors by the application of chemistry to the diffraction of chlorophyll by the sun's rays are clear and the action of the tragedies common to the ordinary moving picture, are shown.

We ask no exaggerating when we say that every parent of a school child to be present at the Kinemacolor Motion Pictures. Each one will be given for a limited period, but will be here indefinitely, and will be changed weekly. You should attend the first exhibition and bring your children, or you will be provided with tickets for all.

Here is the program for the week:

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 14th, 17th and 18th.

YACHTING AT KIEL—The famous Kiel regatta, showing the sea, the sky and the various interesting vessels attending; real yachting scenes, showing the wind blowing and beautiful beyond description.

MRS. JENKINS SUES ALLEN FOR $218,000

Detective Agency Co-Defendants in Suit Brought by Former Friend.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Helen F. Jwelle Jenkins, the former friend of Nathan Allen, a Wisconsin leather manufacturer, and who made the smuggling complaint to the government as the result of which Allen has just paid $100,000 in settlement of a government suit, has died a complaint in the Supreme Court against Allen and members of the Mooney & Boland Detective Agency to recover property valued at $218,000.

Mrs. Jenkins alleges that she was the owner of 102 shares of stock in the Southern Coal Company worth $81,000, two promissory notes for $45,000 made by John R. Collins, who was indicted in the smuggling case with Allen; an oil painting by Schreyer, worth $10,000; pearl earrings, valued at $10,000, and a pearl necklace, valued at $72,000. The jewelry was part of the gems smuggled into the country by Allen for Mrs. Jenkins.

Governor and Mayor Solve High Milk Cost

Not a Cow in Sight on 151-Mile Ride; Bay State Must Have More Cows.

To ride 151 miles through Massachusetts and not see a cow seems incredible, but Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald did it yesterday.

It was on the way from Pittsfield to Boston. The Governor and Mayor had breakfasted on buttermilk and crackers and boarded the 5:30 a. m. train for Boston. They had campaigned the night before through the Berkshires.

"Notice the absence of cattle and it is little wonder that the price of milk is high," cried the Mayor.

Then the Governor and Mayor noticed. They peered out of the car windows for miles and miles looking for a cow with as much assiduousness as Diogenes searched for an honest man. No bovines were in sight nor did they see any cattle until the train reached Boston.

"Something ought to be done to encourage the farmers to raise more cattle or the price of milk will soon be prohibitive," said the Mayor.

And the Governor agreed that something should be done and promised to take the matter up with the State Board of Agriculture.

HAS NEW PLAN FOR SCHOOL LUNCHEONS

Miss Jessie Barber Makes Brockton Domestic Science Classes Self-Supporting.

BROCKTON, Sept. 14.—The thirteen hundred students at the high school don't care about the high cost of living problem that is giving the wage-earner so much trouble. And the reason is Miss Jessie Barber.

Miss Barber is a Newton woman and has charge of the domestic science department of the high school. Miss Barber has hit upon a scheme that has solved the school lunch question and which, no doubt, will be copied the country over.

The material for the domestic science department at the high school has cost the city a lot of money in years past. It will cost nothing this year.

During the past few years, when foodstuffs have cost so much more, many students were forced to go without the mid-day lunch. Many students, in fact the majority of them, are the sons and daughters of poor people, who have all they can do to support their families. Miss Barber has so arranged things that even the poorest student may be in a position to have something to eat.

She buys nothing but the best.

Her various classes prepare different foodstuffs, and as a result the classes as a whole provide an entire menu each day.

Her classes not only prepare the food, but also make the aprons and other apparel used in the lunch room.

She has arranged matters so that over 1,300 pupils are served in thirty minutes—more than forty-five a minute. There is no crowding of confusion.

Lunches are sold at practically cost and there is no waste.

Only the most nutritious foods are dispensed.

Confectionery is not sold. Cookies are unknown in the school. The girls are disappointed when they are told that pickles and limes are not carried in stock.

She hopes to have an agricultural class later. Then the food left over could be fed to the hens, thus establishing the complete circle.

Sample of the Menu.

A sample of the menu:

Welsh rarebit, 4 cents; sweet corn, 4 cents; milk, glass, 3 cents; cocoa, cup, 4 cents; ice cream, large, 5 cents; Mocha cakes, 4 cents; coffee rolls, 3 cents; coffee roll and milk, 5 cents; ham sandwiches, 5 cents; jam sandwiches, 5 cents; lettuce sandwiches, 5 cents; tomato and cucumber salad, 5 cents.

The ham sandwich proposition is a money loser, but the loss is made up on other articles. It takes twenty-five loaves of bread per day to make the sandwiches; fifteen dozen Mocha cakes are used; fifteen dozen coffee rolls; thirty-five quarts of milk; one ham; one large jar of jam; five pounds of butter and eight gallons of ice cream.

Miss Barber says she believes girls should know not only how to cook, sew and keep house, but should also know something about agriculture. "I think the boys should know how to cook also," said Miss Barber.

BROCKTON TEACHER, WHO HAS SOLVED VEXING PROBLEM

VEGETABLES SOLD AFTER LAWN PARTY

Several thousand persons attended the lawn party of the Melrose Horticultural and Improvement Society, held on the Farwell estate on West Emerson street, Melrose, yesterday afternoon and last evening.

It was the annual harvest show of the society. No hall in the city was large enough to house exhibits of flowers, fruits and vegetables, so the affair was held under large circus tents. In the evening an auction sale was held, several hundred dollars being derived, which is to be used to beautify the city, and in furthering the children's garden work next season.

In the children's garden classes the Lincoln School won first prize for school gardens. For vegetables the school children winners were Louis Segal, Frank P. Brown, Theodore Judkins and a special cup to Boynton Fletcher for an exhibit of gourds. For garden flowers, the children winning prizes were Joseph Donaher, Katherine Meehan and Mildred Meehan. In the wild flower collections, Albert J. Davidson, with 180 named varieties, won first prize, and the other two went to Joseph Donaher and Elsie C. Carter.

The other special prizes were awarded to the following: Vegetables, Philip B. Carter and Miss Clara Davidson; apples, Rev. Otto E. Duerr; artistic vases of flowers, Mrs. Lester Williams, Mrs. Abbey R. Copeland and Mrs. F. H. Brown; table decorations, Mrs. Lester Williams, Mrs. Abbey S. Copeland and Mrs. John Gray; lilies, Mrs. Julian C. Woodman; gladioli, E. L. Kirk; dahlias, P. A. Mansfield; perennial flox, Mrs. Julian C. Woodman.

Mrs. Julian C. Woodman was general chairman in charge of the affair.

"Yum," Says Mayor In Re Stuffed Potatoes

Implores Mrs. Fitzgerald to Serve Them for Today's Sunday Dinner.

Stuffed potatoes. Ever hear of them? They're a new dish Mayor Fitzgerald recommends most highly.

He's tried them, so he knows. He liked them so well the first time that Mrs. Fitzgerald has been implored to have them on the table for today's Sunday dinner.

Mrs. J. H. Gordon, of No. 14 Vaughn street, Dorchester, is responsible for the recipe.

The Mayor tried it out himself before he consented to let newlyweds and the general public in on how to cook the common "spud" in a delectable style. Here's the recipe:

Take six cold baked potatoes, remove from the shells, mash through a ricer, add one egg, piece of butter size of an egg, salt and pepper to taste, beat well, place in shells and bake till brown.

Sounds as though a little work according to directions would make a very tasty dish. And the Mayor and Mrs. Gordon assert that it does.

Banker Hayden Gives Ball for Mrs. Wilson

Colonel Charles Hayden of Hayden, Stone & Company, the Boston bankers, and a member of the Nahant Summer colony, gave a dinner dance at the club last evening in honor of Mrs. H. T. Wilson of Newport.

A bal masque followed the dinner.

Many of the women wore fancy costumes. Seventy-five guests were present. The banquet began at 6 o'clock and dancing was kept up till midnight. Stiles' Band furnished the music.

Mrs. Wilson came accompanied by a party of friends from Beverly Farms and Pride's Crossing.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lovering of Boston and Nahant, J. B. FOR DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR OR ITCHY SCALP---25-CENT "DANDERINE"

Save your hair! Danderine destroys dandruff and stops falling hair at once—Grows hair, we prove it.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous you must use Danderine, because nothing else accomplishes so much for the hair.

Just one application of Knowlton's Danderine will double the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, don't hesitate, but get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now? A 25-cent bottle will truly amaze you.

MIKADO'S BODY NOW IN KIOTO MAUSOLEUM

Actual Interment Takes Place Tomorrow; Villagers Bear Body to Tomb.

KIOTO, Japan, Sept. 14.—Borne first on a twentieth century train 350 miles from the capitol of Japan to this ancient and sacred city, and thence carried on the shoulders of fifty Yase farmers, dressed in the costumes of their forefathers, of half a thousand years ago, the body of Emperor Mutsuhito lies tonight within the massive mausoleum erected during the life of the dead ruler on Monyama Hill.

Tomorrow morning the ton and a half casket will be lowered within the marble vaule, the bronze doors will be sealed for all time, and Mutsuhito will be asleep with his ancestors. Half a mile away rises the stone tomb of Emperor Kwammu, who was gathered to his fathers a thousand years ago this month, while all down the slopes of the hill to where the chrysanthemum carpeted plain stretches away for four miles to the rim of Kioto itself, are other tombs.

The special train, composed of a huge locomotive, covered with funeral flags, the funeral car and four passenger coaches, left Aoyama where last night's shinto services were held, this morning.

White Silk Draperies.

The interior of the funeral car was divided into three compartments in the central one of which, lined and draped with snow white silk, stood the coffin. The outside of the car was painted a brilliant red, while a door had been let into the side, large enough to permit the entrance and removal of the huge ten by five foot casket.

Arrived here, the Yase villagers took the casket of their beloved ruler on their shoulders, and for hours trudged silently along the straight, stone paved road which leads from Kioto to Monoyama Hill. Behind the cortege walked Prince and Princess Kanin, representing Emperor Yoshihito and the Empress Sadko; Princess Higashifushimi, who represented the dowager Empress, holders of orders of merit, ministers of state, officers of the army and navy and many men high in the nation.

At the entrance to the great marble tomb, the Shinto priests took charge of the ceremonies, and their chanted prayers floated out over a vast throng gathered before the mausoleum.

The casket was set on a dais, two feet above the floor, covered with a pall of crimson silk. On the coffin itself rests the flag of Japan, while at the head and foot are the votive offerings of incense set by the ritualist priests of the Shinto faith.

Thus the body will remain until dawn of Sunday when the services of actual burial will begin, and the lips of the white, marble vault, will close forever on all that is mortal of him who is known as the "Emperor of the Era of Enlightenment."

Yoshihito, the new Emperor of Japan, prostrated by grief by the death of the late Mikado, Mutsihito, his father, and by the tragic death of the Count and Countess Nogi, who killed themselves with same sword, is expected to issue an imperial ukase in the near future prohibiting the practice of hari kari.

On hearing of the suicides of General Nogi and his wife during the progress of the funeral of the Emperor it is reported from different parts of the Empire that several of the men who fought under him at Port Arthur and Mukden also took their lives by the same method.

JORDAN WILL GO TO DEATH CELL TUESDAY

It Is Planned to Transfer Him from East Cambridge Jail After Spencer's Death.

If the grim schedule of the law, as it now stands, is carried out without change, Chester S. Jordan will be transferred from East Cambridge Jail to the death house in Charlestown State Prison, Tuesday morning, following the execution of Bertram G. Spencer.

Spencer will be executed soon after midnight Monday, according to the present intention. With no hope of commutation in sight, he will go to the electric chair at that time.

Deputy Warden N. B. Allen, who is in charge of the State prison in the absence of Warden Bridges, proposes to have Jordan kept at East Cambridge until Spencer has made his final journey from the death cell.

Then, as soon as decent and fitting, Jordan will be brought over from East Cambridge and be placed in one of the three death cells.

Posibly Jordan will be confined in the same cell that Spencer will have so recently vacated—the same cell, too, that Clarence V. T. Richeson occupied till he was led to the chair.

Jordan's Last Journey.

The presumption is, therefore that Jordan will be taken from East Cambridge jail in a closed vehicle next Tuesday morning, across the Charles and over to the State Prison, his last journey on this earth.

Jordan is sentenced to be executed within the week beginning September 22, next Sunday. He is to die for the murder of his wife, Honora Jordan, four years ago. Since he was convicted he has occupied the same cell at East Cambridge.

While relatives have been straining every nerve for his commutation and while counsel have invoked, in vain, the highest tribunal in the land, Jordan has taken his situation calmly. He has actually put on flesh, instead of worrying himself thin. He now weights 220 pounds.

A Model Prisoner.

Sheriff John R. Fairbarn of the jail calls Jordan his model prisoner. The Sheriff and his subordinates have marvelled at Jordan's calm demeanor, especially as the shadow of the chair falls broader and deeper athwart his path.

The final move of Jordan's counsel has been to appeal for commutation on the ground of insanity. But, with no meeting of the Executive Council called till September 25, the inference is that Governor Foss does not plan to intervene, even to the extent of presenting the petition to the Council.

And Jordan seems the least interested of any one in the case. He reads his Christian Science text books and papers, the same as Spencer does, and awaits the end in outward peace.

FIRST WIFE READY TO CONFRONT GRACE

Woman Says Alleged Slayer of Wrestler Deserted Her.

Mrs. Anthony W. Grace, who says she was married six years ago to the man accused of killing his brother, Jack Grace, the wrestler, is in Walden, N. Y., today, ready to face her husband at the inquest when it is resumed tomorrow.

In her Walden home another wife of the alleged slayer of his brother is under the care of a physician following the revelation that her husband is said to have been married three times before the ceremony that united him to her. The girl returned alone from her wedding trip after Grace had gone back to face the charge against him, to learn that the man who had married her the day before was accused of killing Jack Grace. The young woman collapsed then, and is in a dangerous condition.

In addition to the wife in Fall River, who has been supporting her three children for three years since Grace left her, he is said to have married in Lowell, and again in Boston. Search is being kept up in East Boston for a woman said to be one of Grace's wives.

The police have a new clew in the case, dispatches from Walden say. A bloodstained shirt was found in an ash barrel in the main street of the village. The authorities contend that was the bundle Tony Grace was seen carrying from the Twentieth Century Athletic Club, where Jack Grace's body was found at 5:30 Sunday morning.

A photograph of Tony Grace has been received from Fall River by Chief of Police Rona, of Walden, and he says it is that of the prisoner. In Walden, Grace was known as William. It was under that name he married the girl who is at home again now, in despair. She says she trusted Grace.

When first told of her husband's arrest the bride screamed:

"I don't believe it. You are not telling me the truth. Bring my Bill back to me, I love him."

She is so affected fear is felt for her reason.

In Lowell Grace, it is thought, is the man known there as Arthur William Brooks, and wanted on charges of bigamy and desertion.

BALLINGTON BOOTH IN PULPIT TONIGHT

He Talks Enthusiastically of His Organization's New Home for Destitute Children.

General Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America, is in Boston. Today he will inspect the organization's new home for destitute children in Malden. This evening he will preach in the Warren Avenue Baptist Church.

"Whatever branch of benevolence may fail to appeal to the average citizens' heart," he said last night, "we are quite sure that any effort that provides a homelike home for homeless children will not lack the sympathy and well-wishes of all who have anything to do with children, for every child who is helped to become better, and thus insure the promise of a better future citizen, is another stone in the structure of society that will stand as a memorial to the patient builders in the children's cause.

"As to the rest of our work, we are growing all along the lines. In the last sixteen years we have spread over nearly all the civilized world. We try to make a refined appeal to intelligent men and woman. Our aim is not so much to attract the attention of crowds or to do a temporary work, for the influence of help which is temporary soon passes away. Where a man is in need we look after his physical well-being first, and then try to reform the man himself. If you can get to the man himself, you can change him so that he will be able to better his own environment and character."

SIR T. OLIVER COMING.

Noted English Physican to Be Entertained Here.

Medical men in this city are making elaborate preparations to entertain Sir Thomas Oliver, M. D., a noted physician of England, who is on his way to this country to read a paper before the Hygiene Congress at Washington next week. One of the luncheons in his honor will be given by President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard.

Mayor Lives Up to His $15 Declaration

Among fifty or more increases in pay, granted yesterday to city employes, one is in line with Mayor Fitzgerald's declaration that a city workman ought not to get less than $15 a week in these days of high cost of living.

This one is the case of James O'Toole, promoted from a teamster at $2.25 a day to be a paver at $3 a day. Thus O'Toole jumps from the $13.50 class to the $18 class, figuring on a six-day week basis.

The other increases in pay are of men all getting $15 a week or more in the first place, with few exceptions.

Mary E. Maloney, stenographer at Long Island Hospital, is raised from $40 per month to $50.

The new Marine Aquarium provides a couple of more jobs. Patrick J. Gorman as engineer at $1,200 a year, and Howard Nelson as attendant at $17.50 per week.

PLAN BIG DISPLAY AT ELECTRIC SHOW

Greater and more elaborate electrical effects than Boston ever saw are promised for the 1912 Boston Electric Show, which opens in Mechanics Building September 28, to continue to October 26. This will be a longer run for the show than has previously been arranged. Preparations for the 1912 exhibition have been in progress for two years. tI will be under the management of Herbert W. Moses, chief of the bureau of welfare work of the Boston Edison Company.

CARED FOR 87 BABIES.

Fine Record of Bonnie Bairns Summer Hospital at Cohasset.

COHASSET, Sept. 14.—The Bonnie Bairns Summer Hospital for sick children has closed its eleventh season with the best record yet made. There were eighty-seven sick babies cared for against eighty-five last year. The doctors and the management give due credit to Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Barron, who three years ago built a model creamery and enlarged their cow herd to produce certified milk for this hospital and the babies of the South Shore. Outside the hospital not a babe or child in Cohasset under two years of age has died thus far this year. Mr. Barron had to double his herd the past year to meet the demand.

Your Vacation Snapshots

Deserve to be taken to Riker-Jaynes, where special pains are taken to bring out the best in each photograph.

What you, perhaps, lack in knowledge of proper timing of exposure, proper focusing, proper distancing, will be made up to a great extent by the proper treatment in developing and the selection of the right paper to bring out tone, expression and detail.

Prompt work and reasonable prices.

For instance: We will develop a roll of films of 6 exposures, 2¼x3¼, for 10c.

Will print on velox for 4c each, and will mount for 1c each additional.

DOG ATTACKS POLICE WHO ARREST MASTER

"Jerry" Rides in Wagon, Lands in Cell and Growls When Owner Is Fined.

Jerry, a bulldog, owned by Clarence I. Higgins of No. 85 Dearborn street, Lynn was praised yesterday for his loyalty.

Higgins was arrested by Patrolman Flan of Chelsea. It was charged that he was disorderly. But Jerry did not like it. The dog grabbed the patrolman by the leg a la Swinnerton's Violet, colored funny pages of the Sunday AMERICAN.

They hurled Higgins into a patrol wagon. Jerry leaped in after him. When they placed Higgins in a cell at the station house, Jerry insisted on going with him and he was accommodated.

TO PROBE DISCHARGE OF 28 JEWISH GIRLS

They Remained Away from Lynn Shoe Factory During Jewish Holidays.

A thorough investigation will be made by organized labor concerning the discharge of twenty-eight Jewish girls employed in the packing room of the Allen, Foster & Whitt Shoe Company in Lynn yesterday.

M. J. Tracy, secretary of the United Shoe Workers of America, one of the most powerful organizations connected with the shoe industry, announced last night that he would lay it up to the managers of the shoe concern. Member and ascertain why the girls were discharged and determine whether they are being discriminated against.

Twenty-eight young girls were discharged, it is alleged, because they remained away from the factory during the Jewish holidays of last week.

Frederick Allen, a member of the firm, admits that the girls were discharged, but denies that the firm draws a religious issue. In explaining the matter Mr. Allen said:

"In a shoe factory one department is dependent upon another. The girls worked in the packing room and were capable of packing more than 1,000 pairs of shoes a day. They remained out, and as a result impaired the work of other places. It is a rule in our factory that an employe must have a good reason for remaining away from the factory without notice."

The Pakers' Union, which is affiliated with the United Shoe Workers of America, held a secret meeting last night to discuss the affair.

Filene's

In Dainty, Cheerful Little Specialty Shops, Where Right Serving is Reduced to a Science—

Real College Clothes for Real College Girls

PRELIMINARY "exams" of these school togs were finished some weeks ago. The roll is complete. From plume for saucy head to boot for pretty toes everything is here, ready, right. Not only right as to style. Right as to worthiness. Not only right, new.

Good, sturdy New England products as a rule, with running through the whole style scheme the indefinable touch of the Parisian.

Herewith is a word of particulars. But how futile is cold type when it comes to telling a school girl what to put into that wonderful going-away trunk of hers!

Misses' Filene Coats

Filene misses' coats are built on girlish lines in simple, good styles. Sturdy and warm materials that stand hard school wear. Collars button high about the throat or can be left open. Sleeves are wide and long, and coats are cut full to allow easy, free movements.

At $12.50 are practical school coats of all wool Scotch mixtures, tweeds, diagonal cheviots. Double or single breasted.

At $15 are plain, man-tailored coats of blue or brown cheviot. Collars that fit and revers that hold their shape. Belted backs or belts all around.

At $18.50 a girl may select unusually good coats of cheviots, mixtures, tweeds, homespuns, boucles and zibeline. Belted backs, strapped cuffs and big patch pockets.

At $22.50, $25, $29.50, coats of mixtures, English tweeds, chinchillas. Woolly zibelines and boucle in stripes.

Coats in new and attractive trimmed styles, $10 to $75. Sizes 14 to 18 years.

At $29.50, $33.50, $35, $37.50 and upwards, new coats for street, motor and semi-evening wear.

School & College Dresses

Practical, service-giving dresses of which a girl won't tire. Serges prevail and most girls like the sailor or Norfolk styles. Easy to slip into just two minutes before chapel. Comfortable to study in, too. Sailor suits in black or navy blue serge with white or red braid trimmings. One or two pieces.

Pleated or gored skirts with yokes, $15 to $25.

Norfolk sailor suits, $18.50.

Black serge Norfolk dresses for convent wear, $8.75.

Many simple little cloth dresses at $7.50, $10, $12.50, $15, $18.50 and $22.50. With embroidered collars and cuffs, military styles or braid trimmings. Many styles that possess individuality and charm.

Younger Girls' Dresses

ONE section is devoted to dresses for girls of six to fourteen years. Individual and distinctive fashions for school and dress-up wear as well as real party frocks.

Washable or regulation dresses, serge norfolks and simple cloth school dresses, $1 to $22.50.

Convent dresses of serge, black or blue, $5.85 to $12.

Velvet and corduroy dresses, $12.50 to $22.

Party frocks, $7.50 to $50.

Misses' Tailored Suits

Suits with an unusual degree of individuality. We have not simply taken what the manufacturer had to offer. We have "built" suits, no detail being too small for attention.

Linings are guaranteed to wear two seasons. Most suits have silk-covered shields. Collars fit snugly and skirts hang well. Each suit is built for girlish figures. Not women's suits "cut down" to girls' sizes.

There's a new "London town" Norfolk for the school girl this year. The belt is rather high, and it has all the good Norfolk style. $18.50.

Also at $18.50 tailored suits in cutaway and straight semi-fitted styles, some with belted backs. Blue or black cheviots, serges, diagonals, gray and brown mixtures and soft boucle cloths.

Smart suits at $22.50, $29.50 upward. Sizes 14, 16, 18 years.

Filene School Waists

To wear with tailored suits most girls like smart tailored shirts. Many schools and colleges specify that all-white shirts be worn.

Particular attention has been given to white shirts at $2. Well cut, properly tailored styles of linen, cotton, corduroys, pique or madras. Regular set-in sleeve with soft collar and cuffs. Other tailored shirts, $1, $1.50 and $3.

Silk shirts start at $2.75. At that price new shirt blouses. Slip over the head. Soft collar and roll back cuffs. Tiny rose, blue or amber crystal buttons and white or colored ties. Silk shirts at $5 are of brown, blue, or black and white striped silk.

Hand-embroidered linen shirts, $6.50 to $10.

Tailored and Dress Hats

In our Girls' Millinery Shop are practical knockabout felts she wears on the daily tramp, or to twon some days. Sailor and soft crush styles with just a ribbon band or soft satin ornament, $1.95, $3, $3.95.

At $5 soft wool felts like velours, charming shades of blue, rose, brown as well as black. Feather ornaments and soft ribbon shirrings or taffeta trimmings.

At $8.50 Austrian velours in smart shapes, soft blues, browns, tans. Feather trimmings.

At $10 two-toned velours.

Filene Corsets For Growing Girls

A correctly corsetted girl grows to a healthy, well-poised woman.

This phase of corset fitting and designing is the subject of special care and study in the girls' corset shop on the Fourth floor. Careful fittings are given and proper adjustments made.

The first corset is of tapes, yielding to the movement and position of the body. No side steels but soft bones in front. $1.

At $1 is a corset for the very slender little figure. Cording is used instead of side bones. This corset controls the figure yet allows perfect freedom. The same type corset is built for the very tall, slender girl.

A dainty corset for the school girl is $3. The bone over the hip is shortened so that there is no pressure on the hip bone, yet a good waist line is preserved. Soft, pliable and well-made, daintily finished.

Girls' Filene Petticoats

Good petticoats are first aid to proper skirt hanging. They are slim, straight little affairs, these petticoats that go under autumn school dresses.

Petticoats of sateen, halycon cloth or heatherbloom, black or colors. Belts are adjustable by snap fasteners, making them fit smoothly. Pleated flounces. 98c to $1.95.

LAWRENCE AND LOWELL GIVE FOSS OVATION

Governor Cheered as He Denounces Mill Owners for Violating Spirit of Law.

URGES JUSTICE FOR ALL

"What Has Pelletier Done That He Should Be Nominated?" Asks Mayor Fitzgerald.

LOWELL, Sept. 14.—To the applause of one of the biggest gatherings of Democrats Lowell has ever known in Associate Hall tonight, Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston declared that Joseph C Pelletier "has yet to give one good reason why he should be substituted by his party for Governor Foss."

"In Boston," Mr. Fitzgerald said, "Pelletier has opposed Democratic candidates more frequently than he has supported them."

Chairman Thomas P Riley was not a bit more relentless than the Mayor in his handling of Pelletier. "In the Fitzgerald-Hibbard fight," Judge Riley said, "Pelletier was on the Hibbard board of strategy."

Thomas H Dowd of Roxbury did not mention the District Attorney of Suffolk by name but he did point out, to those who say the Governor should have given all the offices to Democrats, as Governor Woodrow Wilson gave them, that Woodrow Wilson has not been embarrassed by a Governor's Council, composed of five Republicans and one Democrat.

Big Reception to Foss.

Governor Foss got the most magnificent reception he has received anywhere this fall.

Not once did the Governor allude to Mr Pelletier, even by inference. The Governor's address was an impartial review of what he has been able to accomplish at the State House, what there remains to be done, and what he hopes to do on his reelection.

In Lawrence the Governor referred to the recent strike. He said:

"The recent strike among the operatives of the Lawrence mills resulted in a great victory for labor; the mill owners were clearly in the wrong, and their acceptance of the operatives' claims is an admission of that fact. That strike was settled in conformity with Massachusetts laws, as the Elevated strike was settled. In the Lawrence strike it was the spirit of the law that had been violated. Two years previously the Legislature had declared that fifty-six hours, instead of fifty-eight, should constitute a week's work. The mill owners had accepted that decision, and they made no reduction in wages.

Scores Mill Owners.

"But last winter, when a week's work for women and children was defined by the legislature as fifty-four hours, the mill owners reduced wages without even posting a notice of their intention to do so, although they had had long notice that the fifty four hour law would go into effect on a certain date.

"This strike brought out another very important matter, in regard to the tariff and its effect on wages. The operatives in the textile mills had not been receiving the benefit of the tariff, although the one argument for a high tariff is that it increases wages. In the textile mills as in many other highly protected industries, the wage scale is much lower than in industries which receive very little, if any, protection.

"The tariff is to be the dominant issue in this year's election all over the country, and the recent events at Lawrence have clearly shown that we must demand an all-around reduction of the tariff, to reduce the price of the necessities of life and so increase the purchasing power of the working man's dollar.

"The Lawrence strike is now settled. It remains now only, as an obvious duty for the law officers of the Commonwealth and county to sift out all charges of conspiracy that have been made against the mill owners, and apply punishments if guilt is proved.

For State Control.

"Another matter of great importance to Lawrence, and in fact to the entire State, is the improvement of our transportation service, and the establishment of a powerful State control over this public service. We must make the railroads obey the spirit, as well as the letter of our laws, and create adequate powers to secure the enforcement of these laws. We

"Horse Trot" Latest Dance at Newport

It Has the Verve and Snap and Is Declared to Be Perfectly Proper.

NEWPORT, Sept. 14.—The "Horse Trot" is the cottage colony's favorite dance now. It has a verve and snap that appeal while it is declared perfectly proper.

The Horse Trot is not to be confused for a moment, say the dancers, with the Turkey Trot, the Bunny Hug, Texas Tommy, the Narragansett Naughty or other objectionable movements.

The musical measure for the Horse Trot was arranged by Uriel Davis of Washington, D. C. The step is a trot, or rather a run set to music. The partners face each other in line and original steps are introduced.

Among the cottage dancers who are adept in the Horse Trot are A. C. Hortsmann, Hans von Halmhausen, charge d'affaires of the German embassy, Mr. De Bache of the Russian embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Jones Colford, Jr., Miss Dorothy Bigelow of New York and Boston, Miss Margaret F Anderson, Mr and Mrs W. Goadby Loew, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle, Mrs Elsie French Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Perrin, Miss Dorothy Wilard and Mr. and Mrs. Fred M Davis.

Peachy Complexion for All; Try Cranberries.

MIDDLEBORO, Sept. 14.—A new market has been found for cranberries and one which ought to interest girls. For a long time it has been known that cranberries are good to eat, have been and that many diseases of the blood and tissues have been cured by the acid in the tart little berry. But now a new idea has been advanced.

It has been discovered that a paste made from the juice of stewed cranberries to which is added a scented cream will take off the cranberry color from the complexion, and that many of the girls who have the peachy complexion have for their secret the use of the cranberry paste. When this fact becomes generally known the Cape Cod growers hope to be able to disperse the glooms and have the boys come to camp, for then the crops will be easily disposed of.

Panama Exposition to Be Open on Time

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—The Panama Pacific International Exposition, which will be held here in 1915 to celebrate the completion of the Panama Canal, will be ready on time. This is the positive assertion of its president, Charles C. Moore. After months spent in preliminaries the perfected plan has been adopted by the directors and orders have been given to go ahead immediately.

All exhibit palaces must be complete as though ready for occupancy June 25, 1914, nine months in advance of the date set for the opening, February 20, 1915. All contracts will be let on this basis.

Five thousand men will be given employment within ninety days, and this number will be increased until the Fall of 1913, when construction work will be under way on all buildings.

DO YOU WANT

Dennison Co. Against Chewing of Tobacco

Requests that Lovers of the Plug Bid It Farewell in Working.

FRAMINGHAM, Sept. 14.—Tobacco-chewers who work for the Dennison Manufacturing Company have decided it would be the part of wisdom to bid a last sad farewell to their plug and their finecut. This was what they found in their pay envelopes:

The habit of tobacco chewing is of considerable annoyance to others and leads to dirt and disagreeable conditions. Any habits which are offensive to your fellow-workers must have their effect on your chances for advancement, and we earnestly request of those that chew tobacco that they give up the habit as soon as possible.

The chewing gum business is going to be good in Framingham.

FR. HALLORAN TO PRESIDE.

Temperance Advocates to Meet in Memory of Apostle of Pledge.

As a tribute of respect to the memory of the Rev. Theobald Mathew, the great Irish apostle of temperance, the different societies connected with the Boston Catholic Total Abstinence Union will meet in Ford Hall, Ashburton place, on the evening of October 18 and listen to addresses by prominent temperance workers. The exercises will be presided over by the Rev. Florence J. Halloran, president of the Boston Temperance Union. Secretary McConologue of the organization is compiling a list of those who will take part in the program.

ARREST EXPECTED OF W. D. HAYWOOD TODAY

I. W. W. Leader Coming to Address Ettor Protest Meeting on Common.

A great demonstration is to be made in this city today by the International Workers of the World and their friends as a protest against the imprisonment of Joseph Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti, because of their activities in leading the mill workers' strike at Lawrence.

William D. Haywood, the Western mine leader, who was once tried for the killing by dynamite of Former Governor Steunenburg, of Idaho, is coming to Boston to address a big mass meeting on the Common. It is expected that he will be arrested, an indictment having been issued against him charging conspiracy in connection with the mill troubles.

One of the State police officials is quoted as saying that Haywood would be taken into custody as soon as he crossed the State line.

The union officials have sent telegrams to Haywood telling him to come here early today, so that in case of his arrest he might be bailed out in time to speak to the crowd on the Common.

Union leaders declare that today's demonstration is but the forerunner of a general strike of mill operatives in Lawrence, Lowell and other mill cities by thousands of I. W. W. workers in the Western mine districts, by the lumber men of the South, and in fact by all of the 75,000 I.W.W. members in the country, on September 30, unless Ettor and Giovannitti are released.

PERFECT HUSBAND SPECIMEN FOUND

And of All Places in the World Cincinnati Is Where They Found Him.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 14.—He's found [illegible] It's the very perfect husband on record. What's more, even his wife thinks he's perfect and she has been married to him for some years, too.

A group of cultured French women recently listed the faults of husbands and declared that if a man had none of these he would be a perfect husband. The failings listed were selfishness, unfaithfulness, jealousy, intemperance, cowardice, immorality, despotism, bad temper, stupidity and idleness.

The editor of an Ohio newspaper who got up with the [illegible] one morning recently saw [illegible] while engrossed with his coffee, eggs and paper and [illegible]

"There ain't no such man."

His wife thought there was, but she hadn't found him.

To prove he was right the editor offered a prize for him.

Mrs. Pearson answered. She declares her husband is [illegible] always generous, is so temperate that he doesn't drink, smoke, chew, gamble or go to clubs—is as brave as a lion and as moral as St. Anthony, is not despotic because he is generous, has a good temper and is so educated that before [illegible] stupid, and is industrious.

VAHEY NOT FOR SENATE.

Pelletier Supporter Denies Story of Deal.

James H. Vahey, former State Senator, who is campaigning vigorously for District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier in the latter's fight for the Democratic nomination for Governor, denied flatly yesterday that he is to run for the United States Senate, to succeed Senator Crane, in the event of Mr. Pelletier's election.

The story circulated in political channels was that an understanding existed whereby Mr. Vahey was to support Mr. Pelletier for Governor and that, in the event of Mr. Pelletier's election, Mr. Vahey was to receive the support, political and otherwise, of the new administration in his candidacy for the national Senate.

But Mr. Vahey nailed the story, saying: "It is not true, and I am not a candidate for the United States Senate."

Vanderbilts Soon to Go to Newport

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt are expected at Oakland Farm in October. It will be the present Mrs. Vanderbilt's first occupancy of the farm which has been quite without a mistress since Mrs. French Vanderbilt secured her divorce in May, 1908.

The present Mrs. Vanderbilt was formerly Mrs. Margaret McKim, having divorced Dr. Smith Hollins McKim of Baltimore to marry Alfred Vanderbilt. Her father and his new wife, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac E. Emerson, have been in Newport a good part of the Summer on the house boat Margaret.

Reginald Vanderbilt has had his Sandy Point show horses sent to the Syracuse horse show in charge of Manager William Bone.

Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt (Susan Dresser) of Biltmore, N. C., is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown.

EXTEND TIME UPON NEW LIFEBOAT LAW

Word was received by managers of steamship companies yesterday that the law enacted by Congress regulating the placing of life boats on steamships that was to go into effect July 31 and which was extended to September 15 has again been deferred to October 1. The extension of time has been granted, it is claimed, because the manufacturers of life boats have been unable to meet the demand made upon them. This information became known today [illegible] the visit to Boston of Charles Nagel, Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, who is on his way from Washington to his Summer home in Marion. He visited a number of steamship officials in this city and conferred with the government supervisor of steamboats.

THRONG AT FUNERAL OF JOHNSON'S WIFE

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—With her mother, Mrs. David Terry, of Brooklyn, and her sister, Elaine Terry, here, the funeral of Mrs. John Arthur Johnson, self-slain white wife of the negro champion, was held today.

Although efforts were made to make the ceremony as simple as possible, the curiosity seekers were on hand long before the hour set for the cortege to leave the home of Mrs. Tiny Johnson, Jack's mother, and make its way to St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, where Rev. J. Robinson preached the funeral sermon.

During the greater part of the night the curious watched about the house where the dead woman lay. Mrs. Terry and her daughter, from their rooms in the Germania Hotel, could see the throng. Police kept the crowd moving.

Colebrook Trying to Keep Youth at Home

New Courses of Rural Value Added to High School Curriculum of Academy.

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 14.—Colebrook Academy is endeavoring to solve the problem of how to keep young men and women from drifting away to the cities by training them along lines that will bind them to the countryside. To the school plant have been added recently a greenhouse, a dairy laboratory, a domestic arts department and a workshop.

Complete courses are given in agriculture and domestic science, though the academy does not propose to become a vocation school and retains all its high school courses. The idea is that the institution serves a rural community and it is believed wise to teach things which will tend to keep the pupils at home on the farms where, it is believed, they will be of greater value to the town and State.

MAINE FIRE SUSPECT IS TRAPPED BY NOTE

DEXTER, Me., Sept. 14.—By the arrest here of Walter Batchelder, the police believe they have solved the mystery of a series of fires in Corinna, Dexter and Garland. For a week a posse of fifty armed men have patrolled the town of Garland on guard against a firebug.

Batchelder's capture resulted from a note to Deputy Sheriff Levanseller of Dexter, following a $3,000 fire in Garland. The note read:

"I was here last night, while you were hunting. Catch me if you can. I shall come again."

When Batchelder was arrested he admitted writing the note. He was identified also as the man who rushed into a drug store at Dexter shouting that there was a fire near.

Where Rescued Children Are Playing Under the Sky

S. P. C. C.'s Roof Garden on Boston's Ridgepole Is Unique

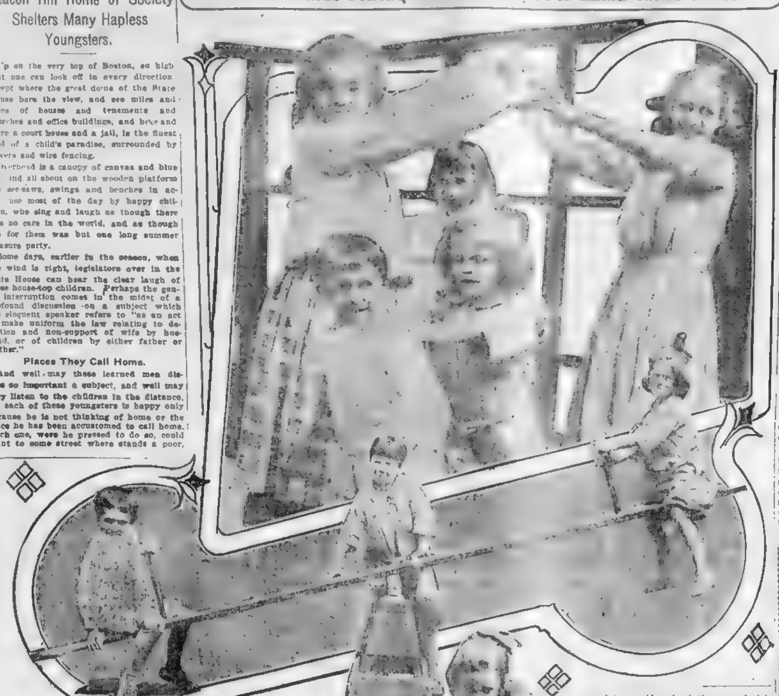
LITTLE CHARGES FORGET THEIR DREARY LOT IN MERRY GAMES ON ROOF



Up on the very top of Boston, so high that one can look off in every direction except where the great dome of the State House bars the view, and see miles and miles of houses and tenements and churches and office buildings, and here and there a court house and a jail, is the finest kind of a child's paradise, surrounded by flowers and wire fencing.

Overhead is a canopy of canvas and blue sky and all about on the wooden platform are see-saws, swings and benches in active use most of the day by happy children, who sing and laugh as though there was no care in the world, and as though life for them was but one long summer pleasure party.

Some days, earlier in the season, when the wind is right, legislators over in the State House can hear the clear laugh of these house-top children. Perhaps the gentle interruption comes in the midst of a profound discussion on a subject which the eloquent speaker refers to "as an act to make uniform the law relating to desertion and non-support of wife by husband, or of children by either father or mother."

Places They Call Home.

And well may these learned men discuss so important a subject, and well may they listen to the children in the distance, for each of these youngsters is happy only because he is not thinking of home or the place he has been accustomed to call home. Each one, were he pressed to do so, could point to some street where stands a poor, dark tenement, filled with tragedies, for children, terrible as a bad dream.

But most of the children who spend many hours of the day in this Beacon Hill roof garden on Mt. Vernon street, are too young to remain miserable long, and instead of moaning over their fate they circle about with clasped hands, singing the home songs of our nation. At one time it will be "My Bonny Lies Over the Ocean," again "Ben Bolt," or "Annie Laurie," or perhaps it will be a game in which each one goes up to her who stands in the centre, and kneeling, sings the plaintive refrain "Kneel Down and Kiss Your Mother."

One may perchance drop out for a moment to give a sigh as she remembers that only two days previous she was held up to the bars of the East Boston prison and kissed her drunken mother who she had tried to comfort.

Below the S. P. C. C.

Beneath this garden of joyous sound and happy play, made possible by many fortunate children living with wise and loving parents, is the six-story brick building of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, known usually by the four letters, S. P. C. C.

The figure of the octopus is well known to al modern readers who have seen the great trusts likened to this terrible creature of the sea, and have heard how the monster reaches out long arms, searching to devour whomsoever may come within reach.

Today there is coming to be another kind of formidable creature, one whose nine long arms reach out farther and farther into the State, grasping a child here or laying a finger on a mother there, until few can escape and fight becomes almost useless.

But this creature is radically different from the octopus, and only those run from it who have been evil and cruel, who have beaten or kicked or starved some unprotected child, innocent and defenseless.

The hands that reach out through the State are kind and strong and often bear the sword of justice. They come as Heaven-sent guardians and protectors; they often quell family quarrels and unite broken homes. They reach out and grasp the man who is running from his duty as a father and compel him either to return, or send money to those it is his duty to support.

How Work Has Grown.

While the children romp and sing on the roof, down on the street floor an equal number of young men and women are busy with reports and papers and card catalogues, and visitors who talk with tears in their eyes or with curses on their lips. These visitors are mothers, fathers, friends or relatives of children whom the society is attempting to protect from the abuses of neglect, cruelty and the tragedies that go with abject poverty.

Not many years ago the society confined its activities to the region immediately surrounding Boston; the records show that in 1907 there was one stenographer, an agent, several investigators, and a legal advisor; five thousand children were cared for during the year. Now the S. P. C. C. has extended its beneficent influence into every part of the State.

The children may be under-fed victims of the Lawrence strike, or a deserted boy may be picked up on a doorstep at 11 o'clock at night in a small hamlet among the Berkshires. Then, again, it may be a baby and brothers and sisters found in possession of an insane mother and drunken father. The society's stations are in Fall River, Beverly, Hampshire, Haverhill, Brockton, New Bedford, Lawrence, Worcester and Fitchburg. The agents in these towns work in connection with other local organizations and everywhere the courts are called on to co-operate in the matter of child saving. The police are of great assistance and often give information that brings cruel parents to justice.

Last year more than 12,000 children were helped to good homes, or what the society considers far better, were kept in their own homes which were made proper for the children, who otherwise would have been taken away.

In the Boston office today there are the secretary and general agent, C. C. Carstens; an organizing secretary, a field secretary, an assistant to the general agent, assistant attorney, examining [illegible] matron, assistant matron, [illegible] clerks, a bookkeeper, three stenographers and fourteen agents who come [illegible] with the [illegible] throughout the state.

SOMERVILLE VOTING ON OFFICIAL FLOWER

Nasturtium and Salvia Neck-to-Neck in Race for City's Favor.

Up to last night it was a neck-and-neck race between the nasturtium and the salvia in the contest to decide which shall be the city flower of Somerville.

Also running are the aster, zinnia, crimson rambler, white clematis, pink peony, phlox and dahlia.

Just to show that Somerville is not only right up to date, but a bit in advance, the Winter Hill Improvement Association suggested that the city have an official flower.

The residents of Winter Hill district were invited to mail their choice of name to Mrs. Annie M. Smith, secretary of the association, at No. 52 Sydney street, Somerville.

At the same time Charles S. Clark, superintendent of Somerville schools, began a poll of the teachers and 12,000 school children. It is expected the poll will reach 10,000 votes.

The result of the vote will be announced at the next meeting of the Winter Hill Improvement Association, September 25.

When the city flower is chosen, residents will be asked to give it particular prominence in their gardens next Summer.

INDUSTRIAL WORKERS MOB ATTACKS POLICE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Scores of men and women attacked twenty police reserves under Captain Daley of the East Thirty-eighth street station today, when the police attempted to enforce an order that no red flags should be carried by the marchers in the parade of the Industrial Workers of the World.

The crowd surrounding the police became so ugly that Captain Daley, despairing of quelling the disturbance with sticks, ordered his men to draw their revolvers. With the men and women shouting "Down with the police!" the reserves charged the mob. Order was restored after an hour of strenuous work on the part of the police.

The trouble took place in Second avenue, near East Eighty-fourth street, where one of the divisions was forming preparatory to marching to Fifth avenue and falling in with the main body. In Union square the assemblage was addressed by William D. Haywood, head of the Industrial Workers' organization.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—A mass meeting of the Industrial Workers of the World which was scheduled to take place in Independence Square this afternoon, was prevented by the police of the city. About 5,000 persons gathered in the square in an attempt to hold the meeting, but the police with drawn clubs drove the crowd away. A great deal of disorder occurred, but there was no violence. The men when driven from the square marched in a body to the City Hall plaza and held a meeting there.

Pond Creek Almost Ready.

It is expected by Hayden, Stone & Co. that the Pond Creek mine will be shipping coal within a few months, as a large amount of underground development work is well under way, and the railroad construction is still advancing to its final stages, it being well ahead of scheduled time.

THE FIRST GRAY HAIR SIGN OF AGE. DON'T LOOK OLD BEFORE YOUR TIME

A harmless remedy, made from common garden sage, quickly restores gray hair to natural color. The care of the hair, to prevent it from losing its color and lustre, is just as important as to care for teeth to keep them from discoloring. Why spend money for cosmetics and creams to improve the complexion, and yet neglect your hair, when gray hair is even more conspicuous and suggestive of age than wrinkles or a poor complexion? Of the two, it is easier to preserve the natural color and beauty of the hair than it is to have a good complexion.

All that is necessary is the occasional use of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair [illegible], a preparation of common garden Sage and Sulphur, combined with other valuable remedies for dry, harsh, faded hair, dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. After a few applications of this simple, harmless remedy, your hair will gradually be restored to its natural color, in a short time the dandruff will be removed, and your hair will no longer come out but will start to grow as Nature intended it should.

Don't neglect your hair, for it goes further than anything else to make or mar your good looks. You can buy this remedy at any drug store for fifty cents a bottle, and your druggist will give your money back if you are not satisfied after using. Purchase a bottle today. You will never regret it when you realize the difference it will make in your appearance.

Constipation and Catarrh

S. B. HARTMAN, M. D.

You are constipated. You have taken laxatives a great many years. You have tried to select a diet that would keep your bowels regular. In this you have failed and were obliged to go back to your laxatives again. This, I say, has been going on many years.

You also have a slight catarrh in the head and throat. You never imagined that the catarrh had anything to do with the constipation. Suppose I were to tell you that as long as you have that catarrh you will never get better of your constipation. Would you believe me? Well, whether you would believe me or not it is the truth.

For many years I have been wrestling with the problem of furnishing the public an internal catarrh remedy. Peruna has been the remedy that I have devised and it has certainly relieved many thousand people, yes hundreds of thousands of people, of chronic catarrh.

Constipation was my chief difficulty in treating these cases. I often felt that it would be better if a laxative element were added to Peruna. I feared to do so, however, first because of the number of catarrhal patients who needed no laxative, and second I was afraid of making such a radical change in a remedy that was already doing so well. Thus it was that I continued to prescribe with the Peruna a bottle of Manalin to those who needed a laxative. At last, under circumstances explained in my booklet, I was constrained to add the laxative element to Peruna. This constitutes what is now known as the revised Peruna.

Now those who take Peruna will, first, find themselves promptly relieved of their constipation. Second, the catarrh will gradually disappear. And once the catarrh is cured the constipation leaves permanently. Then if you follow the advice given in my book, you will never have to take pills any more. Cathartics and laxatives you can ignore. You will be permanently relieved of both your catarrh and the constipation.

Peruna is for sale at all drug stores.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say, this formula is now put out under the name of KA-TAR-NO, manufactured by KA-TAR-NO Company, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

ELDERLY FOLKS! CALOMEL, SALTS AND CATHARTICS AREN'T FOR YOU

Harmless, gentle "Syrup of Figs" is best to cleanse your stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels of sour bile, decaying food, gases and clogged-up waste.

You old people, Syrup of Figs is particularly for you. You who don't exercise as much as you need to; who like the easy chair. You, whose steps are slow and whose muscles are less elastic. You must realize that your liver and ten yards of bowels have also become less active.

Don't regard Syrup of Figs as physic. It stimulates the liver and bowels just as exercise would do if you took enough of it. It is not harsh like salts or cathartics. The help which Syrup of Figs gives to a torpid liver and weak, sluggish bowels is harmless, natural and gentle.

When eyes grow dim, you help them. Do the same with your liver and bowels when age makes them less active. There is nothing more important. Costive, clogged-up bowels mean that decaying, fermenting food is clogged there and the pores or ducts in these thirty feet of bowels suck this decaying waste and poisons into the blood. You will never get feeling right until this is corrected—but do it gently. Don't have a bowel wash-day, don't use a bowel irritant. For your sake, please use only gentle, effective Syrup of Figs. Then you are not drugging yourself, for Syrup of Figs is composed of only luscious figs, senna and aromatics which can not injure.

A teaspoonful tonight will gently, but thoroughly, move on and out of your system by morning all the sour bile, poisonous fermenting food and clogged-up waste matter without gripe, nausea or weakness.

But get the genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." Refuse, with contempt, any other Fig Syrup unless it bears the name—prepared by the California Fig Syrup Company. Read the label.

LONG GIVES WEEKS A LIVELY CAMPAIGN

Progressive from Framingham Seeks Banker's Job in Congress.

Long as a Progressive Republican is trying to capture the regular Republican nomination.

Long is a fighter—one of those little fighters who don't look like fighters. He is pale, as a clergyman or student might be pale from working overlong by midnight oil. You might pick Long out as a promising young lawyer, of the modern type which does its "lawyering" in the office and seldom goes to court, but you would scarcely select him for the role of "Capital" as the cartoonists draw Mr. Capital.

Long is making the chief issue of the campaign Mr. Weeks' association with the United Machinery and New Haven Co.

"A business associate of my opponent is Charles S. Mellen, representing the railroad monopoly that controls rail and water transportation in New England," says Mr. Long in one of his addresses. "This company that has raised the passenger and freight rates, put in 'rubber miles' over night, defied the laws of Massachusetts, and has been said to control the State of Connecticut.

"This monopoly that charges fifty cents a ton more for carrying coal to Framingham than to Boston is, in my opinion, practicing extortion in nearly all the towns in this district. Has my opponent ever raised his voice against these excessive charges? Western Congressmen have fought the railroads for their district. Is the friend in business of the railroad managers the proper man to protect the people's rights?

All of which would suggest that Congressman Weeks has something on his hands.

And when Mr. Long and the Captain have had it out, between them the winner will have to meet Former Congressman John J. Mitchell, Democrat or Daniel J. Daley, Democrat.

Daley went into the Old Twelfth against Weeks, two years ago, and ran up 14,696 votes to the 19,037 polled by Weeks.

At that time Mr. Mitchell's city of Marlboro was part of the Fourth District and Mr. Mitchell—having already served a "short" term in Congress—lost to William H. Wilder, Republican, by only 120 votes.

Congressman Weeks is a Taft man, sold in the faith, a Crane man and a Stand-Patter. Also he has sung the praises of the United Shoe Machinery Company, thereby inviting, daring and welcoming the opposition of Richard H. Long, independent.

CUSTOM HOUSE IN YEAR.

Boston's custom house should be ready for occupancy before the end of next year, it was intimated by Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, who held a conference with Collector Curtis and Norcross Brothers, the contractors, who will build the tower. Secretary MacVeagh looked over the plans and said that work on the fourteen-story tower would be started within a few weeks.

Mrs. Beeckman in Politics Helping Husband in R. I. Race

MRS. ROBERT LIVINGSTON BEECKMAN

MRS. R. LIVINGSTONE BEECKMAN

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 14.—For the first time in the history of the millionaire society colony, one of its members, and one who is of the inner circle, is a candidate for gubernatorial honors. He is none other than Robert Livingston Beeckman, who has served in the Rhode Island Legislature.

The candidacy of Mr. Beeckman for the Republican nomination—he likes to be called "Bob"—has caused something more than a ripple among the society folks here. One of those greatly interested and no one blames her—is Mrs. Beeckman, who was Miss Eleanor Thomas.

"I shall do all I can to secure the Republican nomination for my husband," she said.

"I am not a public speaker and not of the militant order of women who are ... If Mr. Beeckman is anxious to be Governor of this State I can see no reason why he should not succeed. I will attend the rallies and do all I can to arouse sentiment in his favor.

"I have always been interested in politics, and I think all women should. You ask me how I would like to be the 'first lady of the State.' Now, if you were in my place, what would you say?" The reporter became convinced that Mrs. Beeckman, too, had aspirations.

Mr. Beeckman declares that he is in the fight to the end. "Governor Pothier says he will not be a candidate," began Mr. Beeckman. "I have taken his word for it. You can rest assured that I will wage a vigorous fight for the nomination."

Newport's candidate is, as everybody knows, a member of an old-time Dutch family that arrived in this country from Holland nearly 300 years ago. He was born in New York city April 15, 1866. He entered the brokerage business at the age of sixteen, and at twenty-one held a seat on the New York Stock Exchange.

PELLETIER ON STUMP ACCUSES LOMASNEY

District Attorney Charges Attempted Influence in Sederquest and Crocker Cases.

Martin M. Lomasney, Democratic leader of Ward 8 and Democratic leader of the Legislature, got the oratorical drubbing last night that seems to be a part of every political campaign in Boston.

This time the drubber was the aspirant for a Democratic nomination, District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier.

Joseph C. Pelletier, District Attorney for Suffolk County, speaking to a big audience in Faneuil Hall, called Martin Lomasney an "importer and dealer in votes."

The District Attorney described Lomasney as "manipulator of the Legislature, trafficker in legislation; rich into the hundreds of thousands by having capitalized his political influence and sold it in shares at immense profit." "This is Lomasney," said Pelletier, "the man who says I can't be Governor!"

Faneuil Hall, filled with followers of the Boston politicians who had chosen the "other end" from Fitzgerald and Lomasney—and who usually take that end—was in an uproar over Pelletier's lambasting of the Ward 8 leader. Many in the hall appeared to have been expecting it. Others seemed surprised.

One of two Ward 8 men had wandered in. One of these recalled that when Pelletier carried the city of Boston by only 3,211 votes over Arthur Dehon Hill, the Lomasney ward furnished nearly one-third of the Pelletier plurality, to be exact, 1,028 votes.

Calls Lomasney "Importer."

Having charged Mr. Lomasney with being an "importer and dealer in votes," "manipulator of the Legislature," and "trafficker in legislation," the District Attorney went on to declare that Lomasney had tried to influence the District Attorney's office in the Sederquist-Barry stock-brokerage case, and again in the famous Crocker will case. Some of the charges were astounding.

Other speakers at the Pelletier rally, which was preceded by a street parade with the Ninth Regiment Band at the head of it, were Frederick W. Mansfield, Hon. James H. Vahey, Hon. Thomas F. Cassidy, John F. McDonald, Hon. John A. Keliher and Hon. James M. Curley. Some of these were heard later at Medford and Melrose.

Frederick W. Mansfield, lawyer, was the presiding officer. Lawyer Mansfield attacked Governor Foss as "unfriendly to the interests of labor, organized and unorganized."

Senator Vahey, as usual, refrained from personalities. In his judgment, he said the campaign should be conducted "upon a high and lofty plane, free from personalities." He had loyally and earnestly suported Mr. Foss, he said, once for Congress and twice for Governor, and "if he is again nominated he shall have my support." (Applause).

There was electricity in the air from the moment when Pelletier advanced to be presented to the audience. He said little or nothing about Foss, little or nothing about his "platform," little or nothing about anybody except Martin Lomasney.

Bad Times for Bosses.

"You all know Lomasney. If you don't you should. He is the worst type of the ... local political boss that remains to disgrace the politics of an American city.

"When the Sederquist-Barry case was being prepared for trial, when I was about to prosecute these defendants who had mulcted the people of thousands of their dollars, Lomasney, who is not a lawyer and had no interest other than that which he has when powerful interests have something at stake, approached me and wanted the case nol prossed.

"They say Lomasney befriends the unfortunate poor. Never did he plead with me, nor could he plead, more piteously than he did to have these slick stock manipulators freed from the law they had outraged. I refused. He threatened. I remained firm.

"Another case—not that of an humble unfortunate without means or counsel to plead in his behalf, but a man of great wealth and social influence. I refer to the Crocker will case.

"Here again Lomasney pleaded with me to nol pross this case. Why do you suppose he came? What was his interest in this case, do you suppose?

Why Case Failed.

"Just before the day of trial something happened in that case. The principal government witness, without whom the government was powerless, suddenly changed his testimony and altered the written evidence upon which I based my case. The ... has failed to influence me but somebody did influence the government's principal witness. I never have and never ... a liar as a witness in any case. This is the reason why that case was not tried.

"Because Lomasney cannot use Pelletier, the district attorney, and knows he cannot use Pelletier the Governor, I am to be subjected upon the eve of primary day to the ... personal attack of this organized army of character assassins."

BIG RECEPTION FOR FOSS BY MILL WORKERS

need better service from our railroads; cheaper and fairer freight schedules; and the extension of our rail and trolley lines without surrendering in the least degree the wise and established policy of the State. But we must not confine our efforts to the railroads alone.

"The only way to ensure cheap freight for our textile manufacturing communities is to build up our rivers and harbors, and encourage the carrying of freight by water."

"Nothing that we can do in the way of public regulation of the railroads will be entirely effective unless we also dredge out our rivers, improve our harbors, dig canals wherever they are needed, and restore our fleets of freight vessels.

"Lawrence is vitally concerned in this matter; and the improvement of the Merrimac River is a project, now well on foot, in which I ask for your earnest co-operation. The board of commissioners that I have appointed for this purpose is actively at work, and I have named a Lawrence man as a member of it in recognition of the importance of the project to this community.

I feel that the whole problem of our transportation is now well in hand, and propose to carry it on to a solution in the best interests of all sections of the State.'

Has Kept Party Pledge.

The principal address of the evening, here as at Lawrence, was that of Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor reviewed the record of the recent Democratic House of Representatives at Washington. When he got around to State issues, and the present contest, Mr. Fitzgerald said:

"In Massachusetts our Democratic Governor, Eugene N. Foss, has given to the people a progressive Democratic administration. He has fulfilled the pledges of his party. He has kept the faith. The one discordant note now heard while his party is preparing to honor itself by giving him a third nomination is due to the fact that every appointment made by him has not been that of a Democrat!

"Let us dismiss that point for a few minutes while we consider what the Governor has done for the Commonwealth, for his party and for all the people, regardless of party affiliations. These are some of the achievements for which he must receive credit and what he has been able to do is done in spite of the fact that both branches of the General Court have been Republican:

"Direct nomination of State officers; state finance commission; limitation of campaign expenses; workingmen's compensation act; anti-injunction bill, giving right of trial by jury; appropriation of $9,000,000 for harbor development; fifty-four hours a week for women and children; plan for part time schooling for working children; eight-hour day for public employes; investigation of minimum wage legislation; plan to improve the prison industries; investigation of sale of prison-made goods in open markets; supervision of loan business to protect small borrowers; investigation of stock selling holding companies; consolidation of Boston Elevated and West End companies on an equitable basis; increase in the number of judges and their salaries.

Appointment of State officials upon their qualifications and without regard to their race or religion; popular election of United States Senators; establishment of a State board of labor and industries; appropriation of $5,000,000 for additional State highways; admission of the Southern New England Railroad (Grand Trunk) to Boston; compensation of persons held for trial; efficient and humane administration of public institutions; plan to ... to secure suburban ... steads.

Foss a Real Progressive.

"In spite of this splendid record, District Attorney Pelletier tells you that Governor Foss should be deprived of a renomination and that he himself should be nominated for the Governorship.

"What has Mr. Pelletier done for the Democratic party in the State and in his own city that he should urge the Democracy to deny to Governor Foss an honor that has never been denied to any Governor, Republican or Democrat, who has sought it?

His one point against the Governor, apparently, is that the latter has not, in every instance, appointed Democrats to office. The District Attorney should know that Massachusetts is not a spoils Commonwealth. He should know that Governor Foss was elected and re-elected by the aid of Republican votes. He should know that, if the Governor had followed the policy in his appointments which the District Attorney would have had him follow, the Governor would have been defeated one year ago and that the progressive legislation which this year he was able to obtain would not have been possible. The Governor himself was the only candidate on the State ticket who was elected, and some of his associates were defeated by more than 30,000 votes.

Governor of All the People.

"District Attorney Pelletier has yet to give one good reason why he should be substituted by his party for Governor Foss. What has he done in the past for the Democracy which he now asks to follow him? He has never worked for the party in the State and has never volunteered his services to the State committee.

"Last year he was asked by the President of the Boston Democratic City Committee to speak in his own city for the candidates, and he declined. He made one speech outside of Boston. No man in Lowell ever saw him on the stump until he saw him here speaking in his own behalf. In Boston he has opposed Democratic candidates more frequently than he has supported them.

"I bring up this matter solely for the reason that the district attorney asks us to displace Governor Foss as our leader in order that he himself may lead, although the Governor has placed us in a better tactical position than the party has occupied for many years. If honors are to be awarded according to service for the party and the people, there are others whose party services have been infinitely greater than that of Mr. Pelletier, and they should be preferred.

"They have worked year in and year out, when the possibility of success was remote, and those men in this campaign are standing shoulder to shoulder behind a Governor who has been a Governor of all the people and has been a Democratic Governor in the best meaning of the word."

Former Senator Dowd said:

Has Broken Down Barriers.

"It has remained for Governor Foss to break down the barriers hitherto existing and for the first time in the history of the State to place a De Courcey upon the Supreme bench of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; it has remained for Governor Foss to place a Ratigan, a McLaughlin, a Keating, a Quinn, a Dubuque on the Superior bench of the Commonwealth.

"It has remained for Governor Foss to place at the head of the greatest humanitarian commission yet conceived in the interests of labor the Workingmen's Compensation Commission, a James B. Carroll, and by his side on the same commission an Edward McSweeney.

"It has remained for Governor Foss to place a Creed upon the municipal bench of the city of Boston. These are but a few, and yet place hunters, chagrined at the failure of their own ambitions, attempt to criticize the man who holds forth to the various elements of our population the hope that their sons may one day occupy positions of distinction and honor so long absolutely closed to them."

Riley Raps Pelletier.

While the crowd seemed very much pleased by Governor Foss' review of his work on Beacon Hill, it was evident that the big "Foss" audience out front liked even better to have the Foss speakers talk plainly about the opposition. Chairman Riley of the State Committee talked as plainly as anybody. Judge Riley said, among other things:

"Every Democratic leader of any particular note, with but very few exceptions, are with Governor Foss. Mr. Pelletier has never done an act, has seldom spoken a word, and has most sparingly contributed financial assistance to the hard, hard work of organized democracy."

SKEFFINGTON BACKED BY UNION LABOR VOTE

Vigorous Campaign Being Made to Nominate Him for Congress in New District.

Henry J. Skeffington, who is backed for the nomination in the new Ninth Congressional District for Congress by the Democratic Town Committee of Revere, is conducting an active campaign for his nomination, assisted by the committee and others.

Mr. Skeffington has been before the public in Massachusetts and New England as an organizer of labor, particularly in the shoe trade, for the past twenty-five years. In the campaign of 1892 Mr. Skeffington was sent by the National Democratic Committee at the request of Typographical Union No. 23 of Milwaukee, to stump the State of Wisconsin. He stumped the State again in 1894 at the request of the Wisconsin State Central Democratic Committee.

In the Bryan campaign of 1900 Mr. Skeffington had charge of the labor committee at the national headquarters in Chicago and again at New York city headquarters in the campaign of 1908.

Mr. Skeffington was the originator and manager of the famous "flying wedge" which played an important part in the election of Governor W. L. Douglas, and was appointed by the latter to the Board of Harbor and Land Commissioners. He has been moderator of the Revere town meetings many times and was primarily responsible for the eight-hour work day and a minimum wage of $2 for the town's laborers. Revere was the first town in the Commonwealth to adopt these two reforms.

His candidacy was endorsed by the unanimous vote of the Chelsea Central Labor Union Thursday night and by several local unions in the congressional district previous to that time.

Cestrian Due Tomorrow.

Wireless messages received yesterday at the Leyland Line steamship offices in this city indicate that the Cestrian, bound to this port from Liverpool, will arrive early Monday. She is bringing seventy cabin passengers and a mixed cargo.

Why Rats Are Found In New Buildings

Some architects lay great stress on building rat-proof buildings. This sounds nice, but I have never yet found a building that was rat-proof. There is some advantage, to be sure, in cement constructed buildings, but the rats get to them and they become as badly infested as wooden buildings. New buildings often become overrun with rats before they are occupied. This ... workmen leaving scraps of food about from their lunches, and the rats with their keen scent, soon find it. An open door or window is all they want to get into a place, and they will climb the water-spout for five or six stories.

It is of great importance to keep food away from the rats, for if they do not find much food they do not thrive so well. Garbage pails outside the house should be carefully covered so they cannot get at the contents.

It is a good plan to store food in wire-screened compartments in buildings where rats are abundant.

The principal reason why rats are so plentiful is because there is little or no organized effort for their extinction. It is of no permanent benefit to clear the rats from a building if the surrounding buildings are not cleared also, for a new supply of rats is constantly coming from them to the cleared building.

I have cleared many buildings and have kept them free from rodents, but it was necessary to keep systematically at work year in and year out to keep the rats from adjoining buildings out. In all my work I use Martin's Rat Powder, which dries but does not immediately kill the rat first becomes sick from eating it and dies while seeking the open air, never in the walls so there is no danger from decaying rats in the walls when it is used. It can be bought at any drug or department store for 50c and $1.00, or by mail for 55c and 15c extra. There are also eleven other powders for other pests, name kind when ordering.

$40,000 PRIZES FOR AMERICAN READERS

Of This Amount $15,000 Is In Cash; Greatest Newspaper Offer Ever Made.

FIRST PRIZE IS $10,000

Contest Starts Next Sunday in Move for 500,000 Circulation.

Elsewhere in this number of the Sunday AMERICAN you will read the greatest CASH offer ever made by a New England newspaper.

The Sunday AMERICAN has $40,000 in prizes to be given away to those of its readers who will help this newspaper to reach the 500,000 circulation mark.

Of this $40,000, there are cash prizes amounting to $15,000.

No such amount—in cash—was ever before given away by a New England newspaper.

There is one prize of $10,000—a small fortune—to be given away to the man or woman, boy or girl, in New England, who turns in the largest number of subscription votes.

There are five prizes of $1,000 each, for the leader in each of the five New England districts.

Altogether, the prizes number 1501, three hundred to each of the five districts in addition to the one grand prize of $10,000.

Cash Awaits Winner.

Do YOU—you who read these lines—do YOU want $10,000?

You, sir; you, madam; you, young woman; you, son, what could you not do with $10,000 IN SOLID CASH?

Or a farm

Or engage in business, free from debt.

Erect a block of stores and apartments, maybe

Pay your way through college and professional school, and have something left for that long first year when young lawyers and young doctors usually wait.

Buy an automobile

Or put the $10,000 into savings banks and have it earn $400 a year for you while you are making up your mind how to use it to better advantage.

Why, you can do any number of fine things with $10,000! You may make $10,000 earn ten times ten thousand dollars!

And this great sum is YOURS! Certainly it is SOMEBODY'S in New England. The contest will last twenty weeks—it will BEGIN NEXT SUNDAY, September 22d—and immediately on its conclusion the Sunday AMERICAN will PAY OVER THE MONEY.

This great contest, without a parallel in the history of New England newspapers, is explained in detail on other pages of today's AMERICAN.

Contest Open to All.

In that larger announcement you will note that when you get a friend to take the Sunday AMERICAN for six months—only twenty-six numbers—you are credited with 1,500 votes. A twelve-months' subscription counts for 3,500 votes; thirty-six months, for 7,500 votes.

And particularly is your attention called to the fact that with this larger announcement there is printed an Enrollment Ballot, that the filling out and sending in of this Enrollment Ballot starts you off in the race with 1,000 votes to your credit.

You are entitled to but ONE of these enrollment ballots. Only one of them will count for 1,000 votes, that is to say, no matter how many you send in. Better send in only one. To mail more than one to the Contest Editor will be a waste of your time and labor

Once you have enrolled—by means of the Enrollment Ballot—the Contest Editor will forward to your address all sorts of intimate and inside information concerning the contest. He will make certain suggestions of great value to you, outline the plan of campaign best fitted for your section. Indeed, if the occasion arises, he will send a representative out to help you. This representative will show you how to boost.

There is no reason why YOU should not win the $10,000 prize.

J. E. GALLIGAN, WHO LAST YEAR WON $8,000 HOUSE AND TWO LOTS

Mr. Galligan sends a letter to the AMERICAN commending the great contest this year.

SOMEBODY is going to win it.

The Second District consists of places outside Boston, but within twenty miles of the city

The Third District, cities and towns in Massachusetts beyond the twenty-mile mark

The Fifth District, Rhode Island and Connecticut

To each of these districts, three hundred prizes have been allotted.

In each of these districts one person—the leader—will be paid $1,000 in cash at the end of the twenty weeks' contest.

And, over all, to the top-notcher, to the New Englander with the largest number of subscription votes, the great sum of $10,000 in bright yellow gold or in United States banknotes, as the winner prefers.

This is the whole story in a nutshell, though the larger announcement in the advertising pages gives you the DETAILS. You WANT these details. Better read every word of the larger announcement

This great offer is tied up in no red tape. There are no strings to the $10,000 prize, the five $1,000 prizes, or any of the other prizes, chests of silver, motor boats, motorcycles, rugs, tailored suits, travelling bags or what-not.

STRONG FOSS SENTIMENT.

Big Following in Western Part of State, Says Mayor.

Back from a brief tour of the western part of the State, Mayor Fitzgerald says that he sees "nothing to it but Foss." Friday night the Mayor spoke in Adams, North Adams and Pittsfield, and he declares the sentiment is overwhelmingly for the renomination of the Governor.

The Mayor said he conferred with Professor Garret Droppers of Williamstown, Mayoralty Candidate Ryan of Pittsfield, Senator Mack and Senator Malley and found that there was a unanimity of opinion as to the bright outlook for Governor Foss

"The sentiment in the western part of the State has undergone a great change in the last week, and with the work that has been mapped out for next week the sentiment will be even stronger," said the Mayor.

JANE ADDAMS TO GO WEST.

Will Start on Progressive Speaking Trip to Coast Sept. 25.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Miss Jane Addams, it is announced, will take the stump for the Progressive party beginning September 25.

She will speak at a few big mass meetings in the East, and will then start on a tour that will extend to the Pacific Coast.

"Much of Miss Addams's speaking will be done in the Middle West and West, where an active suffrage campaign is on," said Miss Frances Keller.

Parcels Post Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The parcels post service to begin throughout the United States on January 1 will be put into operation between this country and Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii and Porto Rico at the same time. It is now definitely known that the express companies will request a postponement of the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on express rates set for October 9.

FIRE CHIEFS DEPART.

Chief Mullen in Party Off for Denver Convention.

Chief John A. Mullen of the Boston Fire Department, accompanied by a party of firemen and friends, left yesterday from the South Station for Denver to attend the annual convention of the International Association of Fire Engineers, which opens in that city Tuesday morning. They will arrive in Denver late tomorrow afternoon.

In the party were Chief Harry L. Marston of Brockton, Chief William E. Greene of Concord, N. H.; Chief Patrick H. Flaherty of Portland, Chief H. W. Randlett of Newton, Chief Dennis W. Carey of Lawrence, Chief Sewall M. Rich of Somerville, John H. Hardy, George A. Robinson of Concord, C. N. Sylvester, former Lieutenant Joseph A. Webber of Boston, all prominent salesmen of fire department apparatus, and Chief Hosmer of Lowell.

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY.

Pastors to Devote Sermons to Aiding White Plague Victims.

Sunday, October 27, will be observed by many of the New England churches as "Tuberculosis Sunday." This has been arranged by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Sermons and addresses will be given by preachers and physicians on the work of prevention. Special attention will be given to the care to be exercised in the homes.

This work has been supported by the sale of the Red Cross stamps. More than 1,160,000 stamps were sold last year, bringing a net sum of $10,000 for the anti-tuberculosis organization of this State.

QUITS STEAMSHIP LINE.

Sir Montagu Allan to Retire After Years of Service.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14.—Sir Montagu Allan, one of the leading directors of the Allan Line of steamships, established and controlled for so many years by members of the family, has announced his retirement from the management of the company. This follows closely on that of Bryce Allan, the representative of the line in Boston. The management of the steamship lines will now be left in the hands of Hugh and Andrew Allan.

ROOSEVELT APPEALS TO NEVADA PEOPLE

Principal Address In Reno—Colonel Delayed by Insistent Demands for Speeches.

RENO, Nev., Sept. 14.—Colonel Roosevelt's appeal to the people of Nevada was made today when he passed through the State on his way to the Pacific Coast. His principal address was in Reno.

Since he left Spokane on Monday, the Colonel has been traveling constantly except for a stay of a few hours in Portland, Ore., and brief stops at a few other points. Through Oregon, Idaho, Utah and Nevada he has been traveling as fast as the men at the throttle could speed the train, in an effort to keep up with the schedule which was mapped out before he left Oyster Bay.

Most of the time he has been late, and special trains have been arranged to make up for the loss. The delays have been due largely to the fact that Colonel Roosevelt was called upon to make more speeches than were in the original program.

When the Colonel reaches San Francisco he will have a day's rest before leaving for the Southwest. His week of hard campaigning has told on him, and he showed signs of fatigue today, although the hoarseness which troubled him at the beginning had disappeared.

COLPOYS COURT OFFICER.

Bull Moose Heads Sell at $200 Each

Market Price of Real Thing Soars as Supply on Hand is Depleted.

GREENVILLE, Me., Sept. 14.—The taxidermists who have establishments in the Moosehead Lake and Aroostook hunting regions of Maine wish they had a hundred or so bull moose heads on hand, for they would be able to sell them all at a fancy price, according to the present demand.

It is an odd combination of national politics and big game animals, but since the "bull moose" party has come to be so prominent there has been a big demand for bull moose heads from the big cities. Already the market is well cleared out. Most of the taxidermists sold what they happened to have on hand at regular prices, when by holding for a rise they might have obtained nearly double, for the supply is limited.

A New York man who paid an even $100 for a fairly good specimen said that the heads were wanted for advertising purposes, for club room and hotel decorations, and that just now a bull moose head in a window in any part of the country would be sure to attract much attention.

So it is that moose heads have advanced in price, and a taxidermist here who has an exceptionally fine specimen has been offered $200 for it. The market is likely to remain firm, for there is no way to renew the stock before another year.

SEEK "HOTTEST DEMOCRAT."

MIDDLEBORO, Sept. 14.—The question as to who is the hottest Democrat in town is a puzzler to the local postoffice officials. A letter is still held at the office directed plainly with rubber type: "To the Hottest Democrat in Marlboro, Mass." In one corner of the envelope is a note to the postmaster to please deliver and oblige.

There are several hot Democrats within the precincts of the town and in order not to slight anyone the postoffice officials will allow the Democrats to come forward and be crowned. It has been suggested that the local Democratic town committee name the winner.

FLOWER PRIZES WON BY BOSTON WOMEN

Richardson of Boston and Miss Fannie Foster of Boston were among the big prize winners at the annual Fall flower show of the Newport Horticultural Society, which opened today in Masonic Hall, to continue tomorrow and Monday. McK. Twombly.

WILSON MELROSE AT THE CASTLE SQUARE

John Craig has a surprise for Boston theatregoers. He has just concluded arrangements by which he has secured Wilson Melrose to act leading roles during the season now opening at the Castle Square, and that actor will make his first appearance with Mr. Craig and his players during the week of October 5

Mr. Melrose needs no introduction to Boston. He already has acted many parts here, notably with the former stock company at the Boston Theatre, and he will be sure to receive a cordial welcome on his return. His experience has been varied, both in stock and in support of stars, and for one season he was Julia Marlowe's leading man.

Daily-Mark-Down Basement

is the latest and best plan yet devised to insure a generous daily budget of real bargains on strictly dependable merchandise. In the first place, no merchandise will be admitted to the basement that is not at least 25% below regular market price. Much of it will be as low as 50% under price the day it is put on sale. All goods must be seasonable and of good quality—no shoddy or unreliable goods will be admitted at any price.

THE "DAILY MARK-DOWN" FEATURE

Every selling day mark-downs will be taken—not little degenerating mark-downs, if you please, but sharp, sensational reductions.

There will be no advance list of these mark-downs published in the newspapers—price tickets will be marked down during the night without the knowledge of even the salespeople.

The Daily Mark-Down Bargain Basement offerings in this advertisement will cause uncomfortable crowding, but then they are worth putting up with discomfort to secure. We give you the list with barely outlined descriptions. The comparative prices are in no wise exaggerated—the goods will speak for themselves.

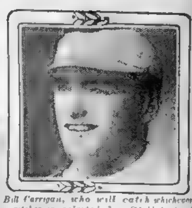
RED SOX MAY WIN THE PENNANT TODAY

Joe W[illegible], who will pitch for the American League record of sixteen straight games today, and who may thereby twirl deciding game of pennant race.

If the Red Sox win from St. Louis, and the Athletics lose to Cleveland, the Red Sox will officially win the American League pennant today. The Red Sox are required to play nineteen more games. If they win today's contest and lose every other game on their schedule, their record will be 97 won and 56 lost.

The Athletics have seventeen more games. If they lose today, and win every one of their remaining sixteen battles, their totals at the finish would be 97 wins and 57 losses, a half game behind the Red Sox. This is possible through an unusual situation. The Red Sox have a postponed game from the last series at New York, which they cannot be forced to play, under the rules.



Bill Carrigan, who will catch whichever pitcher is selected by Stahl to twirl the deciding game in the pennant race.

PILGRIMS WIN SECOND AFTER LOSING FIRST

KLING'S BOYS PLAY FAST

After presenting the opening game to the Cardinals, 3-2, yesterday, the Pilgrims came to life in the second melee, and by a grand exhibition of walloping, pinned a defeat on the Cardinals, by the very imposing score of 11-2.

The opening fray was a pitchers' battle all the way through, Griner and Dickson, the respective hurlers, being both in fine fettle, and managing to turn back their opponents with great ease in the majority of cases.

The loss of the game was more or less Dickson's own fault, for in the eighth, with his team a run in the lead, he foolishly hurled the ball to first and allowed a runner who was perched on third to stroll home with the tieing run. This lapse so upset him that the next batter clouted out a double and chased in the run which put the game on the St. Louis side of the books.

"Rajah" Bresnahan stepped into the calcium in this struggle by leading the last ditch assault which netted the brace of runs necessary to cop out. "Rajah" went to bat in the role of pinch hitter and, after a mix up between Rariden and McDonald over a foul pop, smashed out a single, which started the fireworks.

Redding Hammered Hard.

In the second game a recruit named Redding was chased in against Buster Brown, and while Buster was having one of his occasional good days, said recruit found the going very rough, and was bumped and banged until his tongue was banging out. Sixteen hits in all were garnered off his slants, or pseudo slants, and the most of them were good for extra sacks. The big blow of the day was Houser's homer over the right field fence in the eighth stanza.

This crash started an attack on Redding which was productive of six tallies through the introduction of seven decidedly solid safeties.

Maranville Again Stars.

Young Maranville once again proved that he is about the niftiest individual in the fielding line that has shown in these parts for some time, fully half a dozen of his stops being of the 18-karat variety. He took smashes on all sides of him, figured the bounds to perfection and in every instance made perfect pegs. He did not show anything with the stick, but as his defensive work several times pulled the Hub twirlers out of precarious positions, his lack of hits passed unnoticed.

Another rookie, Kelliher of Brookline, made his first appearance here in big league spangles, holding down third for the visitors in a fashion that was highly reminiscent of Larry Gardner's late efforts at Fenway Park. This chap, who a couple of years ago was a member of the Brookline High team, got in front of several hot drives, killed off a couple of hits, and in addition to his swell fielding, registered three marks on his hit side of the averages. All of which brought joy to the souls of the gathering of townsmen assembled to cheer on the young chap.

Cardinals Score First.

Dickson ushered in the day's festivities in seemly style by fanning Gilhooley. Then he went wild and walked both Ellis and Galloway, also contributing a wild pitch, which shoved the former to third. Koney was there with the assistance and his bang to left chased over the first run of the fray. From this time on, till the seventh, not a hit nor a run did the hostiles secure. If Dickson was going well, so too was Griner. In the first six innings he permitted but two hits, but in the seventh started slipping and was mighty lucky to get away with only the two counts made against him. In this period, McDonald introduced himself with a two-base smash to left, and reached the rubber when Kirke followed suit after Sweeney's out. Titus and Devlin rode along with one basers, which counted Kirke, and had a runner perched on third waiting for help, but in vain, as Maranville and Dickson

STAHL DRIVES HIS MEN AT FAST PACE TO KEEP "ON EDGE"

Jake Stahl's only anxiety now is that the Red Sox may get "off form" and be "stale" for the world series. This is what he said to the Boston AMERICAN yesterday about the condition of his team

By JAKE STAHL.

(Manager of the Red Sox.)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 14.—So far we are all on edge, although Wood, Collins, Speaker and myself are under the weather. Tris had a severe cold in Chicago, but will be well in a few days. Joe has a mild attack of tonsilitis. Collins has a fever. My ankle is gaining strength now, and I know that we'll all be in shape by October.

But I have to keep the players driving continuously, because I don't want to take the chance of a slight slip-up getting them out of their stride. There are from four to seven games in a world's series, and it wouldn't do for a team being caught "off form" just at that time. They wouldn't have time to fully recover before the series was over. Some have been caught that way.. I don't want it to happen to us.

6 STARS ILL BUT SOX PLAY DAZZLING BALL

Stahl, Carrigan, Speaker, Wagner, Wood and Collins Are Under the Weather.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 14.—With their six chief players ill, the triumphant Red Sox are blazing an unbeaten trail across the West, while the Giants—all of them well—are using pinch hitters for their regulars and substitute pitchers for their mightiest box men in a desperate battle for the National League pennant.

Today's game with the St. Louis Browns was postponed on account of wet grounds, but one is scheduled for tomorrow, and the contest carded for today will be played Monday. Tomorrow the Red Sox, who have not yet lost a game in the West on this trip and who have won twenty-three, lost but four and tied one of their twenty-eight games, will resume their onward march to the pennant.

The relative condition of the Sox and Giants amazes western baseball "fans." The American League leaders have suffered the partial disabling of their six best men, and are still going on, winning game after game with furious fighting spirit, while the National League leaders are forced to call upon their substitutes to replace healthy regulars in an effort to squeeze through to the top of their own league race.

Six Men Affected.

This is something new in world championships.

Jake Stahl's legs bother him, one of his ankles being in such condition that he stays out of the game so as to try to be in form for the world's championship series.

Joe Wood, his premier slabman, has tonsilitis.

Ray Collins, his second pitcher, is suffering from malaria and has a high fever.

Tris Speaker, his brightest star, the mightiest clouter, runner and fielder of them all, has a severe cold that would send an ordinary athlete to bed.

Bill Carrigan, his master of "inside baseball," the man who has done most of the back-stopping and who will catch the whole world series, suffers from an ailment that causes intense pain and would drive most men to a hospital.

"Heinie" Wagner, captain of the team, has just recovered from a temporary break-down, caused by a cold and anxiety over the recent Wood-Johnson struggle.

Betting on the Red Sox.

This condition of affairs does not seem to bother the Red Sox leader or his men, because, even though ill, they are playing dazzling baseball.

On the other hand, the Giants are all reported well, but McGraw had a difficult job winning the last series with the St. Louis Cardinals. His two choice pitchers, Mathewson and Marquard, were roughly handled. He had to employ pinch hitters for his shortstop and his left fielder.

This contrast led to the unbelting of large sums, which Westerners today offered to bet at odds of 10 to 8 that the Red Sox would win the pennant.

PLAYING WAS VERY SLOW

Heat Greatly Slowed Up Two Elevens; Pendlebury Is Star of Game.

The football rules for 1912 were given their first tryout at Waltham yesterday afternoon by the Watch City eleven with Marlboro High as an opponent, in the Greater Boston schoolboy season opener. They will apparently bring about a closed style of offence this year, which in turn will have to be met by a tighter defence. Waltham won, 41 to 0.

Both elevens adopted the old time line-rushing style of play, which many followers of the game were looking for. The backs were sent smashing into the line looking for holes near the centre and guard positions, and almost every time got through for good gains because of the secondary defence being spread over too much ground. Long runs on line plays were made many times by the backs of both elevens.

The forward pass showed that the play would have to be reckoned with seriously because of the unlimited distance it can be thrown. Waltham used it twice so cleverly that touchdowns were the results and the play figured indirectly in two more tallies.

Many schoolboy coaches and players were on the sidelines to get an insight into how things were going. Waltham outplayed the lighter Marlboro team at all points of the game, but the contest gave some idea as to what can be expected later in the season when the elevens round up into shape.

A line play from formation was a good ground gainer for Waltham. Two of the backs made a hole through the guard or tackle and the third with the ball dived through after them. Gains of fifteen and twenty yards were made repeatedly when the play was pulled off. Darcy who was at left half for Marlboro jumped for long distances by the same play.

Waltham Team Still Crude.

Although it was hot football the contest gave an opportunity to size up the Waltham eleven which averages a great deal lighter in weight than last year. One hundred and forty founds is the average weight for Coach Dame's boys this Fall. Crude on many points of the game the team gives promise, however, of rounding up into a speedy aggregation. The loss

The Cmbridge A. A., composed of college men from Harvard, were defeated by the Winchester team at Winchester, yesterday afternoon, by a score of 3 to 1, in a fast clean game. The feature was the three-bagger by Whittaker, the "kid" pitcher for Winchester, and a sensational catch of a long hard fly in left field by Murray, also of the Winchesters. The score:

Ex-Gov. Draper Going to World's Series

Will Give His Impressions After Each Game to American Readers

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Am I going to attend the World Series? I most certainly am, and I am looking forward to the game with great interest. Baseball has always appealed to me, and I assure you I have taken in as many games this season as my business interests would permit. The Red Sox are certainly entitled to the pennant this year. They have played clean, masterly, consistent baseball and have deservedly won the commendation of all lovers of the game. Baseball is a great thing for the country, and it's a great thing for Boston and Massachusetts to have the pennant come here. I do not know how much my "impressions" of the World's Series games will be worth to your readers, but I am entirely willing to give them to the AMERICAN at the close of each game.

Harvard and U. of P. Renew Athletic Pact

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 14—Athletic relations between Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania have been renewed. Negotiations between the two old football rivals have been under way for some time, and during the past week, the trouble was patched up.

The University of Pennsylvania authorities have notified Cornell that hereafter the annual football game which has been the Thanksgiving Day attraction at Franklin Field will in the future be played only every second year.

The game with Cornell will be played this year as usual, however, but next season Penn will go to Ithaca for the match. The plan is to give Harvard the Thanksgiving date on alternate years, beginning in 1913, so that Penn will play her first game with Harvard in Boston in 1914.

Harvard was inclined to hold back at first, but finally consented to take on Penn again, after repeated overtures.

Peters Win Title.

C. J. Peters captured the championship of the photo engravers by defeating the Suffolk Engraving Company at Franklin Field yesterday, 5 to 3. Features were the pitching of Michaels and the batting and fielding of McDonald.

NAPS TWICE DEFEAT FALLING ATHLETICS

SOMERS PARK, Cleveland, Sept. 14.—Cleveland took both games of a double-header from Philadelphia here today, 9 to 3 and 4 to 2. In the first game Coombs was batted from the box, the Naps collecting five runs on seven hits in three innings. Houck, who succeeded the Iron Man, was also pelted hard, the Athletics giving him miserable support. Steen pitched a steady game, easing up in the last three innings, when the Mackmen scored three runs.

The second fray was a listless affair, being called at the end of the fifth inning on account of darkness. Crabb was derricked at the end of the fourth, after the Naps had scored four runs. Baskette held the Athletics well in check. The Naps' play throughout was marked by unusual ginger and daring on the bases, something that has not been in evidence with the Cleveland players in many a moon.

TWO RECORDS MADE.

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Sept. 14.—New middle Atlantic records were established in the half and one-mile runs of the Middle Atlantic records were established games, here today.

Carson of Germantown, bettered his mark of 2.03 in the half mile, when he ran 2.01 1-5 after a great race with O'Brien.

Lafuna ran his own way in the mile and bettered the record by one second, doing four minutes and thirty-five seconds.

Burdick of Pennsylvania, jumping for Pittsburgh, won the high jump with five feet ten inches, one inch better than the record he made last year.

Harry Fryckberg, the policeman athlete won the broad jump with 22 feet six three-quarter inches, two inches better than he made last year.

JOE WOOD MAY LAND PENNANT AND RECORD IN TODAY'S GAME

"Smoky Joe" Should Have an Easy Time in Vanquishing the Lowly St. Louis Browns, Who Are Led by Geo. Stovall

If Red Sox Win Today and the Athletics Are Defeated, Jake Stahl's Gallant Crew Will Have the Pennant Clinched

'THE BOYS MADE ME,' SAYS WOOD, AS HE FIGHTS FOR RECORD

Joe Wood, the star Sox pitcher, will probably go after his sixteenth straight victory against the St. Louis Browns tomorrow. If he wins, he will tie Walter Johnson's American League record. Wood credits "the boys"— [illegible] with his success. This is what he said to the Boston AMERICAN yesterday

By JOE WOOD.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 14.—"I don't see why I have been given such credit for winning as many games as I have this year. [illegible] you know, and without the help of the other boys where would I be? They have [illegible] and I'm going to do all I [illegible] to make them. I'll go in [illegible] my best, and I know the other fellows will help me. They've come to my rescue in many games this year. If I fail I'll blame myself, but it would be quite a feat if I could win twenty, wouldn't it?

"Of course I'd like to win sixteen straight, twenty, too, and beat Marquard's performance. But I'm not worrying about that [illegible]. We took the lead in the [illegible] because all the boys were trying to help out the other, [illegible] way with me. If I win [illegible] (Sunday) I shall be [illegible] but I won't change [illegible]

JOE WOOD premier pitcher of the country, will, in all likelihood, face the Browns today, and equal Walter Johnson's American League record of sixteen straight wins. He will also have the honor, if the Athletics lose to Cleveland, of placing his team secure from any possible chance of dropping the American League flag. As "Smoky Joe" has done the lion's share of the work in bringing this year's great triumph to Boston, there could be no more fitting honor fall to his [illegible]

Most pitchers would be content with the chance of doing either one of the two great stunts Sir Joseph may accomplish this afternoon, but since the initiation of the season, the Kansas Cyclone has delighted in doing what no other man ever did.

Joe's ability to hold down the Browns is a byword all over the circuit, and it is a safe bet that he will shut them out nine times out of ten that he faces them, provided, of course, that a shutout is necessary to win.

The Stahls have just twenty games left on their schedule. The Athletics, who dropped a double-header yesterday, have seventeen. If the Red Sox win today from St. Louis—as in all probability they will—and the Athletics drop another to the Naps, the standing of the two leaders will be Boston 97 won, 39 lost, Athletics 81 won, 57 lost.

If the Red Sox, after winning today, hit the worst slump ever known in baseball, and lose every one of their remaining nineteen contests, when the curtain falls their count will be 97 wins and 57 losses.

If, on the other hand, the Macks show a surprising spurt, and after falling today before Cleveland, get busy and pick up every game for the rest of the season—sixteen straight—they will have the same identical figures as the local squad at the end.

One of Boston's remaining games is a holdover from the last New York series. The Red Sox were booked for three, at the "Big City," but one was postponed, and it was agreed by the managers of the were easy victims, Bariden, in between, being very wisely passed.

PILGRIMS TAKE ONE BUT LOSE THE OTHER

Pilgrims Lead Short Lived.

As the two runs gave the locals the lead, the scant crowd was happy, and Bresnahan was cheered and jeered when he strayed to the platter, vice Griner. He connected, following which, a single, a double, Dickson's mesmeric spell, and a couple of out thrown in, were good for two runs and victory, as Geyer, who ascended the pitching hill in the last couple of essays, absolutely refused to be touched.

After sending the Cards back scoreless in the opening round of the second clash, despite a single and a triple, the Pilgrims immediately grew busy, and what with a walk, two singles and a double hung three runs up, enough, as it eventually proved, to win the game.

But not satisfied with this, they slapped out two more in the fourth, and then, to make assurance doubly sure, banged out six in the eighth with the utmost wholeheartedness.

Titus opened this illustrious session by drawing a base, which good fortune Houser followed up with his round trip bump. In the ensuing melee, Bariden, Brown, Jackson, Sweeney, Kirke and Titus connected safely and added four runs to the pile Houser gave for a starter.

The hostiles first score came in the fourth, Evans' double and Schoolboy Kelliher's rescue swat doing the trick.

Their other lone marker was plucked in the eighth, Koney producing a two baser after Ellis had drawn his third walk.

Save in these two instances the visitors had just as much chance of doing anything to Brown as the Red Sox have of losing the flag.

Ninth Inning Rally Gives Reading Game

With two men out in the ninth the Reading town team turned defeat into victory when Lahey slammed the first ball pitched by Harris for a single and scored Day and Stark, who were on second and third respectively.

LEW RITCHIE BEATEN BY TESREAU, 5 TO 0

Giants' Recruit Pitcher Has an Easy Time in Downing Chance's Team.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The New York Giants defeated the Chicago Cubs in easy style here today by a score of 5 to 0. "Big Jeff" Tesreau was on the mound for the National League champions and the big fellow had the visitors at his mercy throughout the entire contest, allowing but three scattered hits.

It was a great victory for the Giants, for they beat Lew Richie, their old hoodoo. The Giants touched up the Windy City hurler for seven hits, which enabled them to score five rounds, aided and abetted by an error and a little wildness on the part of Mr. Richie.

The work of Tesreau was a treat for local "fans," who believe that he will be the man to stop the Boston Red Sox in the World Series This Fall. Mathewson and Marquard have not pitched steady ball this season, and McGraw will probably depend upon this raw-boned youngster to bring the highest honor in baseball to this city.

Tesreau pitched a magnificent game today. He had great speed and was master of the situation throughout the entire nine innings. The score:

PIRATES WIN 11 STRAIGHT UNDER THE NEW RULE

BROOKLYN, Sept. 14.—The Pirates captured the opening game of the final series from the Dodgers today by a score of 6 to 2. It was the Buccaneers' eleventh straight victory and today's triumph brings them up to within a game and a half of the Cubs for second place honors. They have won the eleven straight since Fred Clarke allowed them to "break training." Cooper, the recent addition to the Pirates, outpitched Allen and Stack, but the three twirlers were hard hit at times. Cooper, however, was more even in the pinches. The score:

SENATORS LOSE TO TIGERS BY 3-2 SCORE

Tex Covington Back in Big Leagues and Errors Help Him Win His Game.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 14.—The Jenningsless Tigers, with Tex Covington, late of Providence, in the box, defeated the Nationals here, 3 to 2. Six hits were all Covington allowed, and no two were in the same frame.

Two hits, two errors, and a brace of passes gave the Tigers three runs in the first. Bush walked and went to third on Corridon's single to right. Corridon stole, Crawford drove a fly to Milan in deep centre, on which Bush scored. Corridon advanced on the play, scoring when Foster let Milan's throw to third go through him. Cobb advanced on Veach's out, Foster to Gandil, and scored when Gandil threw the ball away trying to get him going to third.

The Nationals nearly tied up the game in the eighth, when Covington lost control of the ball. Without a hit, three passes and a wild pitch to start the inning scored Foster and Milan. Three of the Senators were ejected. Connolly retired Young Engle for making too much noise in the dugout. Griffith and Schaefer were chased by Hart for objecting to a decision at first, in the eighth inning.

St. Eulalias Trim Roxbury Sox, 6 to 2

Playing against an all-star aggregation in the Roxbury Red Sox, the St. Eulalia team of South Boston added another victory to its long string by easily defeating them, 6 to 2.

Andy Owens, a former Worcester pitcher, did the box work for the visitors. He pitched well for five innings, allowing but one hit but then weakened and the St. Eulalias easily won out.

Kelly pitched a fine article of ball for the winners, keeping his hits well scattered. He was backed up in brilliant style by his team mates.

RED SOX TAKE FLAG WITH A GAME OR TWO

teams that if possible it would be played off in Boston, when the Yankees come here to close the season.

If the Boston leaders do not wish to play this game off there is no way under baseball law in which they could be forced to. If the team is in the middle of a bad slump it would be but natural for Stahl to refuse to play the game, as the consequent rest might be just what his team would need to get back on its stride.

With this point considered and that postponed game thrown out, under the conditions quoted, the Athletics, despite their winning streak, would land half a game behind at the finish.

And again, setting aside this postponed game, it is evident that if the Athletics do not lose today, or again this season, while Boston, going smoothly at an .800 clip just now, is able to win but one out of 19 games, the tribe from the Quaker City could nose out by half a game.

Rather stretching the bounds of imagination is it not, to forecast a clean sweep for the Macks, but entirely beyond the wildest visionings of a rabid Philadelphia fan is it to picture the Stahls dropping 18 out of 19 games, most of them with second division teams.

HOW THE RED SOX CAN WIN THE FLAG IN A DAY OR TWO

When the Red Sox win two more games they will win the American League pennant, even if the Athletics win all of their remaining games.

If the Red Sox win today and the Athletics lose, the Red Sox will win the pennant today.

If the Red Sox should lose all the games they have left, they would win the pennant when the Athletics last two games and Washington lost one.

The Red Sox have won 96, lost 38 and have *19 games yet to play.

The Athletics have won 81, lost 50, and have 17 yet to play.

The greatest number of games the Athletics can possibly win is 98. The Red Sox have already won 96.

The greatest number of games the Red Sox can possibly lose is 57. The Athletics have already lost 56.

The greatest number of games Washington can win is 97. The Red Sox have won 96. Washington has already lost as many games as the Red Sox could possibly lose, 57.

The Athletics can win the pennant by 1½ games if they win every remaining game and the Red Sox lose every remaining game.

The Senators can win the pennant by one-half game if they win every remaining game and the Red Sox lose every remaining game.

*The Sox have also one game postponed at New York which they cannot be required to play, and which will not count unless they elect to play it here.

Great Crowd Lines the Charles for the American's Races.

The most thrilling moment of the great Motor Boat Regatta of the Boston AMERICAN upon Charles River Basin yesterday occurred in the last race of the day when the hydroplane Baby Boy and the Premier Racer, Premier 3d, fought it out.

Down the lake them came, side by side and neck by neck. The hydroplane was leaping like a dolphin over the surface, raising two high white waves that were always threatening to swamp her, and tearing along at more than thirty miles an hour.

The Premier, 3d, long and low and narrow as a college rowing shell, cut through the water without fuss or splash and maintained even terms with the skimming flyer.

Thousands of spectators shouted excitedly and scores of motor horns shrieked and whined. Once the Premier forged ahead and later the hydroplane overtook and passed her.

20,000 See the Racing.

How the two fliers would have finished nobody knows, for the Premier's engine went bad and she dropped behind after the two fastest miles ever reeled off in these parts.

The Hydroplane won the race handily, for no other boat could compare with her for speed.

The Motor Boat Carnival was wonderfully successful when one considers that the sky was overcast and a downpour of rain threatened all the afternoon.

More than two score of boats raced in the various events and it seemed as if there were hundreds of the little craft as spectators.

Great Course for the Events.

The threatening weather had its effect upon the attendance, but there were at least 20,000 spectators lining the embankment in Boston and Cambridge.

Boston is the only city in the world which has a boat racing track two miles in circumference in the heart of the settled districts, and yesterday was the first time that this wonderful possession was utilized. The course for the motor boats was a circle of two miles between Herbard and West Boston bridges. It was staked out and patrolled by the metropolitan police in their swift launches, and not the slightest accident marred an afternoon of continuous racing.

The shortest race was six miles long, the longest fourteen, and most of the events were hotly contested.

A feature of the contest was the interest displayed by the residents of the row of trees whose homes have an outlook on the river. Nearly every window in these houses was occupied.

The University Club has taken advantage of its location to construct an open air restaurant, upon the terrace overlooking the Basin, and this vantage point was crowded during the afternoon with interested observers of the events on the water.

The races started promptly on time and continued within a reasonable period. Judge John Kleen gave the signal for the warning gun at 2.30 exactly, and at 2.35 the Class I contestants got away. This race was for racers (unlimited). It was unfortunately a procession. The Premier III., owned by the Premier Motor Company was so much faster than the other entries that she lost them before the first lap of the ten-mile race had been completed.

Close to 30 Miles an Hour.

The time made by the Premier for the ten miles was 26.40. During part of the time she travelled at a fraction under thirty miles per hour.

The second race was more keenly even and during the first two laps the Stuart Co., Bessie II. and Marion fought it out nip and tuck. The Stuart Co. forged ahead and covered the six miles in 22.36. The Bessie II. crossed the finish line in 24 minutes 35 seconds, and the Marion was close behind in 25 minutes 1 second.

Another pretty race was Class 3, for open boats under twenty feet. These little boats are not noted for their speed and it was creditable in the Dartaway to finish in 30.03, while the Vera followed her over the line in 34.30.

Cabin boats under 30, to the number of half a dozen, got away in spectacular fashion, but the race soon strung out, and the Heatherbell won in 24 minutes flat, three minutes ahead of the Mascot, her nearest competitor. The Gertrude ran the Mascot close and finished only 38 seconds later.

The slow coaches were class five cabin boats under thirty feet. The Thetis won this race in 35 minutes 45 seconds, with the Tacoumatin second and the Marion F. third.

A Fast Contest.

The hydroplane race was to have been between the Baby Boy, and the Why. The Why by one miss disabled a few hundred yards from the start and the hydroplane romped home alone, having traveled six miles in 20.40.

In the free-for-all the Premier and Hydroplane were expected to fight it all the engine of the Premier had failed her and she did not get ready until some time after the race had started. Accordingly she contented herself with the spectacular brush with the Hydroplane around above.

The second lap in this race was won by the Question, which was only four minutes behind the Baby Boy in fourteen miles. The Baby Boy made a mark of 37.15 for fourteen miles, showing remarkable speed.

HERRESHOFF VICTOR IN BIG GOLF MATCH

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., Sept. 14.—Fred Herreshoff was the winner of the invitation tournament of the National Golf Course of America, which ended this afternoon. The anticipated clash between Herreshoff and Harold H. Hilton did not materialize, however, for the Englishman who won at Apawamis last year, was eliminated in the semi-finals round by E. M. Barnes of Englewood, who had been counted an easy victim for the invader.

Barnes gave Hilton the hardest kind of a tussle that went to the nineteenth hole, but against Herreshoff the Englewood man was decidedly weak, and was defeated by six up and four to play, in a match that never was close enough to be interesting.

After halving the first hole Herreshoff took the lead by winning the second, and Barnes never succeeded in getting on even terms again.

The third hole brought forth the best shot of the entire match when Herreshoff using a spoon cleared the big bunkers and dropped his ball on the green not more than eight feet from the cup.

Coming in it was the same story. Playing with plenty of confidence Herreshoff let himself out on the tees and made two of three really remarkable drives. On the tenth he was straight down the course almost three hundred yards and at the twelfth he must have exceeded that figure by five or six yards.

ANDERSON WINNER IN A POOR MATCH

Beats Colombo in Tourney at Woodland Up and 3 to Play.

John G. Anderson of Brae-Burn, former amateur champion of this State, won the "Woodland Cup" at Auburndale yesterday when he defeated A. C. "Tony" Colombo of Woodland 4 up and 3 to play in a one sided and poorly played final match.

Both Anderson and Colombo had apparently turned out all their golf in the semi-final rounds where the former played a 73 and the latter a 76 earlier in the day. The final match found Anderson badly off form and Colombo worse. Anderson was getting his tee shots away none too well and Colombo was deplorable in putting.

The latter took fives on every hole going out, except the eighth which he won in a 4 to a 6 for Anderson. The Brae Burn player went out in 41 and was 4 up at the turn. His home coming, however, was bad for Colombo won the tenth in a 3 to a 4 and then followed a 6 for both on the eleventh and an 8 for both on the twelfth.

Then Anderson played the next four holes in even fours and won on the fifteenth green 4 and 3. Anderson appeared to play an easier game than last year but was not in fine fettle for a final match.

The second division playing for the President's cup, turned out a fine concluding contest between S. E. Thayer of Woodland and R. L. Smith of Winchester. Thayer had to give the Winchester player five strokes handicap, but played a 76 for the round, which was sufficient not only to overcome the handicap but to win by 3 and 2 on the sixteenth green.

The captain's cup went to G. L. Swett of Woodland, who, giving C. A. Macdonald of Invited three strokes, beat him 6 up and 4 to play.

The handicap versus par tournament, held all day yesterday for all members of the M. G. A., received forty-seven entries, and the par for the course proved too stiff to be beaten. W. E. Sibley and W. T. Hollis, both of Woodland, tied for the trophy, finishing even with par, which is 7[illegible]. The scores follow, with the summary of match play:

WOODLAND CUP—FINAL ROUND

J. G. Anderson, Brae-Burn, defeated A. C. Colombo, Woodland, 4 up and 3 to play.

PRESIDENT'S CUP—FINAL ROUND

S. E. Thayer (7), Woodland, defeated R. L. Smith (14), Winchester, 3 and 2.

Close Finishes Mark Gloucester Regatta

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 14.—There was a good afternoon's racing under the auspices of the Gloucester Yacht Club this afternoon, the Bar Harbor 31-footers and the 18-foot class proving exceptionally interesting. The conditions were very favorable for the heavy weather boats.

The Beverly boat Leenare had it out with the Onda from the first and was beaten by five seconds on the windward work to the westerly mark.

On the reach to the second buoy the Leenare passed to the front and stayed there.

In the 18 foot class the Tid and Aurora had a neck and neck struggle from start to finish. The summary:

Saylor Hopes for Win in Bout With Britton

Young Saylor, who will appear with Jack Britton in the main bout at the Pilgrim A. A., was employed in a starch factory in Indianapolis before he took up the fistic game.

Saylor is popularly called a "Hoosier lightweight," but the fact is that he is a Kentuckian. He was born at Stanford, Ky., twenty-three years ago, but has lived the greater part of his life in Indianapolis.

He has been boxing top-notchers in the lightweight ranks for the past three years, and has given them all tough battles. His bouts with Matty Baldwin, Ray Temple, Joe Mandot and Jack Britton were all hard fought. Saylor spent practically no time in the "prelim" class, jumping into main bouts in the middle west almost immediately after he started in the game.

The fact that he and Britton have boxed one great contest, at Memphis, Nov. 14, 1910, is making the "fans" believe that he has more than an ordinary chance with the clever boy from New York.

300 Chase Runaway Horse at Fair Races

A lively runaway of John Chadburne's b. g. Lyndhurst figured in the closing day of the 48th annual exhibition of the Weymouth Agricultural Industrial Society at South Weymouth yesterday afternoon.

The runaway happened when the 2:30 class was on and was caused by the driver slipping from the seat of his sulky. The horse bolted and ran in the direction of Lovell's corner, across fields and meadows, and 3,000 people took up the chase.

When captured he was uninjured and the only damage was the snapping of a few spokes in the wheel of the sulky.

Politicians were on hand and their followers distributed tons of literature. Among those present were Colonel Everett C. Benton, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor.

The ball team of the U. S. S. Georgia was defeated in an exciting, well played game, by the Norfolks of South Weymouth, by a score of 5 to 3.

A wrestling match between Archie Jeannette and John Carlson went 52½ minutes to a draw. Carlson was the aggressor throughout, but was unable to turn his man. They both weighed in at 145 pounds.

An aeroplane ascension by Joseph E. Boyle was postponed because of the high wind.

The trotting was the feature of the day and there were three classes. The 2.30 trotting class and the 2 27 class, trot and pace, went split heats.

The results of the card were as follows:

of Cobb, whose 220 pounds made him a big ground gaining asset, will prove a severe handicap to the Red and White eleven.

Among those who came to see how the game was played were Coaches John O'Reilly of Dorchester High, Daniel O'Flaherty of Cambridge Latin and John Reading of South Boston.

Forward Pass Valuable.

A good ground gainer for Waltham last year, the forward pass will be still more valuable this season. Once Fagan received the ball from Day and hurled it twenty-five yards to Johnson, giving him enough of a start to get away from the Marlboro tacklers and place the ball between Marlboro's goal posts. Another pass received by Cunningham resulted in a tally. Touchdowns by Pickett and Pendlebury were made possible by long throws in plays just previous.

Captain Peter Pendlebury, who was at right end for Waltham, succeeded in throwing off would-be tacklers repeatedly during the game. Carrying the ball from formation plays he hit the line hard and was always good to advance the ball for at least ten yards. Johnson, the heaviest man on the Waltham team, had a play which bothered the Marlboro defence in stopping. From his place at left tackle he ran around the opposite end for long distances.

Dacy Does Good Work.

Dacey was almost a whole team in himself and all of Marlboro's long gains were made by him.

Waltham, starting off in whirlwind fashion, got her first touchdown after the game had been on but four minutes.

Marlboro kicked off and Healey came in for five yards. Day was thrown for a loss. Rushes by the Waltham backfield brought the leather to Marlboro's 20-yard line. Pendlebury gained 15 yards in a play from formation. Johnson in a cross tackle dash went over. Fagan kicked the goal.

The kickoff went offside and Marlboro started her first rush on the 8-yard line. McGrath was nailed by five Waltham tacklers before he could move a yard. Marlboro fumbled on a formation play, but recovered and punted.

Day Run Thirty Yards.

Day gathered in the sphere on his own 30-yard line, and by zig-zagging down the field succeeded in throwing off the entire Marlboro eleven and going across the line. Fagan kicked a second goal.

McGrath returned the ball fifteen yards on the kickoff. A forward pass failed. Dacey gained six yards and Delorey tacked on two more. Line plays brought two gains which totalled fifteen yards. Waltham was penalized five yards for offside work. Marlboro tried a drop kick, but it was blocked and Waltham got the ball.

Starting from the 25-yard line, Waltham plugged the Marlboro line first on one side and then the other, until the ball was twenty yards away from the Marlboro goal. A forward pass, Day to Fagan to Johnson, put it over, and Fagan booted the ball between the posts.

Dacey gained ten yards on the kickoff but Waltham held. Day took the punt in ten yards. Dacey nailed Cunningham. A forward pass, Fagan to Johnson, netted fifteen yards. Waltham was penalized fifteen yards because Johnson hurdled. Fagan sent a forward pass to Pendlebury and Cunningham went over from the ten yard line.

Waltham was twice penalized for holding, being sent back fifteen yards once and twenty-five the second time in the last quarter.

Manila Boy Triumphs Over His Old Rival

Manila Boy came back into his own yesterday afternoon at the races of the Dorchester Driving Club, held at the Franklin Field Speedway, by beating out his old rival, Charley King. Although the race was not in as fast time as the horses have been making both the heats were very interesting.

Another surprise of the afternoon was the second race on the card in which H. P. Gallup, driving Earl King, beat out C. E. R., E. F. Poer's strong gelding, in two out of the three events raced.

The summary:

Border Defeats Banty After Five Hot Heats

In Class B, Banty took the first heat after pacing neck and neck around the half-mile track and through the stretch.

Border landed the next two, but in the fourth, Banty came back strong and won by a nose after a smashing drive through the stretch.

Men Who Stand

Need an O-P-C

An O-P-C suspensory is an essential to men who are much on their feet.

There is too much drain on the nerve force without it. You can't afford the waste.

Even men who stand little lose half their energy through this needless drain.

Every man would be more a man if he wore an O-P-C. He would have more vim and vitality.

He will tire less easily—have greater capacity.

Legions of men have proved this. You can prove it in a week yourself by wearing this simple, silken comfort.

The O-P-C is the scientific suspensory, famous for 20 years. Our book will tell you why you need it—what it does. Write for it.

All druggists guarantee you satisfaction with an O-P-C. No. 2, Lisle, 75c—No. 3, Silk, $1.00. Mailed direct from 45 W. Twenty-Fifth Street, Chicago, if your druggist will not supply you.

If You Wanted to KEEP a Loaf of Bread You Wouldn't Cut It in Slices

The best bread ever baked would be uneatable the second day, if it were sliced. All the MOISTURE and GOODNESS of the bread would DISAPPEAR in the air, the slices would curl up and—maybe the chickens would enjoy it—YOU WOULDN'T.

And these PRINCIPLES apply to smoking TOBACCOS.

The fragrant leaves are gathered, cured and, under tremendous pressure, made into "plug" form. Then the manufacturer chops it up into slices, crinkles or granulates it. It is packed in a can and, later, you get it from your dealer.

Doesn't it stand to reason that some of the original fragrance and flavor of the tobacco has DISAPPEARED—that you are smoking something that isn't as good as it ought to be? What's the answer?

Why not whittle up your own tobacco from the original plug, instead of letting the manufacturer do it long before the tobacco gets into your pipe?

Then you get a REAL tobacco. A tobacco in which all the ORIGINAL flavor, sweetness and fragrance REMAINS.

Of course, it takes a minute to whittle off enough tobacco to fill your pipe, but after you have made the experiment ask yourself whether it wasn't well worth while.

Master Workman Plug is sold everywhere. Just whittle off a pipe load and light up and then as the blue smoke curls up, see if you don't admit it's the best smoke you've ever known.

LIST OF CONTESTANTS IN BOSTON AMERICAN WORLD SERIES RACE

SECRET OF WOOD'S PENNANT WINNING "SNAP BALL"

Five phases of Joe Wood's delivery, which has made him the pitching king of 1912. Three motions of the arm show how he acquires momentum. Notice that the wrist, as shown by the dotted line, snaps the ball at the end of the arm motion. Besides giving it speed this rotates the ball, as shown by arrows, and it "jumps" before it reaches the batter, as indicated by the dotted line to the batsman.

Walter Johnson Feared That Wood Would Lose His Speed and Many Experts Thought He Would Throw His Wrist Out"—But Cy Young Pitched That Way and Outlasted Them All—and Wood Grows Better All the Time—How His Great Fast Ball" Is Delivered.

WHEN Walter Johnson was in Boston last May he made the dire prediction that Joe Wood was nearing the end of his rope as a great pitcher. He said, in fact, that Wood would cease to be great before he had time to become famous.

The mighty Johnson, who, by the way, was vanquished a week ago by that same Joe Wood in the most remarkable pitching contest of years, based his opinion on what seemed to him to be the probable effect of the deadly "snap ball" pitched by Wood.

"I know Wood is a remarkable young pitcher," said Johnson. "He has tremendous speed. But he acquires that speed in such a way that he can't stand it long. In fact, although Joe has been pulling his team out of the fire very often this season he's kept it in second place (the Sox were second then), he is not going so fast as he used to travel, and I am afraid he will soon cease to be as effective as he is now, if he does not have to retire altogether."

But Johnson was wrong. Wood does pitch the deadly "snap ball." But it is not entirely different, except in detail, from the "snap ball" Cy Young used to pitch when he was a young man, and Cy remained some time in the pitching game—about twenty-three years, to be more definite.

Walter Johnson made his prediction not in a deprecating way. He was rather depressed about it. One great man always admires another. Johnson hoped that Wood would "change his pace" before it was too late. He was not a bit fearful of the rivalry of the other of the two American League speed kings against himself. Johnson is a good fellow. He is a "big fellow" in mind and character as well as in body.

Grows Better All the Time.

It happens, though, that instead of fading away Wood has increased his ability. His fast ball is faster than ever and he has won the unprecedented proportion of thirty-one games to only four lost this year, the highest record ever attained by a baseball pitcher. Besides, he is within reach of the world's record for consecutive victories.

All of this despite the tremendous strain of pitching that deadly "snap ball," which has been the terror of American League batters and which stands between the New York Giants and the world's baseball championship.

Johnson is not the only man who ever warned Wood. Many other baseball players have told him the same story.

"Doesn't your wrist ever go back on you?" they ask "Smoky Joe." "It it hasn't it will. Some day you will 'throw it out' and then what?"

"I've never felt the slightest trouble with my wrist," replied Wood to all of these warnings. "I never feel any strain on it when I am pitching. I think you are mistaken. I think myself that the speed and hop of the [illegible] come more from the knack of snapping it out of my hand than from the force of that snap. I have been told that I pitch a 'snap ball,' that is, that I snap the ball to the batter by a jerk of the wrist—but, to tell the truth, I don't know whether that is so or not.

"I have pitched that way ever since I played baseball. I don't notice any particular snap or wrist strain as I let go of the ball, but those who watch me pitch say that it is so, so it must be."

Wood's confidence that he does not suffer injury from pitching that kind of a ball is backed by the veteran experience of Cy Young. Cy commented on Wood's delivery last year, when Joe was "going fast," but now and then slowed up and was beaten toward the end of a game.

Cy Young Had Confidence in Wood.

"I don't think Joe's arm or wrist will ever go back on him if he uses them judiciously," said the Grand Old Man. "I used to pitch with a snap that way, and I used speed almost altogether in my younger days. Gradually I learned that it was not wise to speed them over all of the time. I tried to learn to pitch as few balls as possible in each game—let them hit it, in fact—and to use just as much speed as required, and no more. To that I attribute the long years I remained in the game.

"I never had trouble with my wrist. I have never had the least trouble with my arm, and I have been in the game twenty-two years. I don't use the speed now, because I haven't so much. But that's only the natural slowing up of older years; I lose nothing by my style of delivery."

Wood's Style of Delivery.

Wood DOES snap the ball in the way shown in the accompanying illustration, and that is the secret of his marvelously fast and puzzling delivery which has done more than anything else to win this year's American League pennant for Boston. But Wood has a tremendous right wrist. It has gradually developed from this style of delivery until it is now actually huge—and as hard, almost, as steel. Although the other Red Sox are all muscular, none of them has a right wrist like Wood's.

If you shake hands with the speed marvel of 1912, you will notice the remarkable strength and size of the pitching hand and wrist, in proportion to the left hand and wrist in proportion to the left own. Wood is of the Indian type of athletic build. He is 5 feet, 11¼ inches in height and weighs 176 pounds. He is slender, but as hard as iron. In the five years he has been with the Red Sox he has grown and has filled out naturally, because he is only twenty-two, but he has never taken on extra weight out of proportion to his frame.

Wood is "hard as nails," and has a physique that should stand more strain later than it does now. He is the slenderest of all of the great pitchers.

But it is that wrist that counts. Wood's right hand is abnormally large, but it is graceful in comparison with most ball players. The fingers are long and with unusual muscles. The wrist, as said before, is tremendous. It is a huge band of muscles surrounding the small bones at the junction of hand and arm.

How Wood is Protected.

The delicate adjustment of these bones is the cause for anxiety. It does not take much strain to displace them. Once out of place, a pitcher's hand would lose its cunning. In Wood's case, the huge muscles undoubtedly save the wrist from any danger of injury. That band of muscular tissue evidently relieves the strain, so that there may be no more danger of Wood "throwing his wrist out" than a man of ordinary build would incur in using a typewriter.

If you could place your own right hand and wrist beside Wood's—however sturdy you are—you would be astonished at the immense difference.

Then, too, Wood has learned to follow Cy Young's advice, and he does not work his wrist so hard this year as he did last, notwithstanding he is much more successful as a pitcher. You see he conserves his energy by mixing in more curves and slow balls with his "fast ball," so that he lasts longer and does much more in the long run.

All of this leads up to the secret of Wood's delivery. As nearly as can be determined from a study of his arm in motion, the ball that has "stood the American league on its head" is delivered as shown in the illustration.

Wood grasps the ball with the first two fingers at the top, the other two at the right side of the ball and the thumb directly beneath the first two fingers.

How He Pitches the "Fast Ball."

For his fastest ball he holds the sphere tightly, and loosens his grip for slower "fast balls," so that he can fool the batter by hurling with just as much force but actually throwing the ball slower.

From behind his head, where both hands are together before delivery, he brings his right arm well up and over—about a half or three-quarter arm swing. As it comes over, the wrist gradually droops farther behind, as shown in the vertical arm picture, and as the arm, gradually increasing speed and momentum, reaches nearly a horizontal position, the wrist, which is then almost at right angles—as shown by dotted lines—snaps downward with a jerk, and the ball is released.

It shoots toward the batter with speed compared to that of a rifle ball. As it goes there is a twirling motion in the direction indicated by the arrows. As the ball reaches a spot, governed by the skill and experience of the twirlers, it appears to take a "hop," so that the batter frequently hits below it as it passes over the plate, as indicated in the batting diagram.

That is all there is to Wood's "fast ball." His curves and slow balls he pitches, in general, about as other pitchers do, except that he has acquired better control than most of them.

But it's the "fast ball" that counts, and that is the one that strikes them out when Wood needs a strikeout.

HARVARD ELEVEN TO TURN OUT TOMORROW

Many Star Men Will Be Unable to Report Until Late in the Week.

FIRST GAME WITH MAINE

Logan and Brickley Two of the Best Recruits Out for Varsity Team.

HARVARD'S first football practice starts tomorrow in the Stadium, and many of the old stars are already in town awaiting this week's work, which, aside from becoming acclimated to the new rules and gridiron, will push the candidates to their utmost for a chance to play in the opening game against Maine one week from Saturday.

The entrance examinations started last Thursday and continue until Thursday of this week. These will occupy the attention of no few candidates, and so it is that the Crimson squad will not be swelled to its full quota until Friday, leaving but one week in which to prepare for the first game of the season.

"Sam" Felton, who did the kicking last year and who is rated as one of the best punters Harvard ever had, is still an uncertain quantity. During the Summer he attended the Summer course at the Rindge Technical School to work off conditions, and if he returns and is able to play another mainstay will be added to the quartet remaining who played in the Yale game last Fall.

Large Squad Is Expected.

F. J. O'Brien, end, and H. McGuire, guard, are two more who have "exams" to take before their eligibility is fully established. There will be, however, a goodly squad out tomorrow to take down the first instructions under Head Coach Percy Haughton and Captain P. I. Wendell.

At Soldiers Field everything is in readiness. The gridiron in the Stadium has been marked out and looks strangely unfamiliar with the new end zones behind each goal post. Two more fields have been laid out.

The freshmen will start their practice Tuesday and plenty of good material for that team is available. The same condition exists with the freshmen that the varsity has to put up with, however, for a large number of men who are expected to enter and make the team are still harassed by the entrance "exams" and will be uncertain quantities until the end of this week.

Some definite "dope" is abroad nevertheless, for it is generally conceded that Gardner will be beaten out for his position as quarterback by "Mal" Logan of the freshman team last year. The later showed marked ability in the games last year, having far better control over his team and his head. His generalship was good, in fact, excellent in comparison to the erratic work of Gardner.

Brickley is Another Star.

Charlie Brickley, formerly of Everett and captain of the freshman eleven, will be out Monday and is practically assured of a place in the backfield. Brickley did some fine drop kicking last season and will work in well for the [illegible] that capacity this year, for Harvard is without a good drop kicker.

Most of the candidates have been putting on as much weight as possible during the past Summer, and Wilkerton has been perhaps the most successful, appearing a lot heavier than last season. This latter idea is a result of the rules for 1912, which have made the light [illegible] of last season undesirable.

The return of the [illegible] and rushing the [illegible] is inevitable, although the form of play offers [illegible] from the old game that predictions as to its feasibility are useless. It must be left to a season's tryout before recommendation.

The exchange of the Carlisle game for one with the Vanderbilt team of Nashville, Tenn., brings disappointment and expectancy alike. Vanderbilt is a faster aggregation than is anticipated and has not played teams in the past that would warrant Harvard to judge her. Last season this Tennessee team rolled up [illegible] points against nine adversaries. It was scored upon by but one team, Michigan, which won over Vanderbilt by 9 to 8.

Contest Now Nearing to an End

Today's list of vote standing does not contain the name of any candidate who has less than 10,000 votes to his or her credit.

Every fan whose name appears in today's list has a fighting chance, and the thing to do is to make every minute count from now until the last ballot is printed on Sunday, September 29.

Just two weeks more and twenty New England "fans" will be the proud possessors of credentials which will permit them to enjoy the entire World's Series games.

And that it will be well worth the effort is plainly apparent from the mad scramble which has already begun to purchase seats for the series.

Here's the standing compiled up to Wednesday, September 11, at 11 a. m., of all candidates who had to their credit over 10,000 votes.

Reserved Seats to World Series for American Readers

Thousands of baseball fans will be as eager to see the world's series games that will be played at the Polo Grounds, New York, as those that will be contested at Fenway Park. To stand in front of bulletin boards, even in the best of weather conditions, is most tiresome.

The Boston AMERICAN has therefore arranged for a big treat to the first 5,000 of its readers who take advantage of the arrangements just completed.

The one big, comfortable hall in Boston for reproducing the world's series games is the Boston Arena—and the management has arranged an elaborate $2,500 reproduction of the world's series games when played in New York.

A gigantic board with megaphone reproducers will show and tell every happening in the games by special leased wires direct from the Polo Grounds, with the Boston AMERICAN'S greatest baseball experts on the New York end telling the Boston fans everything that goes on the instant it occurs.

You can sit comfortably in a reserved seat, smoke, and enjoy the game almost with the same enthusiasm as you would were you there.

Elsewhere in today's Sunday AMERICAN you can learn how to be among the 5,000 fortunate ones who obtain reserved seats for the big reproduction at the Boston Arena.

Successful Regatta Closes Lynn Season

LYNN, Sept. 14.—The Lynn Yacht club held its final regatta this afternoon and closed for the season tonight, when ex-Commodore "Billy" Russell presented cups to the owners of the winning boats.

What was expected to prove a hot battle between the Maritza II. and the Winlahdin, skimming dishes of Interclub class S, proved a walk-over for the former.

Bang and go-bang racing resulted in a close finish by the power boats which raced out for 25 minutes and then at a gun turned back. Nellie M. won by seconds from the Salome and Igo.

Six started for the Commodore's cup, and the winner was the La Villa, formerly Rob Roy, sailed by ex-Commodore Robert A. Strong, was the winner.

The auxiliaries had a beat to the bell buoy, a reach to old Flip, a reach back to Whistler, and a run home over an [illegible] mile course. There was a fresh southerly breeze and times were good, especially that of the Maritza II. The summary:

CLOSING REGATTA AT BUZZARDS BAY

BUZZARDS BAY, Sept. 14.—The twelfth and last race of the season of the Beverly Yacht Club was held this afternoon off the club house at Wings Neck on the Pocasset Shore.

The wind was from the southwest and blew a fair breeze all afternoon, but when the boats left the highlands near the lighthouse they encountered choppy seas and fog on the last legs of the long courses. The average wind, however, was a good full-sail breeze.

The twenty-one foot class was sailed over course eleven, a triangular course of eleven and three-quarters miles to Bird Island and Bow Bells Buoy and return. There was a scramble for the starting gun, but the Skate finally got the start and a good puff of wind sent her several lengths ahead of the other boats, among which was the pennant winner, Foraminifer with D. L. Whittemore at the tiller. The Whittemore boat fought hard to get the lead but the wind was just made for the Skate and she easily crossed ahead of the Foraminifer by four minutes and twenty seconds. There was an exciting finish between the Pollywog and the Saracen, the latter falling back to fourth place. The Selwonk loosened her rigging on one of the outer legs of the course and did not finish.

The Crane fifteen-foot class was sailed over course fifteen to Abiel's Ledge and Bird Island, a distance of eight miles. Again the Austin boat, the Pioneer, led the fleet and kept in the lead all the way around the course, finishing easily seven minutes ahead of the nearest rival, the Water Witch, sailed by Miss Elizabeth Coolidge. The racing in this class was rather slower than last week, and the exciting finishes were missing.

This is the first season for this class to sail in Buzzards Bay waters, and by next season the interest in this type is bound to bring out a much larger fleet.

Miss Esther Hoamer again came forward in the Herreshoff class with her Pronto, and easily captured the race by over three minutes from the Vim, sailed by Miss Eunice Taylor. This fifteen-foot class was sailed over the same course as the Crane boats, but did not make as good time by fourteen minutes.

FOUR MOTOR RACES WILL BE DRIVEN THIS WEEK AT MILWAUKEE

The Entry List for the Grand Prize and Vanderbilt Although Not as Large Numerically as in the Past Give Promise of Good Contests

By J. C. KERRISON.

The great racing classics of the year will be held at Milwaukee during the coming week, starting with the Grand Prize race on Tuesday and concluding with the Vanderbilt Cup Race on Saturday, with the competition for the Milwaukee Cup held on Friday. This makes three big races in the calendar week and gives some of the best known of the drivers in the country an opportunity to show what they can do on the 8.2 mile course

The race on Tuesday will be a slashing contest from start to finish, giving the men an opportunity to produce speed and records in plenty at the 410-mile distance. The course has been specially improved and is said to be one of the speediest race courses in America, although nothing can really be determined as to the speed of the track until an actual contest has been held on the same.

The fact that the first five competitors will receive substantial monetary remuneration has done considerable towards bringing some of the best men to the course. In addition to the cup, the winner of the contest will receive $5,000 in cash and $5,000 additional will be divided between the next four men to finish.

The Grand Prize contest being an international event, is sanctioned by the Automobile Club of America, and the Wisconsin, Pabst and Vanderbilt cup contests are under the sanction of the American Automobile Association, the entire series of races being held under the supervision of the Milwaukee Automobile Dealers' Association.

David Bruce-Brown two-time winner of the Grand Prize race will be seen at the wheel of a monster Fiat and Ralph De Palma and Hughey Hughes, who captured the highest honors at Elgin, will drive Mercedes and Mercers respectively. Teddy Tetzlaff, the best known of Western drivers, who averaged 78.5 miles per hour in the Santa Monica road race, will be a team mate to Bruce-Brown, and Caleb Bragg will also drive a Fiat. Bragg alternated with Tetzlaff in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis last May and secured second place with him. The speed king, Bob Burman, who has outspeed everything but a bullet, will be at the wheel of a Benz machine. Erwin Bergdoll will be a team mate of Burman's. There are several other noted drivers who have made tentative entries whose names will be announced before the entries close on Monday

The race on Wednesday will be centred in the small car, or "baby car" event for the Wisconsin trophy. This is a Class "C" non-stock race for cars having 161-230 cubic inches. The little machines will cover a total of 175.5 miles. In this race are entered three Mercer cars, a Mason, a Case and a Cino.

The competition for the Pabst trophy is open to Class "C" non-stock cars having a piston displacement of 231.800 cubic inches. The cars in this event will be required to cover 218 miles. The award of possession of the trophy for one year carries an additional prize of $2,000 in cash, to the winner. Analogous to the Vanderbilt Cup conditions a special Deuch's trophy for permanent ownership will go to the winner. The cars so far entered in this event are three Masons, two Flanders and a Herreshoff machine.

Everything is in readiness for the meet A grand stand seating 35,000 people has been erected. Bart J. Ruddle, manager of the meet, I. G. Hickman, president of the M. A. A. D. A. August A. Jonas, chairman of the racing board and others of the committee have made every provision to safeguard the public and entertain. Milwaukee expects to have about 100,000 visitors

Settle 20,000 Auto Claims Every Day

Motor Car Insurance Men Tabulations Show Percentage of Each Make.

Automobile insurance, protecting the owners of cars against accident, robbery and other hazards, is now a highly specialized business. More than 20,000 claims are passed on daily by the officers of the seventy-four accident insurance companies, making up what is known as the Detroit conference. Records on which rates are based rival in degree of completeness those accumulated in many years of life insurance history

One of the most interesting tables furnished the conference at its annual meeting in Detroit a few days ago showed the percentage and variety of accident, arranged according to the various makes of motor cars

Strenuous efforts were made by several manufacturers to secure this table It was readily appreciated that the manufacturer whose cars made the best showing in the table would be fully qualified to claim big product the safest on the market. The insurance men refused to allow such use of their private information, but the word was quietly passed around that the identity of the true leader in the list would be disclosed in an informal way before the conference was over

Auto Ride for Delegates.

One of the scheduled events of the Detroit meeting was an automobile ride which would carry the delegates around Belle Isle, through a part of the big manufacturing district and along the shore of Lake St. Clair, east of town It was naturally inferred that the executive officers of the big accident insurance companies would pick for this outing those cars which their tables showed primarily the safety leadership.

Detroit hospitality was never more in evidence. All the Detroit manufacturers offered cars for the excursion Offers were also made by dealers representing manufacturers located elsewhere The conference virtually had its pick of the entire American field

Selected Studebaker Cars.

"The decision came in the form of a letter to the Studebaker Corporation from Henry C. Walters, representative of the conference," writes Paul Hale Beuhler of the Studebaker publicity department. In it Mr. Walters reviewed the situation and stated that, with the safety tabulation playing the star part in the choice the members of the conference had expressed a desire to make the scheduled ride in Studebaker cars

"The cars were gladly supplied and the trip made without incident. The Studebaker "20" and "30" cars living up to their tabulated safety reputations in every respect

"The testimonials from the insurance experts is probably the first that has ever been tendered a car in a contest where safety was the sole determining factor."

NEW COLONIAL TYPES.

American Underslung Will Show Limousine Models.

The first Colonial type of limousine that the American Motors Company are manufacturing will be on inspection in the showrooms of Roberts & Sherburne, the distributors of this line, at No. 121 Massachusetts avenue, within a few days. The Colonial type coupe on the chassis of the American Underslung model is either a novel car, inasmuch as it is a three-seated affair, while an auxiliary folding seat is provided for at the left of the steering column. When not in use this folds into the dash and does not disfigure the appearance of the car

All the windows drop and the glass front can be raised, making the car equally comfortable in Summer as in Winter. The control levers are all on the inside.

Manager Jack Hamilton says that the Colonial type limousine coupe, known as the American Tourist coupe, will cause some sensation in local motoring circles when it arrives here and that it is a very distinctive car

"The arrangement of the doors is rather unusual," says Mr. Hamilton. "A full length door being provided on the left side for the accommodation of passengers in the front seat. There is but one door for the tonneau and this on the right-hand side, allowing access from the curb. The fifth auxiliary seat is so arranged as to fold and fit snugly in the upholstering on the left-hand side just in front of the rear seat. This is a combination body such as has never before been offered, being a five or four-passenger limousine and a five or four-passenger coupe. A removable partition which folds flush with the rear of the front seat is provided for so that the car can be used either as a five-passenger coupe when the owner is driving, or can be instantly converted into a five-passenger limousine, the driver's seat being completely cut off from the rear. Both of these cars are elaborately finished.'

IN NEW FIELDS.

The White Company announces the association with its New England branch, No. 320 Newbury street, of Captain Harry G. Chase, acting chief signal officer M. V. M

Captain Chase has been a member of the faculty of Tufts College for the last seventeen years, holding during the last five the professorship of physics. The captain's scientific training and his wide acquaintance will still further increase the efficiency of one of the best sales forces in the business. He will devote the major part of his time to the line of commercial cars built by the White Company.

BAD ROADS KEEP MOTORISTS AWAY

With Better Highways Europeans Would Flock Here, Says Lord Montagu.

Lord Montagu, who recently returned to London after a tour of several weeks in this country, believes that good roads will eventually be built, and that there is no reason why the number of automobiles used in North America should not run into the millions. With improved highways, this British authority, who has evidently made a careful study of the situation, predicts that European tourists will flock to this country and enjoy its scenic beauties.

The absence of good roads is the one great drawback which prevents the United States and Canada from being widely known among the motorists of the world is the assertion made by Lord Montagu, who is editor of The Car, in the current number of one of Britain's leading motoring publication

Automobilists and others interested in the highways will read with interest Lord Montagu's views as expressed in his review of touring conditions here

"The influence of bad roads upon American automobilists is seen in the fact that the clearance between the ground and the lowest point of the chassis has to be greater than in Europe, and the extra wear and tear on the machinery occasioned by holes, ruts and boulders is very leading to greater strength being needed in certain directions.

Influence of Bad Roads.

"Even in the bigger cities the driver has to be always on the qui vive, for any street may be found full of holes and gaping ruts. Therefore, refinement in surface or any really good body work is almost impossible owing to the wear and tear occasioned by these fearfully uneven surfaces. The greatest street surface destroyers are the tramways, whose permanent way is generally shockingly maltreated

"And yet the American and Canadian privately owned motor car is mostly used as a pleasure vehicle and for little else, and not as much for utilitarian purposes as in Great Britain or Europe as a whole. In the towns the absence of a rule of horse-drawn cabs or taxicabs to be hired at a reasonable price has led to the extended use of private vehicles instead. Touring on a large scale is impossible, owing to the absence of good roads, but everywhere I found the desire to tour and efforts made to find out where touring could take place.

"And, last, but not least, there is a great lack of reliable information as to the country as a whole, and no good maps are yet attainable for use, except of districts near the larger towns. Naturally a continent 3,000 miles east and west by 2,000 miles north and south has not been yet charted or explored from a road point of view.

Has Uphill Battle.

"But road information and the other requisites of touring are steadily growing, and before long touring in America in a motor car will be as common as it is in Europe. So far automobilism in American and Canadian cities has had to fight an uphill battle against the strong influence of the tramway, which in some cases is not only urban, but suburban, and even rural in character

"Tramcars go into districts far beyond the suburbs, and in many cases along roads which are almost impassable for other vehicles. In fact, the tramways are really ordinary electric railways in most cases, and their monopoly hitherto of transportation is difficult to break down. In course of time no doubt these conditions will change, and highway authorities will make those railways do their duty and carry out the terms of their contracts as regards road repair, for at present a great deal of the badness of urban and suburban roads is due to the street railways, and in time the motor-omnibus will come as well, and then the fun will begin."

Willys Says Autos Are Near Perfect

Believes His Company Has Reached the Limit In Motor Car Value.

"Never will the automobile be better made than it is today," says President John N. Willys of the Willys-Overland Company. "Motor cars are as near perfect as mechanical genius, human brains and automatic machinery can make them They will never be made any better because new wood will not be grown, because the earth will never yield up better ores, because cattle will not produce better hides for upholstering and because human brains and energy will never be at a higher development than now

"When I say cars will never be better, I naturally am referring to those standard makes which have been thoroughly tested by the public and which have stood the acid test. Of course, there are many makes on the market that could be greatly improved, but the honest cars at honest prices are as near perfect as is possible to produce them

"In the 1913 thirty-horsepower fully equipped Overland touring car I honestly believe that even with our huge plant, high standard of efficiency and distributing system, we have reached the limit in quality for value."

Study Desires of Fastidious Buyers

Garford Company Pays No Attention to Demand for Medium Price Cars.

Specialization in any trade or profession results in perfection ultimately, and the Garford Company of Elyria, O., which is owned by John N. Willys, maintains that no motor car concern has adhered to this maxim more closely than have the makers of the high grade Garford car

The Garford Company has specialized on high grade cars and studied the wants and desires of those fastidious buyers of the very best products that the world produces, forgetting that there is any other class of buyers and paying no attention to increasing demands for medium priced cars

The Garford six-cylinder 50-horse-power touring cars, Berlines and limousines, are the result of years of specialization, and embody in their construction the best of material, silks, upholstery, woods and other parts that are required in high grade motor car construction

The "queen" of the Garford line is the luxurious Berline. It includes all those niceties demanded by last ladyship for Fall and Winter, for the opera, shopping, calling and suburban use.

C. L. Morgan Resigns.

C. L. Morgan, until recently sales manager of the electric division of General Motors Truck Company, Pontiac, Mich., has entered his position to become associated with the Moon flopkins Billing Machine Company of St. Louis as Eastern sales agent. Mr. Morgan's new headquarters will be at No. 350 Broadway, New York city.

Autos Carried Free on French Railroad

With Three First Class Tickets Motorists May Ship Car as Baggage.

Motorists in France are rejoicing, in all the demonstrative ways peculiar to the Latin race, for now one may take one's motor car along on a railroad trip free of charge—in the baggage car! Such is the dictum of the railroad of Orleans, issued last month, and traveling over that road has since increased in alarming proportion.

As the railroad company explains it, the rule is for the benefit of families who desire to travel to a distant point in France, there to spend a vacation touring, but who do not like to submit their car to the strenuous and somewhat uncertain work of bringing the tourists home—over some five hundred or more miles of ordinary road.

Therefore, any family of three or more persons, purchasing first-class tickets to a distant Pump resort, may take a motor car free of charge, in the baggage car of the same train that carries the passengers.

Wallace G. Page, for many years connected with the Shawmut Tire Company as sales manager, has become associated with George S. Van Voorhis in the American Marine Equipment Company, with headquarters at 27 Haverhill street, Boston. This company has built up a large business selling automobile tires and supplies. Mr. Page's past experience together with his recognized ability should give even more prompt and efficient service to this company in the selling of automobile supplies

What State Is It From?

Could you tell if you saw this car on the open road? Or would it pass you in a cloud of dust and leave you still wondering where its occupants hailed from? There's a lot of satisfaction in being able to identify just where a car comes from. It adds interest to a day's run or an extended tour.

And it is simple—very simple, for every car carries a distinguishing mark in its license. Each State has a characteristic license tag. It matters not whether the car came from Maine or California, Florida or Washington, the arrangement of the license number will tell you which, at a glance.

How to know these number plates is an absorbing study. It is fully explained, with illustrations of the tags issued by every State of the Union, in the September MoToR.

And besides this big article, the September number is a gold mine of information. "Does it pay to buy over-size tires?" "The annual output of American versus foreign-built cars," "New things for the motorist," "Helpful Hints" are a few among the many vital problems discussed by practical men in a practical way. NEW FIRM OF MOTOR EXPERTS

Will Handle "Little," Chevrolet and Columbus Electrics in New England.

Tyler corporation has opened temporary headquarters in the Motor Mart, Park square, to handle what it considers a line of self-sellers that will appeal to everyone.

The president of this company is Frank J. Tyler, known so well and favorably to the New England motoring public for the past ten years, and the treasurer, L. S. Tyler, who has been so long identified with Frank J., first with the Maxwell-Briscoe Boston Company and later with United States Motors here in New England.

The line that this new corporation will handle consists first of the "Little" car, which is a four-cylinder runabout with sliding gear transmission, which comes fully equipped with top, wind-shield, gas lamps, Prest-O-Tank. Several of these cars are already on the floor of the Tyler Bros. Corporation in the Motor Mart and are ready for immediate delivery.

Another model of the "Little," due shortly, is a six-cylinder car, fully equipped with electric generating system for lights, top, windshield and gas lamps.

The Chevrolet "six," made at Detroit, Mich., a high-grade car of finish design is also included in this line, and cars of this model are expected within a very short time. The Little and Chevrolet cars are made in entirely separate and distinct factories, owned and operated by Mr. W. C. Durant.

Tyler Bros. Corporation is not only the local agent for these lines, but for the entire New England territory, and is fast closing up the sub-agencies in the leading towns and cities of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut, as well as Massachusetts.

President Hathaway

At the meeting of the Commercial Motor Vehicle Dealers' Association, held on Friday evening, J. S. Hatherway of the White Company was elevated to the presidency to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of C. F. Whimey, who is now in the South. The board of directors will in due course elect an additional director.

The association is now in the best condition possible. Its membership having been materially increased since the truck show, which was one of the best of the season.

Auto Is Furnished Like a Pullman Car

Has Ladies' and Men's Stateroom, Five Sleeping Rooms, Smoker and Kitchenette.

Luxury in motor travel, together with independence from hotels, has been achieved by U. H. Dandurand of Montreal in a Pullman Packard. On a three-ton Packard truck chassis has been mounted a body whose interior arrangement is similar to that of a private railroad car. Twenty-five persons are easily carried on short trips and for long journeys there are accommodations for the comfort of eleven, including chauffeur and cook.

The body is twenty-five feet three inches over all, six feet six inches wide, nine feet six inches outside height, six feet six inches inside height. The compartments consist of a stateroom for the driver in front, a ladies' stateroom with sleeping room for five, a men's stateroom with quarters for four. This section is also the dining and smoking room, with two extension tables and a folding desk. In the rear is a kitchenette, compact and complete from stove to refrigerator.

The lighting system consists of a dynamo with two accumulators having a capacity of 160 amperes. The front of the car has six lights, two electric, two gas and two oil; the rear has a red tail light, an electric dome light and two railway signal lights.

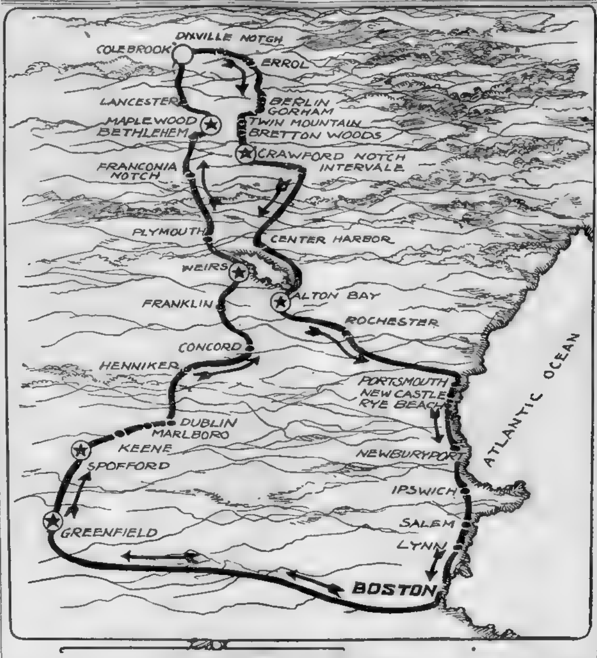
Under the body floor are five lockers containing planks to reinforce weak bridges, blocks and tackle, and an entire touring emergency outfit. The body was built by P. Brault, Montreal. Special springs, designed by Packard engineers insure easy riding. Mr. Dandurand, who is president of the Comet Motor Car Company in Montreal, will go to Florida this Fall with his family in his Packard Pullman and spend the Winter in southern touring.

School of Instruction.

The Autocar Sales & Service Company announce the reopening of its school of instruction on Wednesday evening next and are inviting owners and others interested in the commercial car to attend.

This will be the second year of the school. So great was the success and interest shown last year that the company is planning to make it even more interesting and instructive. A special representative from the factory, who has made a specialty of this school work, will have charge of the school. The firm hopes all Autocar drivers will take advantage of the opportunities offered to increase their knowledge of the practical working and driving of the commercial car.

A FINE AUTUMNAL TOUR



The Alps of New England, the beautiful and ever fascinating Berkshires of Massachusetts and the more lofty White Mountains of New Hampshire, offer at this season of the year one of the finest touring grounds than can be imagined or desired. The mountain trails, quaint country lanes that lead through vistas of colonial memories and history and seashore boulevards beyond compare, all call the motor tourists from the stern business troubles to the worshipping of Nature's grandest work—the transition of foliage from the green of the Summer to the varied colors of Autumn immediately preceding the Winter sleep of vegetation.

There is nothing upon all this continent or elsewhere that can be compared with the Autumnal glory of the Berkshire and White Mountain district. It is something that cannot be describel. No matter from what point of vantage the Autumnal foliage is viewed, whether from the summit of high mountains or the floor of the valley, the spectacle is beyond imagination or description.

The White Mountains have ever been looked upon as the playground of the nation. Beautiful and entrancing though they may be they by no means overshadow those beautiful drives and tree-capped hills of the Berkshires. There are two classes of foliage, each characteristic of its own individual district.

The range of routes and the choice of country to penetrate on such a tour as is possible through these two districts, making a most delightful seven days' run, are numerous, and the AMERICAN has attempted to map out a route of approximately seven days' duration, although it can be made in shorter time is necessity requires or the inclinations of the motorists suggest.

In the mapping out of this trip not only has the AMERICAN taken into consideration the unsurpassing beauty of the highlands of New England, but it has likewise included a trip through the farmlands of Massachusetts, rich in its productive ability, taking the tourist through the Berkshires, along the famous Lakes Sunapee and Winnipesaukee, into the very heart of the White Mountains, thence back to the shore line and along magnificent boulevards which for mile after mile carry one in close proximity to the open sea, in whose bosom is wrapped and kept the secrets of years. It might be termed a country, mountain and seashore Autumnal tour, bringing the touring season of 1912 to a most successful close.

It would indeed be difficult to conceive or devise a more pleasant tour than the one suggested by following the routes laid out in this issue. It is a route which is unexcelled.

Starting at Park Square, turn right on Arlington street to end, then left on Beacon street. Bear right on Commonwealth avenue running into Brighton avenue. Follow Brighton avenue to Allston, where bear right on North Beacon street to Watertown. Bear right shortly after passing Beaver Brook station, running into Main street. Keep straight on through Waltham to fork, where bear right on Main street and at next fork bear left. At three corners, iron trough, turn right on North avenue. At fork three miles beyond bear left to four corners, and again left. Bear left at next fork and continue on to Maynard. Follow trolley through Stowe to fork in woods, where bear right. At small red barn, bear right and bear right at next fork in woods. Bear left with trolley under railroad bridge and continue on to Leominster. Follow trolley on Main street to Fitchburg, railroad station on right. Turn left on Main street and at fork bear left with trolley into River street. Follow trolley to fork and bear right up grade, leaving trolley.

At Westminster four corners turn right around white church and monument and follow trolley through South Gardner, and Gardner to Otter river. Continue straight through Baldwinsville, Athol and Orange to Irving, where bear right up grade. At three corners six miles beyond, turn left over railroad and then left over iron bridge to Millers Falls. At four corners turn right around postoffice, up grade, to the fork, where bear right to Turners Falls. Straight across principal street, turning left down grade and right over suspension bridge. At the end of High street turn right on Main street to Federal street, which follow to Greenfield, a distance of ninety-seven miles, where a stop for the night is made at the Weldon Hotel.

The following day a run is made from Greenfield to Lake Spofford. Straight ahead on Federal street with trolley leaving trolley about a mile and a half beyond. At fork, keep right, cross railroad and straight ahead to Bernardston. Turn right over railroad bidge and at three corners turn right, cossing long iron bridge over Connecticut river, and under railroad bridge slightly beyond.

At the end of the road turn left and pass through Northfield to East Northfield. Continue straight ahead, avoiding forks and cross railroad. At the end of the road beyond iron bridge, turn right into Hinsdale, crossing iron bridge at Ashuelot. Pass covered bridge and follow Ashuelot River and over railroad to the end of the road, where turn right across iron bridge into Winchester. Turn left at square iron watering trough and continue through Westport, West Swanzey to Keene. Turn left on West street with trolley and follow to fork, where turn left, keeping left at fork beyond. Straight ahead under railroad arch and bear left at fork, keeping left at next fork and direct to charming Lake Spofford, making a day's run of fifty miles. A night's rest can be enjoyed here at the Pine Grove Springs Hotel.

The next day's trip is from Lake Spofford over fine roads to Concord and thence to the Weirs, via Keene, Marlboro, Dublin, Hancock, Antrim, Hillsboro, Henniker and Hopkinton, a distance of 100 miles. From Lake Spofford we retrace our steps to Keene, where we pick up trolley on Main street. Follow branch trolley on Marlboro street and go under railroad, following trolley on good gravel into Marlboro. Bear left at fork, crossing small iron bridge to stone watering trough, where keep right, passing Dublin Lake on right. Follow poles straight through Wolfboro to fork, where bear right, leaving poles, into South Wolfboro. Bear right at next fork, passing cemetery, then turn right down grade and up steep hill. At the end of the road turn right and continue on direct but hilly road over railroad bridge and into Alton, on the shores of Lake Winnepesaukee. After this run of eighty-six miles a night's rest can be enjoyed at the Banbrick Inn.

The final day's run is from Portsmouth to Boston over fine macadam roads, passing through Ipswich to Beverly and Salem and entering Boston via the Revere Beach Parkway. Turn left on Middle street with branch trolley, and at four corners beyond turn left on Miller avenue, still following branch trolley. At iron watering trough in fork bear right with trolley, crossing long bridge. Bear left at trolley station, leaving trolley, and at next fork bear left, following shore drive. Bear left at three corners and straight ahead to Rye Beach and straight through Salisbury, Newburyport, Newbury Old Town to Rowley. At Rowley follow trolley on High street, keeping straight ahead where trolley leaves to the right. Keep straight ahead down grade into Ipswich to the end of the street.

Follow trolley to fork, where leave main trolley line and follow branch line to South Hamilton and straight ahead through North Dublin and into Beverly. Turn square left across Beverly Harbor leaving trolley about a mile beyond. Turn left into Winter street and right at boulder. At iron watering trough bear right into St. Peter street and next right into Essex street Salem. Join trolley and follow to branch, bearing left with branch. Bear right on Maple street to the end of the road and turn right with trolley into Humphrey street to Humphrey square. Turn trolley at watering trough and follow through Swampscott to the Lynn Shore Drive. At Nahant street turn right and follow to Washington square, following Broad street into Lynn. Follow the Lynnway to Revere Beach Parkway, thence to the Fellsway into Cambridge and back to Boston.

The average day's run on this delightful tour is about 85 miles and the total mileage 600 miles. It is a beautiful trip and the scenery opened up to those fortunate enough to enjoy the same at this season of the year will long be remembered.

VELIE SELLING PLAN.

"The success of our new Velie system and the widespread interest which it has aroused among the automobile dealers of New England is remarkable," says Manager Bradfield of the Velie Boston branch. "We are closing many new agency contracts. All of which is positive evidence that the live dealers fully appreciate the advantages of the new selling plan and the assistance which they will receive from it."

New Buick Model Now on Exhibition

Principal Changes Are in Detail, Refinement and More Generous Equipment.

The Buick Boston Company's sales force are elated over the arrival of the Model 30 Buick Roadster, which is now on exhibition at the Massachusetts avenue salesroom. The number of inquiries received by the Buick Boston Company regarding this model indicate a strong demand for a two-passenger car of this type.

The principal changes over the 1912 Model 28, which preceded the Model 30 are in detail, refinements and more generous equipment.

Model 30 has a wheel base of 108 inches, with 34 by 3½ tires on demountable rims. The power plant is of the unit type with three-point suspension. The four cylinders of the motor are cast in pairs and the familiar valve-in-the-head feature of Buick motor construction is retained. The springs are three-quarters eliptic rear and semi eliptic front. Both foot and emergency brakes are on the rear wheels, the former being of the contracting type and the latter expanding.

The equipment of the Model 30 is most complete, consisting of mohair top, rain vision windshield, Prest-o-lite tank, electric side and rear lights, Disco self-starter, tools and extra demountable rim.

ACID TEST APPLIED.

Great Care Taken by Makers of Stutz Cars.

Although the Stutz six-cylinder car was scheduled to be shipped to Boston several weeks ago, the delay has been caused by a rule established by Harry Stutz, designer and maker, that no car leave his factory until the acid test had been applied and every car in perfect condition.

"The Stutz has made a reputation for its standuptiveness, and Mr. Stutz is not going to let a single car leave the factory at Indianapolis and destroy the reputation of this line," says M. F. Chase, the New England distributor, whose headquarters are at No. 895 Boylston street. "For this reason we have been delayed on our six-cylinder models. We have scores of people who are anxious for a demonstration, but the factory will not ship the cars until they are absolutely certain of them.

"We expect them in a few days. The new six-cylinder car will be a thing of beauty and will have great power, to say nothing of durability, which has won for the Stutz such a reputation for sturdiness."

PREPARE BIG TIME FOR GLIDDENITES

Contestants in Tour Will Be Royally Entertained in Detroit.

Detroit has determined to eclipse all former efforts and to set a mark for hospitality which will cause all other cities to put forth their utmost exertions to equal in the entertaining of the contestants in the A. A. A. National Reliability Tour, which will leave that city October 7. The National Tour Start Committee has just outlined its plans, which include an automobile tour of the city, in cars furnished by the members of the Wolverine Automobile Club. En route every automobile, parts and accessories factory in the city will be passed and at the larger plants the tourists will enter the grounds at one entrance and emerge from another.

Saturday, p. m., October 5, the tourists are to be escorted to a special ferry and will be taken to Walkerville, Ont., the home of the Canadian Club, where they will be entertained until evening by the Messrs. Walker. That evening the ladies of the tour will be tendered an invitation ball at the Wayne Pavilion, to be followed by a midnight smoker for the gentlemen. Sunday the visitors will be taken for an all day trip on a large lake steamer. It will be remembered that the Detroit start in 1909 exceeded in enthusiasm the start of any other national tour.

The entry list has been steadily growing and it seems likely competition in every class will be keen. All classes are filling rapidly, and the teams from New Orleans, Memphis and other cities of the South will be strong contenders. Frank Hardart, of Philadelphia, whose entry is No. 8, has nominated his daughter, Miss Erma Hardart, as driver. Miss Hardart, who drove a part of the distance in the Munsey Tour, and the 1911 Glidden, has developed into one of the best lady drivers in the East. There will probably be several lady drivers on the tour and a special prize may be awarded to the one who makes the best record.

To Have Greater Power.

In speaking of the plans of his company for the coming season, H. E. Shiland, assistant general manager and director of sales of the Havers Motor Car Company of Port Huron, Mich., says: "We have found the moderate priced six so popular, and our last year's car so thoroughly met all requirements that we have continued it on the same lines and at the same price for 1913. We have, however, brought out in addition to the Havers 'Six-44,' the Havers 'Six-55,' which has a 128-inch wheel base, greater horsepower and complete equipment, including an automatic electric starting, lighting and ignition system, at only a slightly increased price."

THE STORY OF GEORGE HELM By DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS

(From Hearst's Magazine for September.)

The story of George Helm which has been running in HEARST'S MAGAZINE has attracted much attention. It is only one of many features of compelling interest and diversity which have already made the magazine famous. The SEPTEMBER number is now on sale at all newsstands. Here are a few excerpts showing how Eleanor Helm chose between her millionaire father and her husband.

There are two things as brief as any in this world of brevities—the babyhood of her first born to the mother who loves babies, and his term of office to the public man who loves office. It so happened that both these befell the Helms at the same time. George married Eleanor Clearwater, daughter of the lumber king and United States Senator, a few weeks before he was inaugurated; and the first baby came toward the end of the second year of that famous stormy term of his. It was now the Spring of his fourth term as Governor.

Both he and the young woman at the window looked younger than when they were married—without the consent which her father dared not publicly withhold, or indeed privately, since he had not the courage to cut himself off from his only child. The reason the hands were turning backward for Helm and his wife was, of course, happiness.

"Bill," said George to the lazy friend whom he had made into his political manager and had forced to take the office of Attorney General—"Bill, you ought to get married. My wife takes all the responsibilities off my shoulders and leaves me free just to have fun."

"When you took this office, you said you were going to please the people," pursued Bill.

"To serve the people," corrected Helm.

"Same thing," rejoined his friend. "Now—you've found out that there isn't any such thing as the people."

Between Two Fires.

Helm nodded.

"There are pluckers and plucked, but there is no such thing as 'the people.'"

"Not yet," admitted Helm.

"You've been serving something that doesn't exist."

Helm nodded.

"The pluckers hate you because you've interfered with their game. The plucked hate you because they think you've put them in a position where they'll not be plucked only because they haven't anything to pluck."

"They don't hate me, exactly," said George.

"You're right. I withdraw hate. They love you. They go crazy at sight of you."

"How about those cases?"

"I'll take them up in a few days." Desbrough was trying to hide his nervousness from his keen-eyed friend. "Give me another week, George."

Helm laid a heavy hand upon Desbrough's shoulder. "What's the matter?" he demanded.

Desbrough saw he could not evade. "The Western Timber and Mineral Company—the T. & M., as they call it—it's a queer sort of holding corporation."

"But it's a clever villain—the cleverest. It's got safety hooks and lines out in every direction. If you attack it you'll get a return volley from pretty near everything that has a voice in this State—newspapers, preachers, charity societies of every kind, doctors, lawyers, retailers. It's wound round everything and everybody."

"It's the big waster—the big stealer, the big starver—and the big corruption. Now, it has defied the government of this State—the people."

"The people doesn't exist," Desbrough reminded him.

"It's got to go."

"First crack out of the box, as soon as I begin to attack—it will close a lot of plants and throw fifty thousand workers—men, women and children—out of employment."

"Is that as bad as what it's doing?"

"It Will Look Worse."

"No," admitted Desbrough. "Not one hundredth part as bad. But it'll look worse. Everybody will think and say it's worse."

"What are you afraid of, Bill? I know it isn't yourself. What is it?"

Desbrough looked steadily at his friend. "You know what the T. & M. is—who it really is?"

"Anybody especial?"

"It's controlled by—your father-in-law."

At noon the following day Helm left his office—an hour earlier than usual—and went home. At the sitting room door he paused. After a brief hesitation he opened the door and entered. As he expected, there were his wife and her father. Helm glanced at the troubled face of his wife. Without greeting his father-in-law he said to her:

"He has told you?"

"It's true then, George?" replied she.

He nodded.

Clearwater interposed with angry dignity:

"I've been laying the whole case before my daughter, sir—your proposed attempt to disgrace and to ruin me."

Helm now looked at him. "You have had six warnings," said he. "You could have made your corporation obey the laws—or, you could have sold your holdings and gotten away from it."

"We have disobeyed no laws," retorted Clearwater. "We have simply disregarded alleged laws enacted by demagogues to compel us to pay blackmail or go out of business."

"Your own lawyers drew the laws," replied Helm, "and Sayler ordered them passed six years ago. But they were intended for use against any rival to your monopoly that might spring up."

"You'll let us alone, or you'll never hold another office in this State," cried Clearwater. "I came here to ask my daughter to use her influence with you to save yourself from destruction. I had forgotten what an obstinate visionary you were. But I think even you will hesitate before breaking her heart, bowing her head with shame."

"I've told father," said Eleanor, "that I haven't any influence with you. I'd not venture to speak to you about a political matter unless I understood it. And I've been so busy with the baby these last two years that I don't really know anything any more."

"Eleanor, I've explained it all to you," said Clearwater, deeply agitated. "If he goes on, it means disgrace to me. I can punish him—and I shall. But I'll have to leave public life."

Eleanor looked inquiringly at her husband. He said:

"Yes, dear."

"George, you can't do that," cried she.

Helm winced.

"My God, Eleanor! If your dead mother could have known that her daughter——"

Helm put his arm round his wife and interrupted sternly.

"If her dead mother could have seen you at your deviltry through that corporation—could have seen the starving wretches in your lumber camps—the blighted children toiling in your mines, the blood and filth on your dividend dollars, every one of them."

"He lies, Eleanor!" cried her father. "He is a half crazed crank."

"He is my husband, father," interrupted Eleanor. And very proud she looked as she said it.

"You will do nothing to help me!" cried her father, in a sudden agony of fear.

Eleanor was about to reply. Helm shook his head, led her gently toward the door. He said:

"Leave us alone, please."

"Eleanor," shrieked her father, "if you yield to this man, if you give up your father to be destroyed by him, I shall disinherit you, I shall curse you. I shall curse you, I shall curse you!"

"It Will Break Her Heart."

The daughter shivered from head to foot. Helm bore her firmly on, released her at the threshold. She cried, "George, let me stay! Please, dear! Let me talk with both of you. You are both so hard——"

Her voice had been faltering, for again he had fixed her gaze with those kind, inflexible eyes of his. She became silent. In the hall he kissed her, released her. Then he returned to the sitting room, closing the door behind him. He said to Clearwater, quietly, almost gently:

"You had better tell your corporation to yield. If you don't, it will break her heart, as you see."

"We will not yield!" cried Clearwater, shaking his fist in Helm's face. "And after you have actually done your dastardly work, she will hate you. You think you own her, body and soul. You'll find out afterward. She will hate you, she will leave you."

"She will neither leave me nor hate me."

There was in his voice the finality not of mere conviction, but of truth itself. For he knew—as only those who really love and really are loved know—what he and his wife were to each other—the union that is a fusion which not even death can dissolve.

STRIKING GIBSON ILLUSTRATION IN THE STORY OF GEORGE HELM

DRAWN BY CHARLES DANA GIBSON

"They were at lunch—he and his wife and the fat one. George and Eleanor looked at each other as the same thought came to both. 'Don't George,' said Eleanor, unsteadily, as her eyes filled, 'don't look at me like that. We'll make the baby cry.'"

CUMMINGS PUTS SERIES OF QUERIES TO SHERIFF QUINN

Before they closed the Matthew Cummings campaign headquarters for the week, last night, down at No. 54 Kilby street, Mr. Cummings struck off a peppery little letter to Sheriff John Quinn, in which the Sheriff was asked for "frank answers to thirteen questions."

Mr. Cummings wants the Democratic nomination for Sheriff. Jeremiah Desmond wants the Republican nomination. Sheriff Quinn would be glad to follow precedent and take the Democratic-Republican nominations in one.

Nine of the thirteen Cummings questions to Quinn had to do with the alleged former use of non-union bread at the Suffolk Jail. The four other questions read like this:

"If chosen Sheriff, will you reform the well known abuses existing in the county administration?

"Will you support the candidate nominated by the Democrats for the office of Sheriff this year?

"Is any other person other than yourself authorized to issue statements or write letters to the "Press" in your behalf?

"Have you promised anyone other than Martin M. Lomasney to make appointments to office under you?"

Mathew Cummings was challenged last night by Deputy Sheriff John F. Kelley, to file any complaint that he may have against the service or execution of bail cases by the sheriff's staff, with the district attorney's office tomorrow, Deputy Kelley in his statement says:

"Now if Mr. Cummings has any complaint or charge to make, it is to the District Attorney he should make it, and I invite him to meet at that office at any hour on Monday, September 16th, that will suit him, and let him then and there make any complaint he has, to the proper authorities, and not on the street corners of Boston, where every night in the week he makes such a pitiful appeal for support for the high office of Sheriff of Suffolk County, that he is absolutely unqualified to fill for even one day.

"JOHN F. KELLEY,
"Deputy Sheriff."

WILSON AT BOSTON RALLY ON SEPT. 26

Democratic Nominee to Speak at Springfield and Barre Fair; Then in Boston.

SEAGIRT, N. J., Sept. 14.—Governor Wilson today gave out the dates for his second speaking tour. This will carry him through Connecticut and Massachusetts, after he has filled a long standing engagement to speak at Scranton, Pa.

The Governor will go to Scranton on September 23. This is the date set for the notification of all the State Democratic candidates. Two weeks ago the Governor promised A. Mitchell Palmer, the Democratic State committeeman from Pennsylvania, that he would be present when the State candidates were notified. The campaign committee, unaware of this engagement, proceeded to book the Governor to speak at Pittsburgh on that date. The conflicting engagements have now been reconciled and the Governor will visit Pittsburgh at some future date.

Big Boston Rally Sept. 26.

On September 24 the Governor will return to Princeton to vote in the primaries.

The balance of the week will be devoted to New England. On September 25 the Governor will speak at Hartford in the afternoon and New Haven in the evening; on the 26th there will be three meetings—Springfield, Mass. in the early afternoon; at the Agricultural Fair at Barre, Mass., later in the afternoon, and a big rally at Boston in the evening. Sept. 27, Mr. Wilson speaks at Bridgeport and one other town, to be decided upon later.

This will make a busy week for the Presidential candidate. He will use the special car that has been engaged for the balance of the campaign and will carry his secretary, two stenographers and nine newspaper correspondents.

Starts West Today.

The Governor devoted himself today to the preparation of speeches for the Western trip to begin tomorrow. His special car will leave the Pennsylvania station at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and will arrive in Chicago at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon, continuing West at 6. The speeches are to be made as follows:

Sept. 17, Sioux City; 18th, Minneapolis and St. Paul; 19th, Milwaukee; 20th, Columbus.

It is probable also that some rear platform speeches will be made from the train at way stations along the route.

The Governor would not discuss the Syracuse incident further today, excepting to deny a report from Syracuse that he had been urged by Governor Dix and others to keep William Jennings Bryan out of New York State during the campaign.

Bryan's name was not mentioned at any time while the Governor was in Syracuse, either by Governor Dix or any of the State leaders, so far as Governor Wilson recalls. Mr. Bryan will suit his own fancy about coming to New York. He will outline his own itinerary and speak where he pleases.

ARRANGE FOR SIXTY RALLIES IN WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN FOR FOSS

Plans were perfected yesterday by the Democratic City Committee for a Garrison finish for Governor Foss' campaign for renomination during the coming week. Rallies, more than sixty in number, have been arranged for the first week, and on Saturday and Monday night before the primaries there will be whirlwind tours of the twenty-six wards.

The Boston campaign for Governor Foss will be formally opened tomorrow night with rallies in Wards 20 and 25. In Ward 20 the meeting will be held at the wardroom at Meeting House Hill. In Ward 25 the rally will be held at the wardroom on Washington street, Brighton.

Democratic leaders who gathered yesterday at the headquarters of the City Committee and reported their canvass of the situation in every section of the city were unanimously of the opinion that Governor Foss will carry twenty-five of the twenty-six wards in the city, and go out of Boston with a large majority. During a conference of the leaders it was decided to hold the rally for the city proper on Saturday night at Faneuil Hall, and at that meeting, as well as at all the others on that night, the speakers will discuss the record of District Attorney Pelletier as county prosecutor.

For all the Boston rallies this week, the city committee has an army of speakers, which will be led by Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald; David I. Walsh, candidate for lieutenant governor; Chairman Thomas P. Riley of the Democratic State Committee, the Honorable John R. Murphy and Congressman William F. Murray, Sheriff John Quinn and Judge Charles S. Sullivan will also speak at the rally.

Other speakers who will be out on the stump advocating the renomination of Governor Foss will include Francis M. Carroll, Thomas A. Mullen, Thomas H. Dowd, David B. Shaw, William S. McNary, Joseph A. Sheehan, Joseph J. Murley, Fred A. Finigan, Senator James A. Hatton, Councillor Edward D. Collins, Edward E. Ginsburg, Thomas J. Fay, Representative James J. Murphy, Frank D. Moynihan, James W. Gibbons, Patrick H. Kelley and President Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic city committee.

TRUTH—

In all my advertising I have told the plain TRUTH about myself and about other undertakers. At first I was criticised. Doubt was expressed over my sincerity.

But TRUTH will prevail, and today there are thousands of families in Greater Boston who know that GRAHAM conducts a more dignified funeral than any undertaker in Boston.

I can save you from $75 to $200 on a funeral. Hundreds of testimonials from families that have tried other undertakers before coming to Graham.

For the low figure of $75 I will take entire charge of a funeral, supplying all equipment—do the embalming—furnish casket. This funeral would cost at least $150 if ordered from any other undertaker in the city.

The most gigantic "Rubberneck" tour ever conceived and executed in the history of the world will start from Boston on September 30. Some five hundred Europeans will be carried around a circle of some 3,000 miles, and shown America as nobody ever saw it before.

The cost of this extravagant and extraordinary tour will be borne entirely by the cities to be visited. It won't cost any of the foreign delegates a cent.

American hospitality will stand alone on a pinnacle after this, for never before were 500 visitors transported 3,000 miles, fed and feted and lodged without cost during a whole fortnight.

The grand circle extends West to Chicago and South to Washington. The complete itinerary is as follows: September 30, leave Boston over the Boston & Albany. First stop Worcester, next Buffalo and Niagara Falls, then Detroit, and Chicago. From Chicago the party returns via Cincinnati, Dayton, and Pittsburg, and then goes to Washington. From Washington the tourists see Philadelphia and New York.

In each city the delegates will be taken in charge by the local Chambers of Commerce and shown the sights of their respective towns.

There will be short stops all along the line, because ten cities will be visited in from 14 to 17 days.

The most palatial trains will be furnished and several special trains will be needed to carry the guests of the nation.

The tour will officially end in New York, whence the visitors will return home or remain longer as they choose.

Boston Is to Be "En Fete."

Boston is to be "En Fete" for the International Congress. With more than 500 of the most powerful business men in Europe as well as 250 leaders in big business in America stopping in this city, it is up to Boston to show her very best.

That is why the Boston Symphony Orchestra will come together a month early for one special concert, why all our points of interest are being sharpened and polished and why everything is being prepared to look its best.

The program for the delegates is a very elaborate one, but the few days that they will be here are all too short to show off the city.

One of the features of the arrangements is the preparation of booklets upon each of the cities to be visited by Robert J. Bottomly, secretary of the Executive Committee, and the procuring of a large amount of literature relating to Boston, the United States and commerce generally by the same committee.

The following are the various committees which will handle the Congress of Boston.

BUSY WEEK AHEAD IN GUBERNATORIAL FIGHT

Scores of Rallies Arranged for All the Candidates on Both Sides.

BENTON SAYS WALKER IS SCARED.

The best evidence which I have to hand of the gains made by Colonel Benton I find in a strong editorial in a North Adams paper which came to my desk this morning, which has been in favor of Colonel Benton's opponent. In this editorial it is admitted that Colonel Benton has the eastern part of the State, and that he is making gains in the Berkshire section, and that if a victory is to be had for Mr. Walker they must wake up.— James F. Cavanagh, for the Everett C. Benton Campaign Committee.

WALKER SURE TO BE NOMINATED—SAUNDERS.

We are satisfied that Mr. Walker is going to win the nomination. His dignified methods of campaigning, his rule not to criticise his opponent, the absolute freedom of his candidacy from the suspicion of alliance with any special class or organization and his determination to win the nomination on his own record are bringing workers to him in every city and town.— Amos T. Saunders, chairman of the Joseph Walker Campaign Committee.

Monday evening—Cedar Hall, North Cambridge; Cypress Hall, Central Square, Cambridge; Institute Hall, East Cambridge; Roddy Hall, Brighton.

Tuesday evening—Fall River and New Bedford. Charles S. Hamlin of Mattapoisett will be the presiding officer at New Bedford.

Wednesday evening—Worcester, Webster and Millbury.

Thursday evening—Marlboro, Framingham and Natick.

Friday evening—Lynn, Revere and Chelsea.

Pelletier Engagements.

Mr. Pelletier's bookings are as follows:

Monday evening—Charlestown, Woburn, Wakefield.

Tuesday evening—Salem, Peabody, possibly Danvers, and Wards 13 and 15 of Boston.

Wednesday evening—To be announced later.

Thursday evening—Wards 20 and 24 and Brockton.

Friday evening—To be announced.

Saturday evening—To be announced.

On each of these last two evenings, Mr. Pelletier will visit at least three of the wards of Boston. On Saturday and Monday nights, indeed, he expects to make eight wards each night.

Beginning Tuesday, Mr. Pelletier will speak in the noon hour to factory employees. These dates are yet to be decided upon.

Speaker Walker's Dates:

Speaker Walker's dates ahead:

Monday—In the afternoon at Taunton; evening, a reception at Lynn and possibly a meeting in Peabody.

Tuesday—An evening reception in Board of Trade Hall.

Wednesday—A tour through Essex County, beginning with Ipswich at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and ending at Methuen at 5.30 p. m. The spellbinders will dine at Methuen with Representative Edgar G. Holt. This tour will cover, in the order named, Ipswich, Rowley, Byfield Depot, Newburyport, Amesbury, Merrimac, West Newbury, Georgetown, Groveland and Methuen.

Thursday—In the evening at the Colonial Club in Ward 20. There may also be a meting in Ward 21.

Friday—A noon-day rally in Faneuil Hall, beginning at 12 o'clock sharp, and ending without fail in one hour. George S. Smith, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside. Speaker Walker will be the only speechmaker. Mr. Walker will discuss "The Business Management of the Commonwealth."

Colonel Benton's List.

Colonel Benton's Tour follows:

Monday evening—Lawrence and Haverhill.

Tuesday evening—Holyoke and Chicopee Falls.

Wednesday evening—Open so far as the colonel himself is concerned, though Benton rallies will be held in North Adams and Pittsfield.

Thursday evening—Cambridge and Somerville.

Friday and Saturday will be given up to shop rallies in Greater Boston. The schedule is yet to be arranged.

On Monday of next week Colonel Benton will hold a noon rally in Faneuil Hall.

OLNEY SPRINKLES HUMOR IN CAMPAIGN

Richard Olney, 2d, of Dedham, who is campaigning for Congress through the Fourteenth district, is quite an original entity in State politics. He places both his individuality and his views before the public with an intensity and an earnestness of feeling which arouse sympathy even among his political opponents. He does this with an admixture of native humor that in its unexpected flashes is a slight reminder of the lamented Twain.

"Dick" was not always of Dedham. He was born in Milton, N. H. in 1871. When he was three, his father, George W. Olney—a brother of the Cleveland Secretary of State—moved to Cherry Valley, a part of the historic hill town of Leicester, where he was engaged in business as a woolen manufacturer.

When "Dick" graduated from Brown University in 1892 he worked at journalism for some years as a reporter for the old Worcester Spy, then edited by J. Evarts Greene, a distinguished Union soldier and a cousin of Senator Hoar.

While he was on the Spy staff, Mr. Olney became a candidate for the Legislature. Though a Democrat he carried the strong Republican district by a margin of 23 votes.

MAYOR ASKS LOWER FARES FOR PUPILS

Requests New Haven Road to Reduce Rates from Hyde Park to Boston.

Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday wrote to Passenger Agent A. B. Smith of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, urging him to extend to the children of Hyde Park a reduced fare to and from the schools in Boston proper. The Mayor's letter follows:

I wish to bring to your attention a condition of affairs affecting the residents of Ward 26, which is considered by them an unjust ruling on the part of your road.

There are a large number of children from that district attending school in Boston, and they are compelled to pay the full fare of sixteen cents a day, no reduction being made for school children.

I am informed that the Midland Division of your road issues tickets to school children at the rate of $2.40 per month, or $6 for a three-months' ticket between Fairmount and Boston, but as this division does not connect with the school district (Back Bay), it would necessitate another 5-cent fare from the South Station.

I would be very glad indeed to have you give this matter your consideration, and trust you will see your way clear to extend equal privileges to the school children of the Hyde Park district over the different divisions of your road.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) JOHN F. FITZGERALD, Mayor.

"The June Bride," a sparkling Viennese operetta, which is said to fairly bubble with delightful melody, will be presented by Weber and Fields at the Majestic Theatre, Monday evening, September 23. FATALLY INJURED IN FELLSWAY CRASH

Harry E. Baker of Melrose Victim of Automobile Accident.

Harry E. Baker, a traveling salesman living at No. 86 West Wyoming avenue, Melrose, received a fractured skull, and a companion, Dana E. Cordova of No. 231 St. Paul street, Brookline, was badly bruised and shaken up late yesterday when an auto in which they were riding struck a tree and overturned on the Fellsway, near the Boston & Maine Railroad crossing in Medford.

Both men are at the Malden Hospital, where it is said Baker will die.

The machine driven by Baker was speeding down the incline and when a few feet from the railroad crossing struck a machine driven by Gregory Parfauchott, chauffeur for Marjorie Cowan, of No. 82 Fellsway street, West Somerville. Baker lost control of his machine after the crash and it dashed into a tree, overturned and rolled down the embankment pinning both men beneath it. Thomas Leadbetter, of Swampscott, Major Fred E. Jones, medical examiner of Quincy, Lieutenant R. S. Parker of Cohasset, and C. F. Lowell of No. 145 Franklin street, Boston, who were riding in other cars, lifted the automobile from Baker and Cordova and carried them to the Malden Hospital.

The car, owned by Miss Cowan, was uninjured, while Baker's car was practically demolished.

PRESIDENT GUEST AT THE LASELL WEDDING

Vincent Club Girl Wed to Minturn Verdi of New York at Whitinsville.

President Taft and Miss Helen Taft were among the many guests at the wedding and reception last night of Miss Marion Lasell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Whitin Lasell, of Whitinsville, to Minturn de Suzzara Verdi of New York city, formerly of Boston.

The nuptials took place at Whitinsville where the bride's parents have a home famous for its hospitality in society and for its stables of blooded stock and race horses.

The presence of the national executive and his daughter lent extra distinction to a wedding that was the most elaborate the village of Whitinsville ever knew and which ranks among the most pretentious nuptial ceremonies of Worcester county.

The name of Lasell is particularly noted in turf circles because Chester Lasell, the bride's father, is a famous breeder and racer of horses. He has a private track at "Oakhurst," the Lasell estate.

Bride Lover of Horses.

His daughter inherits her father's love of horses. She knows every steed on the place by name and likes to stroll through the big stables, petting the racers and stroking their velvety muzzles.

She is a figure in the Boston younger set, member of the Vincent, Chilton and New Riding Clubs and has won many ribbons in horse shows, handling horses and rigs smartly. Also she is musical, particularly with the violin.

Mr. Verdi, though now in law practice in New York, has many Boston associations. He is the son of Mrs. Ciro de Suzzara Verdi, of Fifth avenue, New York city, formerly Miss Caroline Minturn of Boston.

He was graduated from Harvard College in 1908 and then from the Harvard Law School. He is a member of the Sphinx and Hasty Pudding Clubs.

President Motors Down.

The ceremony last night took place at 6 o'clock in the Whitinsville Congregational Church. President Taft and Miss Helen Taft arrived by motor from Millbury, where the President and his family are guests of Miss Delia Torrey over Sunday.

Guests were present from Boston, New York and Worcester. A number of the guests arrived Friday and attended a bridal dinner at "Oakhurst" Friday night.

After the ceremony there was an elaborate reception at the house, with dancing on the lawn and a bridal supper. Then the young couple left on a honeymoon, which includes a trip to Europe. On their return they will live at No. [illegible] Park avenue, New York city. They will give receptions November 9 and 16.

Auchincloss—House.

Miss Janet M. House, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. House, of Austin, Tex., and Gordon Auchincloss, son of Mrs. Edgar Auchincloss of New York, Yale, '08, and Harvard Law School, '11, were married by the Rev. Endicott Peabody, D. D., of Groton in St. John's Episcopal Church at Beverly Farms yesterday afternoon. A large contingent of the Summer colony at the North Shore, with many from New York, attended.

Miss House was given away by her father. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Randolph F. Tucker (Mona House) of Chestnut Hill.

Reginald Auchincloss, a brother of the bridegroom, a student at Yale, was best man. Raymond Ives, Walter G. Davis, Walter Struthers and Chauncy B. Garver, classmates of Mr. Auchincloss at Yale and Harvard, were the ushers. Mr. and Mrs. Auchincloss will make their home at No. 68 East Eighty-sixth street, New York.

Hastings—Turner.

Society people of Greater Boston were in attendance at the marriage of Miss Dorothy Q. Turner, daughter of Mrs. Abigail A. Q. Turner of Dorchester and A. Abbott Hastings of Jamaica Plain at St. James Episcopal church, Roxbury, yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Murray W. Dewart, D. D. of Winchester.

The bride was given away by her brother, Charles Turner of New York. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Quincy Tucker of Dorchester was the matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Ruth Hastings, Winifred Rapalje, Charlotte Wales and Margaret Blanchard. John B. E. Wheeler of Boston was the best man and the ushers were Wallace G. Page, Lawrence B. Page, Edward E. Rice, William Miller, Bradford Turner and J. Earle Cunningham, all members of Battery A.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, "Rockledge" Everton street, Dorchester. Mr. and Mrs. Hastings will make their home at Hingham, Mass.

Ruggles—Morrill.

The marriage of Daniel Blaisdell Ruggles of Boston to Miss Alice Morrill, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Henry A. Morrill of Cincinnati, took place yesterday at the Summer home of the bride at Biddeford Pool, Me. The house decorations were Autumn foliage and wild asters. Only intimate relatives and a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony, the Rev. John M. Wathen of Biddeford being the officiating clergyman. The bride was gowned in white brocade satin, corsage wrought in pearls. Bride and groom were unattached. The groom is the son of Professor Edward Rush Ruggles of Dartmouth and was graduated from Dartmouth in 1890.

Turner—Bishop.

PITTSFIELD, Sept. 14.—Miss Jessica Pomeroy Bishop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Walker Bishop, of Chicago, and Spencer Turner, a New York City broker were married today in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in this town. The Rev. William H. Vivert performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by many society folks in the Berkshire region.

LABOR NEWS-NOTES OF GREATER BOSTON

Unions Continue Fight Against State Chief of Police Whitney.

Further plans for the [illegible] of a new law calling for the [illegible] of the Chief of State Police by popular vote, are scheduled to come up for action at the meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union in Wells Memorial Hall this afternoon. The chief now holds office by appointment.

The advisability of calling for another referendum on the eight-hour law, which the Attorney-General indicates is necessary before the amended [illegible] be enforced, also will be decided upon.

Chief Whitney's alleged hostility to the eight-hour law, as amended by the "neither required nor permitted" section, is held to be responsible for both these moves by the local labor men.

The anti-Whitney element, which includes every C. L. U. delegate, threatens to carry the fight against him to the State Federation of Labor convention, which opens at Fitchburg tomorrow morning.

HOLY JUMPERS ARRESTED.

To Face Court Tomorrow for Alleged Assault on Intruders.

EAST WAREHAM, Sept. 14.—A. C. Covell and G. G. Edwards will have another hearing Monday on charges of assault and battery growing out of a disturbance at a meeting of the Holy Jumpers. Members of the sect are angry at what they consider an unwarranted interference with their revival services.

They had been holding an all-day meeting. Conversions were many. On the floor of the church, before the altar, Dudley Brown, an express driver, declared he could see the form of two young girls. With Gustave Schroeder he decided to try the door.

Schroeder says that when he and Brown attempted to carry an unconscious girl into the open air they were pounced upon and beaten.

SANGERFEST TO BE GIVEN ON COMMON

Governor and Mayor to Greet German Singers at Gathering Next Sunday.

Next Sunday will be a gala day for the German societies in Boston and surrounding cities and towns. They are to hold a "Sangerfest" on Boston Common, near the new Parkman bandstand, and have received assurance from Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, President Attridge of the City Council and other dignitaries that they will speak at the exercises that precede the entertainment program. More than 200 singers of the German Singing Society will be heard in German and English songs.

The affair will be held under the general direction of the German-American Alliance, of which former State Senator Edward J. Bromberg is president. Gustave Heim of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the members of which will sit in the new bandstand and play accompaniments for the soloists and singers, will direct the musical numbers.

Complimented by Governor.

The editor of the Morgen Journal, a German publication issued in New York, has congratulatory letters from Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald on the enterprise of the German people in planning for next Sunday's affair in Boston. Governor Foss' letter reads:

To the editor of the Morgen Journal:

I am very glad to learn that the German organizations are to give a concert on Boston Common September 22, and I tender them my congratulations.

It will be a pleasure to me to welcome so many of my German fellow-citizens, since in the past they have very largely taken a great interest in public affairs. I have found them to be good citizens, always anxious to do what they can to further the public welfare.

In this connection the [illegible] will do honor to the memory of Mr. Henry Parkman, by whose generosity Boston has so greatly benefited.

Aids Public Institutions.

I earnestly hope that this concert will be but an initial step in a long series of similar undertakings and I feel sure that it will be greatly appreciated by all our citizens, irrespective of nationality.

I believe that such organizations as the National German Alliance, under the auspices of the local branch of which this concert is held, are a great aid in developing and fostering our public institutions and promoting a better understanding on the part of our citizens as to public affairs.

(Signed) EUGENE N. FOSS.

MELROSE BARS TOLSTOY.

Motion Pictures of 'Resurrection and Book Itself Barred.

Tolstoy's "Resurrection," one of his most realistic stories, will not be shown by motion pictures in Melrose. Members of the Woman's Club called on Mayor Charles E. French and told him that the scenes depicted in the novel, as reproduced by the films were not of a nature that would conduce to the enlightenment and elevation of the young people of Melrose, and the Mayor declared that they must be cut out. The novel has been withdrawn from the Melrose Library.

Save a Small Amount Monthly

AND

SECURE A SURE INCOME FOR LIFE

The limited number of Profit-sharing Certificates now being offered by this Company, UPON THE MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN, are fortified by PLANTED pineapple land, grapefruit trees, buildings, and other property assets, many times in excess of the amount required for the safety of the investment. These profit-sharing certificates draw 10% from the raising and sale of pineapples, the dividends on the certificate being paid before the Company itself can receive any profit from this source. Surely no investor could ask for better protection.

FURTHERMORE, IN ADDITION TO THIS 10% we plant seven Grapefruit trees for each certificate issued, and extra dividends will be paid continually from this source as the trees bear fruit in increase in bearing capacity. THESE DIVIDENDS, ADDED TO THE 10% FROM THE PINEAPPLE BUSINESS, will make the total annual income from dividends amount to very large and satisfactory proportions, increasing annually and lasting for more years than a lifetime.

IF BOSTON COMMON

WERE PLANTED TO TWENTY-EIGHT HUNDRED GRAPEFRUIT TREES AND THE LITTLE GARDEN PLANTED TO THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND PINEAPPLE PLANTS you would then have a pretty good idea of what our plantation looks like under cultivation to the above mentioned products.

There are approximately 50,000 pineapple plants and 1,500 grapefruit trees already planted. Pineapple plants bear fruit in 18 months, grapefruit [illegible] fourth year.

Tremendous profits have been, are being and will continue to be made in the fruit-raising business, especially in the Tropics (for example, note what the United Fruit Co. has done for its stockholders in the way of dividends in the past few years).

Save $5, $10 or more monthly for a short period

You can then secure an annual income far greater than the ordinary rates of interest by purchasing one, two or more profit-sharing certificates.

This company is conducted by well known New England men of experience and integrity and the co-operative plan is one of common sense and square dealing for all who become interested and the estimates for profit have been carefully guarded against exaggeration. Growers, dealers and consumers testify that the Isle of Pines is producing the finest grapefruit and pineapples in the world.

Scores of people now living on the Isle of Pines as well as other reliable people who know of this enterprise will testify as to the truthfulness and stability of this proposition. Every facility offered for investigation.

Write today for a circular of full particulars, price and terms of the profit-sharing certificates, and a book showing the progress being made, or better call and talk it over. Office open evenings by appointment.

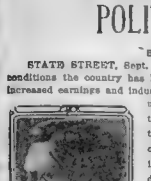
STOCK TRADING CHECKED BY HIGHER MONEY AND POLITICAL UNCERTAINTY

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Sept. 14—In the face of the best crop and copper conditions the country has known for years, and with railroads reporting increased earnings and industrial plants so busy it is hard to hire enough unskilled labor to answer pressing needs, stock trading has been so lethargic during the week that those who have been pinning their faith on a renewal of speculative activity are viewing the situation with despondency, if not with disgust.



W. H. ROSS

The market has failed to respond to reports which make it almost certain that the country is to reap bumper harvests and the belief begins to generally obtain that there is little prospect of its being spurred into normal life for weeks to come. It is likely, in fact, to mark time until the presidential election.

EFFECT OF POLITICAL UNCERTAINTY.

Although it is said that politics are having little effect upon business there is no question but that financial interests want to learn the verdict of the people at the polls before committing themselves to any definite policy. They cannot ignore the fact that on next election day a new government is to be chosen and that the welfare of the country largely depends upon what kind of an economic creed will be practiced by the next President, so far as he is able.

If tariff laws are to be made and enforced by free traders that will have a great bearing upon the industries of the United States. If what some of the more sentient of financiers call "Pendletism" is to be operative at Washington they are going to try to embody the inertia which some statesmen consider of value as a check to popular government. As the situation stands it typifies conservatism in many minds, and that is as strong a drawback as the stock market could have at present.

The monetary situation is another restraint upon speculation, but it has been foreseen, is not serious and will be only temporary. But while higher money rates prevail and public interest in a presidential campaign in which party lines have been largely obliterated is increasing, it is not to be expected that the stock market should be a place resounding with the hum of activity.

Frost Danger is Lessening.

Crop conditions have not been marred by abnormal weather since the government report, and corn is getting beyond the danger of frost hourly. The hot wave which has passed over the West has done beneficent work in maturing it, and in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska and South Dakota, States which grow about a quarter of the corn, escape visitation by a cold wave for a week or two longer the peril of deterioration will be passed. The outlook for cotton is about as good as could be expected, and the same is true of all the cereals, which may lighten the heart of the editor by reducing the high cost of living. In any event they will provide a vast sum of money with which the farmers can buy goods and thus help other people to pay bills and make more purchases.

The industrial situation is steadily improving and in no trade is prosperity greater than in steel manufacturing. There is every probability that steel mills will begin 1913 with enough business to keep them going for the most part of that year. Prospective business for that period is of the largest volume ever known. What is true in the steel trade is also the case in most others.

Trade is getting better steadily in mercantile lines. All reports from the West and the South are encouraging in this respect and merchants in those sections are looking forward to the most prosperous season they have known in years as soon as the people have in hand receipts from cotton and grain crops. It would be better for New England if it could look forward to returns from some great harvest. But a little later all its industries will benefit from what has been grown elsewhere. The American people are going to have billions of dollars to spend before Christmas.

Higher Money a Restraint.

Higher money rates are blamed for the disposition to sell stocks, which has been manifest for a few days, but the professional traders who hoped for real liquidation and a sharp decline in prices have been keenly disappointed. The fundamental conditions are providing powerful and persistent support. The rallies have been when unexpected and it is plain to the discerning that the country's wealth is in a condition where it does not take much to oversell it. It is quite likely that the strong upward trend of the security prices which seems sure to come may be delayed for weeks and perhaps for several months. No support to the market by great banking interests may be looked for until the crop movement is over, and possibly they will remain inert in such a matter until the beginning of next year.

There has been some accumulation buying as a result of recessions this week. The trend of prices has been had for the little fellows and good for the big ones.

There is much more probability under present conditions that the market will continue to be milked than that bear pressure will produce any marked break in prices. It is where it may be quite easily handled by some dominating financial interests. Neither a price slump, any appreciable rise nor much activity appears to be in immediate prospect.

Labor Demands Upon Roads.

The Interstate Commerce Commission continues admonitions on propositions to raise railroad rates and land transportation corporations are about the only ones which are unable to look ahead with rejoicings. Although they are going to benefit by record-breaking traffic and a gratifying enlargement of revenue, additional expenditures loom eminously before them. They must spend money for new equipment, new bridges and new terminals, while it is also, commonly believed that when the arbitration committee reports it will be in favor of granting the engineers some kind of a pay raise.

If engineers get any more pay all other classes of railroad employes will expect similar concessions. One recent instance of the increase in total operating expenses for all railroads, which is possible because of labor demands, is $1,000,000 a week. This would be a heavy burden if the roads fell to get consent to put up freight tariffs at all.

STATE RAILWAYS HARD TO HANDLE

J. J. Hill Says They Can Be Acquired Easier Than Operated.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Government ownership of railways is a proposition that becomes more intrusive with succeeding years. And to the increasing pessimistic intensifies the controversial aspect of the question. The many who are against State railroads see how as many who want government management and proprietorship.

BOERSIANER.

The latest contribution to the literature of the question is Edwin A. Pratt, an Englishman. He has selected Australia as an object lesson. Australia is a cattle and agricultural country. Yet Pratt finds there is no serious a shortage of cars after every good harvest that large quantities of wheat are spoiled. Sometimes "wheat stacks may remain standing so long at the railway station awaiting cars that mice build their nests in the crevices between the bars."

At Henty, in January of this year, "90,000 bags of wheat had been brought into the station and left in the open because was between 8,000 and 4,000, but the railway could not deal with more than 800 or 400 a day." Fruit suffers in the same way, only more rapidly, and such cars as may be sent are often filthy and entirely uncovered. Pratt says that there have been eight days doing the 145-mile journey, and when it arrives it is overripe. Cattle and sheep suffer even more in hot weather. Stock arrives at Sidney, "either dead or in a state of collapse," sometimes journeying for forty-five hours without food or water.

This is a picture of the Home Rule Sale Yards in Sydney: "Stock are detrained, wounded, bruised and left a week or more without food or drink." They are hurried into pens and driven frantically to the abattoirs to be killed during the rush of consumption

It is a race against death; if they died before they reach their destination the buyer suffers the loss. The yards are owned by the Railway Commission, but there is no independent inspection either by a state or a local authority.

The application of the chief tracks is urgently required, and many miles of new tracks are needed to develop land which is ripe for settlement, but for want of rolling stock or grain in the nearest port, and the railway engineers are unable to attract traffic toward the capitals. Pratt contrasts the Australian system with the Canadian, where the great companies push out their lines boldly into virgin territory when bidding for and guaranteeing the development and prosperity of their country.

When, however, an investigator selects Australia as a terrorising example he may be at once suspected of partisanship. Is the case of Mr. Pratt, the suspicion is confirmed. Upon investigation it is found that this gentleman has been for years a frankly, bitter opponent to government railways. He went to Australia to find what was already in his mind.

Australia is an unfair instance. Many of the defects of today are an inheritance from the days of private ownership. But embarrassing changes of gauge are due to early railway companies, which in part have not been possible to remedy speedily.

Again and more important Australia suffers severely from droughts. It is almost not periodical; they come unexpectedly and with a sweep, especially sheep, as the want of water. The great trans-continental industry of the Antipodes—falls prostrate. Fairly ample rainfall comes of one year become superfluous the next.

Mr. Pratt might strengthen his position by being less impartial, by selecting European countries. In Germany the state roads are a source of revenue. The management, from the viewpoint of those schedules—passenger and freight—is efficient. But the public is a subordinate factor to the management. Railway managers do not strive to please passenger and shipper; they merely endeavor to serve them. The public was made for the railroads, not the railroads for the public.

In France the railroads owned by the government strive far more than those in Germany to make travelers comfortable and to meet the convenience of the shippers. But thus far the system is essentially leaves a wide margin for improvement. One line in the fiscal year showed a deficit of 20,000,000 francs. Railway management is grotesque. Traveling by rail in Italy and Spain is usually a hardship, not a pleasure.

As James J. Hill stated a few weeks ago, taking over the railroads would be the first and easiest step. The great problem—not the solution—would begin directly Uncle Sam took charge.

SEARS-ROEBUCK "MELON."

One Will Be Cut, but Directors Have Not Decided How.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—It is estimated that Sears-Roebuck sales for 1912 will range in total between $80,000,000 and $85,000,000. The company gained $10,000,000 in business the first eight months of the year, and September earnings will be on a big scale. Immense storehouses are being built at Dallas, Texas and Dallas.

Directors are not yet agreed as to the "melon" they will soon cut for the benefit of stockholders. Some want the dividend raised from 7 to 8 per cent and a 25 per cent stock dividend, and others are willing that dividends should remain at 7 per cent, with stock dividends of 12 1-2 per cent. It is predicted that in five or six years the gross business of the Sears-Roebuck concern will reach $200,000,000 per annum.

BEEF MAY BE LOWER.

Cattlemen Scared by Big Corn Crop and Rush for Market.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 14.—There has been a big movement of cattle to market because of dry pastures in certain Oklahoma and Kansas districts, where farmers have not been holding back herds to get higher prices, now think it is time to sell. The corn crop prospects have scared them some, as the great harvest may cut down the cost of beef. On Monday last 20,500 head of cattle were received here, which is the largest run for a single day on record with exception of corresponding date in 1903, when 25,000 were received.

Sheep receipts on Monday were 30,500, establishing a new record for the Kansas City market.

AUTOS FOR RAILS.

Lehigh Valley Will Do Away with Power Handcars.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The old-fashioned handcar propelled by man power is doomed, for it is believed all railroads will follow the Lehigh Valley example and substitute for them automobiles to run on rails. The road has ordered forty-seven motor cars of the new type, and they will go as fast as twenty miles an hour.

CHAIN OF MAMMOTH DEPARTMENT STORES COMPLETED WHEN BOSTON WAS INVADED

THE MAP SHOWS THE LOCATION OF THE FOUR SIEGEL STORES AND THE PARIS OFFICE. HENRY SIEGEL CO. ARE THE ONLY STORE IN THE WORLD THAT EVER ADVERTISED "A SALE OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE."

Ten years ago or, to be exact, Sept. 1905, the Henry Siegel Company opened to the purchasers of New England one of the finest department stores in the country. It was the culmination of the efforts of Henry Siegel to form a chain of such stores, and the results in this section justified his foresight, for the Boston store has been a success from its very first day.

Henry Siegel is a true type of the merchant prince who starts at the bottom and works to the top. Born in Germany in 1852, the son of a farmer, securing a common school education, America appealed to him as the land of opportunity. So he came here in 1867. He was then 15 years of age. He had been preceded by his 10 brothers but on his arrival sought out his own position.

As an employe of a clothing store at Washington, D. C., at $3.50 a week he started his upward climb. In four years he had risen to the position of salesman at $15 a week, evidence that he was determined to progress. Then he went to Parkersburg, Penn., where for two years he worked for his brothers, leaving them to become a partner in the Lawrenceburg, Penn., store operated by them.

Studying all the elements of the business during these years, either as a salesman at the store or traveling on the road, he was acquiring a splendid foundation for his future success in getting in close touch with the people of various communities and learning from personal contact what purchasers needed and were willing to buy.

So when he went to Chicago in 1876, where there was a wider field, he was eminently fitted to take advantage of all its opportunities. There the foundations for the present gigantic enterprise were being placed and so securely that they would continue to grow and prosper. In May, 1887, the famous Siegel, Cooper & Co. store that, in addition to being a department store for Chicagoans, is one of the great places of interest to visitors to that city interested in mercantile affairs, was launched upon its phenomenal career.

New York then seemed to afford another opportunity for success and to begin upon the plan which Mr. Siegel had evolved years before, that of having a chain of stores. So New York was invaded, and after some time there he and his associates purchased the great Simpson Crawford Company.

This was followed by the establishing of "The 14th Street Store," one of the great popular price department stores in the city. This was in 1904. Once these three stores were running smoothly and all the details to insure their success were perfected other cities were given consideration.

Opening in Boston.

Boston seemed to afford the best opportunity. Mr. Siegel knew the city and its environs: its large purchasing classes with New England to draw from, for he was a student of such things, and its multiplicity of nationalities, all within easy reach of the city, people of thrift, impressed him favorably.

So he came here and looked over possible sites. It is no easy matter at any time to come to Boston and secure an entire city block, for that was what was wanted. More particularly a block that could be reached easily by all lines of cars was not available, it seemed. And to get such a place on Washington street, where land values are so high, seemed out of the question.

However, Mr. Siegel knew what he wanted, and set to work to get it. Realizing that Boylston street was one of the main arteries to the Back Bay, with Essex street a direct line to the South Station and Washington street leading north and south, the selection of a site was simplified from that point of view. The other details were later worked out, and when the announcement was made that the entire block now occupied by the Henry Siegel Company store had been purchased for a department store Bostonians in particular and New Englanders in general rubbed their eyes in amazement.

That a well-known hotel, the old Savoy, then doing a good business and really a new structure, was to be razed among the other buildings seemed too much to believe. But along came the army of men and they speedily did the work, and one after another of the buildings passed into oblivion to be replaced with the present splendid structure of seven stories and two basements. That expense was not spared on the building is apparent to all, for the most modern equipment for the quick handling of customers and merchandise was installed. And when the store was finally opened there was added to Boston's colony of mercantile establishments the first full-grown store that was complete on its opening day, and the fourth such store opened by Mr. Siegel and his associates.

Also it was the first new department store opened in a quarter of a century in Boston and the only such one to occupy an entire city block.

Co-operation of Buyers.

It was a success from the start. There are many essentials necessary to make such a gigantic business successful, among the more important being the buyers. With such a big organization comprising the Siegel enterprises, naturally it is possible to do more than may be done by smaller firms.

For example, if a manufacturer has a stock of 1,000 suits on hand and much of his money is invested in the material, labor, etc., and he is in need of funds, he seeks a quick market. He does not want to sell a part of the goods and have a lot left over. The Siegel Companies appeal to him and he asks an offer, for he realizes that with Chicago, New York and Boston available, the entire stock may be bought.

The buyers make an estimate, a cash offer is made, the suits are purchased much below their original selling value and placed on sale in the Siegel stores at a price that makes them real bargains. They are quickly disposed of and everyone has been aided from maker to purchaser. This is but one instance of the tremendous purchasing power of the four Siegel stores. It is a well known fact that where purchases are made in large quantities and for cash there is the [illegible] quantity [illegible] and the Siegel stores get the full advantage of this and they are therefore able to buy and sell high grade merchandise at remarkably low figures.

Co-operation among the buyers is one of the big features of the Siegel enterprises. Going from place to place a buyer for the Chicago store may run across something that he knows could be used in New York or Boston, and the New York or Boston buyers may find something available outside of their territory, for there is an individuality among many communities in buying things.

So notifications are sent to New York, Chicago or Boston, and as all the buyers realize that they are working for the success of the entire organization, there are no bickerings or jealousies, harmony being the prevalent dominant note, and so the matter is taken up and attended to, with the result that many sales at low figures follow to the great benefit of the public.

Mr. Siegel or his associates make no attempt to govern the ideas of the buyers. These latter are allowed to develop their own plans, and the result of this individuality is apparent to those who follow department store sales. Being allowed to use their own judgment, they are not hesitating, uncertain and vacillating in their judgment to the detriment of the stores. It gives them a feeling of confidence that assures the best that is in them to build up their departments, and the public is the gainer thereby.

Thoroughly Modern Store.

That the Boston store is maintained upon the same high standard as the Chicago and New York stores is a well-known fact to men and women who make frequent trips from Boston to the other two cities. These people have become so accustomed to buying at the Henry Siegel Company store here that when they want anything at New York or Chicago when visiting they invariably turn to the stores under the same management in the latter cities.

One store is not neglected at the expense of another for Mr. Siegel in addition to making frequent trips to Boston at regular intervals keeps advised of everything by means of a private leased telephone line that gives him details daily when he is in New York or Chicago.

An evidence of the fact that Boston people realize that the local store is thoroughly modern may be cited from the millinery department. For many years Simpson-Crawford Company of New York has enjoyed the reputation of having one of the best lines of millinery in this country. Many women went to New York purposely to buy their hats there, for the best dressed ladies of the Metropolis were among its patrons.

Visits to the Henry Siegel Company store here from time to time have shown many of these women that it is possible to get the same high-class goods in this city as at the New York store. So many Boston women now save the time—price did not matter when they knew they were going to secure the latest styles—by purchasing their millinery here.

Three representatives of the millinery departments have been in Europe for some time studying the styles. They have visited the Grand Prix, the one big society function that draws to France the nobility and the best dressed women of all Europe, and there they have had ample opportunity to study material and effects.

With the best possible organization of designers and copyists in its employ the Siegel enterprises are able to reproduce the fashions of the Continent. Also the designers produce effects of their own that appeal to women. In the local store the millinery is all made up, not bought ready-made. So a purchaser may indicate what she wishes and it is arranged for her. Some of the styles abroad, and even in New York, do not appeal to women here at all times, and so adaptations to suit local conditions are brought out that are equally as attractive and effective.

Furniture Club a Success.

Similar success has attended other departments. This is particularly true of the furniture department. One of the innovations was the formation of the now famous Siegel Furniture Club. Any reliable person may join this club and secure whatever articles he wishes on time payments.

The best of it is that the prices are the same as if the person went to the store, picked out the goods and paid cash. The furniture section has developed into one of the most successful in the entire store, evidence of its attraction for buyers being shown the past few days, when it was crowded every day at the anniversary sale.

Very popular with women is the department devoted to ladies' wearing apparel. This occupies the greater part of the second floor, fronting on Washington street, where there is admirable light, so that purchasers may get the true color value of the gowns and dresses.

This department also is enriched by ideas from abroad and all the smart fashions are shown. If some of these appear too extreme there are modifications to suit all tastes. Therefore, one may get perfectly plain or exceptionally fancy gowns. Everything is arranged so that misses or women may get suits, coats, dresses, skirts, etc., without having to ramble at random about the floor.

The fur department has grown remarkably, too. Just now, with Winter some months away, this department is very busy, for the Summer prices are most attractive. From Paris every week or two come letters on the styles there, and the latest one, dated a week ago, stated that mole coney and mole were to be very fashionable.

So one has but to look about the department and note among the various sets and coats that the buyers have been alive to the advance styles, for mole furs are in evidence. This season furs are to be prettier than ever, it is stated. The coats will be full length and carry the loose effect to the waist and then follow the lines of the figure closer to the bottom. The pillow style in muffs will continue to be popular.

"The Little Shop."

"'The Little Shop' is a recent addition. It is a good one, too. This is located on the Washington street front, where, with twelve windows, there is absolute daylight. For eight days only it was given over to tailoring, after which it is devoted to clothing for men. There one may find the latest styles in English coats made especially for the Henry Siegel Company at Leeds. These comprise heavy coats for motoring or walking.

The clothing departments proper are divided by a long aisle, with the clothes for men on one side and that for boys on the other. There is plenty of room to see the goods, glasses to note the fit, fitting rooms right at hand—in fact, everything necessary to make them complete.

One thing in particular about the boys' section is that after a suit has been purchased for a lad he may also get neckties, hat, collars and all the rest of the outfit, with the exception of shoes, right there, instead of having to go from one department to another. Mothers can appreciate what this means when they go shopping, for it is sometimes annoying to go from one floor to another in search of articles for children.

Then there is the restaurant. This has become famous for its splendid food, moderate prices and service. It is a favorite place for shoppers particularly, while it also has a trade combining many men and women who work in town and who have found it convenient.

The grocery department is on the same floor. This is the fifth floor and one reason for placing it so high up is that Mr. Siegel has long been an exponent of pure and clean foods. So when it was planned to put in the grocery department it was located up there, 61 feet above the street, where dust and germs would never get a chance to spread about the articles.

What is true of the departments described above is also true of all the other ones, big and little, in the store, so many that to particularize each would fill many columns.

Mr. Siegel Always Planning.

"That Mr. Siegel is ever planning to do a little more than ordinarily is expected from a proprietor of a department store is shown by two recent innovations." The first of these is the kinemacolor moving picture shows that may be seen at the store every afternoon. And like everything else he has worked out these are not the ordinary films, but they show the colors so that one gets the real effects of what is thrown on the screen. These pictures are given with special attention to the women and children, being educational, humorous or serious, but clean and wholesome.

The other evidence that Mr. Siegel believes that mere buying is not enough for a big store in catering to its purchasers, but that it should furnish educational and human interest for all, is to be found in "The Woman's Handiwork Exposition," referred to elsewhere on this page.

Selling goods is one thing, but placing them in the hands of the purchasers at a reasonable time after the order has been taken is another. Here again the Siegel organization keeps abreast of the times. In addition to its large number of horse-drawn vehicles, the Henry Siegel Company has added motor vehicles for the quick delivery of articles to purchasers living at a distance that would take the horses until late in the night to reach, or delay the delivery until another day.

It is a story of progress of which from beginning to end any merchant might well be proud, but what pleases Mr. Siegel the most is the fact that his efforts to give Boston such a splendid store and maintain it at such a high level of excellence has been rewarded by the appreciation on the part of the thousands of shoppers here. It is their co-operation that has aided in making it a success, and it is his aim to keep the store on a par with the best in the United States.

The Woman's Handiwork Exposition.

A display of women's skill will be held in Boston for five weeks, beginning tomorrow, and continuing until Friday, Oct. 18, in the Henry Siegel Company Building.

The object of the exposition is to show examples of the various kinds of work that can be done by women and to offer awards to encourage women of Boston and surrounding towns and country to exhibit the work that they have done.

During the five weeks in which this exposition is held there will be 25 or more different lines of work on exhibition, divided into five groups. Exhibition of each line covers a week and awards amounting to more than $500 will be distributed to women who furnish good specimens of work for exhibition. Official "honor" blue ribbons to the number of 1500 will also be awarded to women furnishing specimens for exhibition, who may not be successful in securing cash awards.

No entrance fee or any other charge whatsoever will be made to any woman for any articles which she wishes to exhibit, and each woman may exhibit just as many articles as she desires. The only condition is that the article or articles exhibited shall be made by the woman who exhibits them and sent to the store on the proper day before the week on which the goods are on exhibition and called for again on the proper day after the close of the week in which the articles are on exhibition.

When the articles are delivered they will be properly receipted for and given a number only, so that no one may know who makes the exhibit until after the awards have been made. At the end of the week's exhibition the articles will be carefully returned to the owners without charge or delay, and such awards as may be secured will be delivered as stated above. The names of those receiving rewards will be published.

Twenty-five first awards of $10 in cash will be made, one for the best specimen exhibited in each of the five divisions in each of the five exhibitions of work which the exhibit covers. Twenty-five second awards of $5, one for each of the second best specimens in each exhibit. Twenty-five third awards of $3, one for each of the third best specimens in each exhibit. Twenty-five awards of $2, one for each of the fourth best specimens in each exhibit. Twenty-five awards of $1, one for each of the fifth best specimens in each exhibit.

"GRAPE BUBBLES or SOAP BUBBLES!"

Peculiarities of Fashionable Society's Craziest Season Which Demands the Limit of Sophisticated Extravagance, Or the Limit of Primitive Simplicity?

"THERE are only two ways of doing things this season," said Mr. Ned Berwind to Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish recently.

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Fish.

"I mean it's either grape bubbles—or soap bubbles," said Mr. Berwind.

What this shining leader of the advanced social set had in mind was a peculiar juxtaposition of events which had just been gossiped about in Newport. One part of the story told that a very charming young society matron had found that champagne baths were the best things for her general health, complexion and spirits.

The young matron, so the story ran, had fixed up a wonderful dolphin and a wonderful swimming pool at her very wonderful Newport "cottage." The dolphin spouted champagne—sometimes the expensive pink kind, very often the still more expensive yellow kind. The medical reason was that the bubbles in the champagne were immensely stimulating, and the alcohol and other elements had their resuscitating effects. Of course, this was very expensive, but the matron felt that she could afford it, and so she did it.

And just at the time that this became noised around some one discovered that Mrs. Phil Lydig had gone to the limit of simplicity 'way off in the wildwoods, and was doing her bathing in spring water poured into regular, old-fashioned wooden wash tubs. Such a contrast!

The contrast, however, is only typical of this whole present Newport season. Whether that part of America which is known as society is more than ever in need of an expert psychiatrist or whether, following well-known nature processes, it is in the throes of evolving into a brand new age, is a question.

There are certain physical laws which settle that when a rapidly revolving body gets revolving fast enough the lighter, frothier parts go shooting extravagantly up to the surface and out into oblivion, while the heavier, more solid parts drop down and form a more useful, permanent centre. Maybe this is what is happening to society. The circus set is getting more and more extravagant, and may eventually disappear in a burst of fireworks of its own make. The primitive simplicity party may be the nucleus of a moneyed leisure class of the future which will really have some excuse for being on earth.

The Joseph Leiters, of Washington and Chicago, are among the leaders of extreme simplicity. They have given up their usual gay Bar Harbor season, have closed their sixty-room mansion, have placed in storage six of their eight motor cars and are leading a back-to-nature life on the Leiter farm in the Virginia hills.

"The gayety of the Summer crowd at Newport and Bar Harbor appalls me," said Mrs. Leiter. "I found myself unable to thrill at any of the usual events," and so here we are, babies and all, going in for the extreme of simplicity. Our food is fresh farm truck, fresh eggs, quantities of milk and cream, and we literally lead farmers' lives, and I am finding my new existence one long thrill."

This is really the truth. The Leiters have a 7 o'clock breakfast, raised on the place. The chubby children wear absolutely nothing but little linen smocks. They make mud pies and dig for worms. They get dirty, but they are wildly happy. Mr. Leiter, whose previous existence was slightly hectic in color, who has bucked the wheat market, lost and made millions and entertained on the most elaborate and expensive scale, to-day finds thrills in his farmer-like life. He treats his friends to buttermilk and home-made cake, where a year ago pink champagne would have been their portion.

This is one extreme. What a contrast are the sensations on which certain of the Newport set are feeding. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's magnificent midsummer ball, by its extreme cost, its extreme glory, supplied a nine days' sensation. "Nothing can equal this for sensation," said society. The very next day Mrs. August Belmont gave a picnic on the beach near Nancy Hazard's farm. Sandwiches, iced tea, roast clams and corn was the collation. Was there ever a more striking contrast to the ball at Crossways? Instead of breathing the air perfumed by thousands of dollars' worth of flowers, Mrs. Belmont's guests breathed ocean air that cost nothing.

Within twenty-four hours, in one place, fashion had thus run the gamut of sensation. From the sixty-thousand-dollar ball to the sixty-cent luncheon!

The extreme "extravagantists" are wearing out their brains to provide sensation-food for themselves and their friends. Ordinary sensations do not count. When Miss Lota Robinson, leader of "Baltimore's Brass Band," entered the casino wearing a monocle and carrying her parasol upside down; when Miss Arthur Scott Burden trotted in carrying a cane, no one gasped. But when Mrs. Aleck Bache Pratt walked across the lawn wearing one bright red silk stocking and one white cotton stocking there was a shudder. Her skirt was slashed so as to show the red stocking very distinctly. The next day Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Jr., Miss Alice Drexel and Miss Peggy Andrews walked in, each wearing one white and one black stocking. On the white foot a black pump and on the black foot a white pump!

Back to the simplicity folk again.

Mrs. Phil Lydig, worn out by the gayeties of the Winter season and by the cares of her million-dollar mansion, found life palling on her. She could go to no further extreme in extravagance; nothing thrilled her. Off she went to a lodge in the wilderness, with one maid and a small trunk, in contrast to her thirty servants and sixty trunks. Mrs. Lydig fled to the mountains. For two months she lived on the barest necessaries. Her morning tub was taken in an ordinary wooden wash tub—the water heated in a tin teakettle. This gave her the thrills that her hand-carved marble tub refused. The water from the teakettle had a tang that the water from her solid silver taps at home did not have.

"I got the same sensation, the same thrills from my wash tub that the leader of the Newport set gets from her champagne fountain shower bath," said Mrs. Lydig the day she sailed for Europe after her eight weeks of back-to-the-wash-tub life.

This "extreme" fad is growing. Fashionable society wonders where it will stop. Even among the children extremes meet. On one side the Leiter children, with their mud pies and linen smocks. At the other extreme Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt's little daughter Kathleen with her real lace frocks, diamond bracelet, gold necklace with jewelled locket, and gold chatelaine bag!

"And another in the humble washtub of the past!"

NEW DISCOVERIES ALL OVER THE EARTH

How the Presence of ARSENIC In FOOD May Affect Many MURDER TRIALS

RECENT scientific discoveries that arsenic is to be found in scores of varieties of food, possibly in hundreds of kinds of fruit and vegetables, may have within a few years a decided effect in murder trials where people are held on suspicion of killing or attempting to kill others by means of arsenic.

It is widely known that arsenic is an accumulative poison; that is, a little will not kill, but unlike most poisons, it does not all leave the system. Consequently continual small doses that are harmless in themselves will leave a sufficient accumulation of the poison in the system to eventually kill.

There was a case in Boston not many years ago where a widow was held for many months in prison, it being claimed she had poisoned her children and others by means of arsenic. It is true she had them all insured, but the case never came to trial for lack of evidence, and from the prosecuting attorney's office came the rather startling information that the arsenic was in the mattresses of the beds, in their manufacture, in sufficient quantities to bring about the death of the victims. It was all very vague, but the woman was released.

It has been found that there is arsenic in truffles, celery, almonds, beans and many other things. It is now held by many that arsenic poisoning by this means may have resulted in a number of cases where relatives and others were later held responsible, as an autopsy would show an accumulation of the poison. Arsenic has also been found in certain kinds of cloth, which goes, in a way, to sustain the claim in the Boston woman's case that there was poison in the mattress.

Science has investigated only a certain number of eatables so far. Nor has it extended investigations to our meat diet, except to state in a general way, that all animals and fish contain arsenic as a result of eating plants that contain arsenic, even as man does.

It follows, then, that we take arsenic into our system both by meats and the vegetable food consumed.

Only part of this poison again issues from the body by the natural processes; a certain percentage is absorbed by the tissues; more by the blood; the rest is liable to form deposits in the body, and often leads to suspicions, such as science is now ready to disprove.

On account of such arsenic deposits found in the body of relatives, friends or enemies, many a man or woman has been branded poisoner, and a great many persons have been executed on what seemed sufficient circumstantial evidence pointing towards their having administered arsenic to the alleged victim, a mode of proceeding still quite common in law courts the world over.

But now that science has investigated and will continue to investigate food stuffs as to their arsenic properties, it may be hoped that such miscarriages of justice will cease, while the courts must reform the practice in cases of alleged arsenic poisoning.

Doctors Jardin and Astruc, Parisian scientists, conducted the latest investigations of the vegetables and fruits referred to in this article, and Professor Armand Gautier lectured on the facts before the French Academy of Sciences, crediting the German chemist Stein with the initiative in the matter.

Gautier, on his part, demonstrated that himself, assisted by Gabriel Bertrand, discovered the presence of "normal quantities" of arsenic in the bodies of humans as well as animals—that all contained such.

Scientists Have Found This POISON in FRUITS, VEGETABLES and FABRICS

Stein, explained the lectures, as early as 1858, discovered arsenic in potatoes, cabbage and beets by burning these vegetables to ashes and analyzing the latter.

He found what he called "considerable quantities" in each, but science not recognizing the importance of his experiments, Stein didn't continue them.

The vegetables and fruits so far tested as to their arsenic properties by Doctors Jardin and Astruc are as follows:

VEGETABLES:

100 Grains of black truffles contain	0.020 arsenic
100 Grains of celery contain	0.020 arsenic
100 Grains of lima beans contain	0.020 arsenic
100 Grains of white beans contain	0.010 arsenic
100 Grains of artichokes contain	0.010 arsenic
100 Grains of asparagus contain	0.010 arsenic
100 Grains of lentils contain	0.010 arsenic
100 Grains of head salad contain	0.010 arsenic
100 Grains of watercress contain	0.012 arsenic
100 Grains of radishes contain	0.009 arsenic
100 Grains of large peas contain	0.009 arsenic
100 Grains of small peas contain	0.004 arsenic
100 Grains of soup greens contain	0.023 arsenic
100 Grains of spinach contain	0.009 arsenic
100 Grains of cauliflower contain	0.008 arsenic
100 Grains green onion leaves contain	0.003 arsenic
100 Grains of Japan rice contain	0.007 arsenic

Among fruits, almonds contain the most arsenic, which may account for their bitter taste.

FRUITS:

100 Grains of nuts contain	0.011 arsenic
100 Grains of big nuts contain	0.013 arsenic
100 Grains of Spanish oranges contain	0.011 arsenic
100 Grains of Mandarins contain	0.012 arsenic
100 Grains of pineapple contain	0.008 arsenic
100 Grains of bananas contain	0.006 arsenic
100 Grains of chestnuts contain	0.005 arsenic
100 Grains of apples contain	0.005 arsenic
100 Grains of pears contain	0.007 arsenic

As Stein did not give exact figures with respect to the arsenic in cabbages, beets and potatoes, these vegetables are now under investigation by the French scientists. The German, however, finished his investigations with regard to two articles of vegetable growth with which man comes into contact.

He found in the ashes of 10,000 grains of linen 0.11 grains of arsenic.

The offal of cows, according to the same scientists, contains 0.03 grains per 10,000, which fact suggests speculation on the amount of arsenic we swallow with our beef.

Since, in the past, medical jurisprudence decided that the fatal dose of arsenic for an adult is from two to three grains, and since all foods contain arsenic, many, as seen, in considerable quantities, it seems quite within the possibilities that a person of good appetite may gradually absorb the fatal amount with his food.

Take the case of those vegetarians, for instance, who live almost exclusively on almonds (0.025 arsenic in every 100 grains).

Those almond-fanatics necessarily lay up arsenic deposits in their body, and until the present discovery did so, unconsciously, at others' peril, as the finding of two or three grains of arsenic always suggested foul play to the medical and judicial mind.

Strange to say, a suggestion that all food contains more or less arsenic was made even before Stein partly proved it by his experiments, namely, at the famous murder trial of Madam Lesurge, in 1842.

Madam Lesurge, a Parisian, was charged with having poisoned a whole family with arsenic; the State apparently proved the case by expert medical testimony, the chief witness being Professor Orila, then the greatest living authority in medical jurisprudence.

To the Court's astonishment, Madam Lesarge's lawyer, Raspail by name, dared to question the State's expert, even to call him an ignoramus.

"Arsenic," he argued, "is not only found in food, but is present in every natural product.

"If the Court grants me the time, I will distill arsenic out of the wood and stuffing of the very chair the Judge is sitting on."

The challenge was not accepted, as Judge and jury refused to take it seriously.

And Science, for nearly seventy years, agreed with them.

Why BLOOD, Not Membrane, Causes HAY FEVER

DR. HERMAN DEKKER has an interesting theory to explain hay fever and the allied asthma, as well as the rash which sometimes attends these diseases and which in non-sufferers from either is frequently caused by strawberries or other fruits.

Everybody knows, of course, that it is the pollen of certain flowers, such as golden rod and the tiny seeds that detach themselves from new mown grass which are most liable to cause the mischief. The pollen is supposed to irritate the mucous membrane of the nose, thus causing the catarrh and sneezing which are the symptoms of hay fever.

Dr. Dekker's theory is that the blood is at fault and not the mucous membrane. It is only through the mucous membrane that the pollen most frequently affects its entrance into the system, and it is not because the pollen irritates the mucous membrane, but because the albumen contained in a particular kind of pollen is inimical to the blood of certain persons. This would explain why certain hay-fever sufferers are sensitive to pollen of certain flowers and non-sensitive to others. Some get hay fever from golden rod, some from clover, some from grass, some from fertiliser. Dr. Dekker points out that it is always some organic substance, that is, some substance containing albumen, which is responsible for the disease.

Why should certain kinds of albumen affect some folks and not others? Let us see first of all what happens when a bit of albumen of any kind enters directly into the blood instead of being passed into the stomach through the mouth. It has been found that when albumen is introduced directly into the blood, as in treating a patient with diphtheria serum obtained from some animal, and therefore containing the albuminous substance of that particular kind of animal—the blood, if examined almost immediately afterward, contains digestive ferments which it did not contain before, and which are similar, if not identical, with the ferments which in the digestive organs attend to the digestion of albumen. Thus the albumen injected into the blood splits up into extremely small particles. In the digestive organs these infinitesimally small particles are separated and sifted. The useful elements are taken up into the blood, the injurious ones are carried out of the system. But, if directly introduced into the blood, the injurious elements cannot be drained away. Along with the useful elements they are carried to the various tissues and cells and organs of the body, and are incorporated with them, interfering considerably with their normal chemical action. It takes eight to ten days for the system to assimilate albumen injected into the blood, and after the first treatment apparently no bad effects are sustained; but if the experiment is repeated after, say, ten days, the old poison now heaped up and distributed throughout the body is transformed into a sort of explosive by combining with the new poison, interfering materially with the respiratory organs, inflating the lungs and lowering the temperature. This is called the anaphylactic experiment.

According to Dr. Dekker, persons who get hay fever from golden rod pollen have a certain amount of old, latent poison stored up in their system. On coming in contact with the new, fresh poison, the trouble is brewed.

Why We CONDUCT ELECTRICITY

SCARCELY a day passes without the death of some poor fellow who is engaged on work in connection with or near wires heavily charged with electric current and wonder is often expressed that the human body should be so ready a conductor of electricity. A very small thing may insulate a worker, so that he can handle even heavily charged wires with impunity; a rubber glove will do it, or when shoeless, the wearing of silk socks.

Yet the human body is a highly complex thing, and it would seem that even though one part were a good conductor, another part, unlike it, could not be; unless, indeed, there is some one substance so widely spread through the body that it forms a medium. The latter supposition is the truth. Wherever possible, electricity usually prefers a metal to other substances, and the body is full of metal sodium in the form of chloride of sodium or common salt.

When small and carefully regulated currents are passed through the body, it frequently happens that good results are secured and electro-therapeutics has become a recognized part of the work of the medical profession. Yet is must be carefully administered, for the body is extremely sensitive to electricity and vertigo and flashing of the eyes is sometimes felt with very weak currents. A curious sour taste frequently is noticed when electricity is passing through the body, and other evidences of a decomposition of the salts of the body, together with the formation of new chemical compounds.

Under careful study, the action of electricity upon the nerve centres has been shown to be greatly stimulating, and it promotes the activity of certain of the cells (such as the skin), while at the same time reducing the digestive function. On the other hand, it greatly increases blood pressure, and this is a danger which needs to be watched constantly as many persons are not able to stand much increase of pressure in the circulatory system.

Artificial STEAKS and CHOPS

WILL the time ever come when, instead of going to the butcher's for our fresh killed beef, or steaks, chops and chickens we will go to the chemist's and buy a few pounds of absolutely fresh but artificially grown meats?

Artificial food has been one of the great experiments of chemists and other scientists for years. Many attempts to make food by artificial means that would prove as palatable and nourishing as the true-grown vegetable or animal food, have been made, but with no success, at least, not with sufficient success to warrant any hopes of actually utilizing the results of such experiments.

Now comes Professor W. H. Lewis and his wife, of Johns Hopkins, who have succeeded in making cellular substances grow indefinitely outside of the organisms to which they originally belonged. What the Professor and his wife claim to have actually accomplished is that they have taken pieces of chicken, placed them in a saline solution and grown chicken meat!

They have discovered that it is possible to cut off some of this chicken meat without hindering further growth and the process can be repeated indefinitely. They also claim that the process can be applied to any sort of flesh.

Dealing with the question of his discoveries, Dr. Lewis says:

"The value of all these experiments which my wife and I have conducted has several different phases. For instance, it may some day have a great commercial value. There is nothing to prevent our operations from being conducted on a much larger scale. Suppose that you had a number of vats filled with saline solutions, and that in these solutions you put the muscles or other organs of various animals, not only while in the embryo, but even when they had reached the adult stage.

"There would be large growths, and these would be edible. In other words, the salt solutions could be turned into incubators, sure to hatch, and from which pieces of embryo chicks could be taken every day without hindering the increase of the supply."

The possibilities conjured up by this statement are so great as to almost verge on the grotesque. The idea of actually growing meat appears to offend the laws of nature and yet science has done stranger things. The more immediate good likely to result from the discovery would be of a medicinal character. It would be possible to transplant organs of the human body in these solutions, to observe their growth, what they feed on, what they secrete, the things which are beneficial to them, and those that are dangerous. The way would thus be cleared for many important medicinal discoveries, as the discovery of the cure for many growths—cancer and tumor, for instance—would be greatly facilitated by discovering on what they feed.

Whether the time will ever come when science can supply our markets with artificial steaks and chops is a question that seems absurd; but science has already done stranger things than that.

Why the TOBACCO QUESTION Is Still UNSETTLED

AFTER all that has been said against the use of tobacco, and the little that has been said in its favor from the source of medical authority rather than from its pleased users, the actual question, "Is tobacco harmful?" has by no means been settled.

According to "American Medicine," about all that medical authorities are positive of concerning tobacco is that it is really injurious to the young. They are even in doubt as to what age it is safe for a young man to begin its use.

In connection with this, Dr. G. H. Meylan, of Columbia University, has made some interesting observations, which he has turned into statistics. It was this that influenced an editorial writer of the medical publication just mentioned to write the following:

"Meylan seems to think that as the users of tobacco are those of larger means, and have had the benefit of better nutrition and generally more favorable environment, they should show much better form than they do, and that, therefore, they may have been stunted by nicotine poisoning. On the other hand, they make greater gains in development in these two years than the abstainers, yet that may be due to a more natural way of living, for they indulge in outdoor sports more largely.

"It is also shown that the users are more idle, less ambitious, lack application, and attain a lower scholarship. If tobacco has these effects, it also causes a tendency to a religious life, for the vast majority of Christian clergymen use the weed, and many of them excessively, even since early boyhood. As a mat of fact, Meylan's figures can be used as a condemnation of our educational system, since the better-endowed boys do not profit by it as much as the weaker and poorer 'grinds,' who are often far from normal specimens.

"The benefit of tobacco for adults is also far from being understood, for we must assume a benefit in customs so nearly universal. Harmful habits disappear by the laws of survival. Whenever an explanation is given out by a physiologist worthy of a hearing, we are quite sure to find his statement flatly contradicted by some one else equally worthy. In the meantime the per capita consumption is apparently steadily increasing, and, moreover, with the progressive development of transportation facilities enabling growers to ship tobacco profitably to and from places formerly inaccessible, we find a steady increase in the amount of the earth's surface devoted to the cultivation of the plant, and a steady increase in the proportion of the world's population making their living in its growth, manufacture and distribution.

"The only thing we are sure about is the fact that even a tiny amount is distinctly harmful to little children, and though, to be on the safe side, we advise boys to abstain until well past twenty, we really have not the slightest idea of the exact age it can be used with benefit, or at least without harm. To accuse it of responsibility for low scholarship or idleness is as baseless as the assumption it keeps men in the church ministry. Healthy, normal boys are not instinctive scholars and naturally good to the tobacco and other habits which we try to repress, because of possible dangers, but the wholesale denunciations of the drug in early manhood are as unscientific as the explanations of its benifits for the fully matured.

"Nor can we yet say what is moderation or excess, and we must take every case on its merits, for we occasionally find men seriously poisoned by an amount apparently indispensible for some one else. The whole subject, like too many others inherited from our prescientific days, is full of baseless opinions. We want accurate data, for at present we may assume from Meylan's figures that as the best-developed boys are the users, the habit is a natural and wholesome one.".

Creatures That DIGEST Food BEFORE EATING It

TO digest food before eating it seems an impossibility, and is indeed "putting the cart before the horse," at least in the mind of the average layman, and yet French scientists have, by means of long and careful observation and experiment, found a creature that does exactly this. It is a sort of water beetle resembling in a small degree a caterpillar.

This creature, commonly known as a "water beetle," has a proper or scientific name, the "dytiscus" and its larva has no mouth, yet is a most ferocious little creature with an enormous appetite, and so bent on devouring everything in sight that they cannot be kept in small aquariums with other living things or anywhere near their own size.

A celebrated French naturalist, M. Henri Coupin, tells of this creature that digests first and eats afterward, in La Nature, a Paris publication. Says M. Coupin:

"It is not always necessary that food shall penetrate into the stomach to be digested. In the case of certain insects it undergoes a somewhat advanced degree of digestion outside the body of the eater. This curious phenomenon is encountered notably in the larva of a coleopter, the dytiscus, which, from this point of view, has been made the subject of an interesting investigation by Portier.

This aquatic insect which is very common in our ponds, has somewhat the form of a caterpillar, and has at its front end a large flat head armed at the sides with two curved hooks, which it is able to bring together. Now, if we examine the place where we should expect to find the mouth, we see no orifice, although the insect has a perfectly normal digestive tube and is also very ferocious, as those know who have tried to keep it in an aquarium.

The explanation of this absence is found when we examine the hooks mentioned above, which have at the points a narrow opening. This orifice leads to a fine, almost capillary canal, which ends, in its turn, in the digestive tract. This is, therefore, the passage through which the food enters; the larva plunges its mandibles into the body of its victim and sucks of the juices. This would appear simple enough, but, on reflection we are led to inquire how it happens that the prey is completely devoured by the insect. The blood is sucked up as through a tube—there is no difficulty there—but how can the organs, such as glands, fatty tissue and muscles filter through such an extremely narrow passage? This is evidently impossible.

Something else must take place which is really very simple—the larva injects into the body of its victim a digestive fluid which changes the organs into a liquid, easily sucked up. Take, for instance, one of the larvae and a small fish and let us see, with M. Portier, what takes place. The larva casts itself on its prey and plunges into the body. After several seconds a jet of black liquid envelops the fish.

Under the microscope it can be seen that all the organs are swathed in a grayish atmosphere which remains sufficiently transparent to allow of detailed observation. We then see the different tissues, and in particular the fat, disappear little by little in a veritable liquefaction. Suddenly there appears within the body of the victim an intense current that draws all these liquids toward the mandibles of the larva. Particles become detached from all sides of the organs and are carried by this current into the digestive passage.

Little by little the prey is completely emptied of the liquid that it contains; the organs then remain dry for about half a minute, when all at once a new flood of dark liquid enters the cavity and the phenomena are repeated until the fish, or whatever the prey may be, is "devoured."

Fortunately for the aquatic creatures, this dytiscus is a small creature; otherwise scarcely any sizable denizens of the water would be safe from its destructible mandibles. Being only the size of an ordinary caterpillar, it can eat only such fish as are of its own size or under. Were it not for the fact that the dytiscus is not to be found in large numbers while the fish are many, it would greatly lessen the fish supply in fresh water ponds.

THEIR PRE-NUPTIAL DIVORCE PACT!

How the Interesting Alfred Vanderbilts (Each Divorced Once, Most of Their Friends and Relatives Divorced Too) Have Planned to Rid Themselves of Divorce's Annoyances if They're Ever Divorced Again

London, Sept. 10.

IN the midst of the truly regal preparation for the advent of a Vanderbilt heir, reports of a curious pre-nuptial divorce agreement entered into by Mrs. Margaret Emerson McKim and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt a few days before their marriage in 1911 are current among the friends of the interesting couple. From the terms said to be included in this pact it would seem that American fashionable society has really made an innovation in the ancient code of courtship.

From time immemorial the man and the maid have been supposed to be too much in love with each other to contemplate anything but an uninterrupted term of marriage. Do not the fairy books say, "And then they lived happily ever after?" In fact, it used to be thought indelicate for a girl even to ask what her lover's prospects were—and the lover would never have thought of inquiring into his beloved's disharmonies of temper. The very idea of thinking about divorce while still in contemplation of matrimony would have been deemed outrageous.

And yet it would seem that the Vanderbilt forethought is more or less enlightened. The girl nowadays informs herself very fully upon her lover's financial standing and his prospects before she weds him. Eugenics are to the fore with their coldly scientific idea of mating. Many men when they become married get insured for the benefit of their wife and the prospective family. "In the midst of life we are in death!" Therefore, it would seem that the Vanderbilt idea, detrimental to romance as it may seem, is, after all, highly sensible and practical and up to date.

"How the divorce germ has affected the families."

Mr. Vanderbilt is the first man of his class to attempt to solve certain divorce problems before marrying. Of course, it is impossible to draw up any contract and set of regulations that would have any legal value in this country without running the risk of being convicted of collusion.

Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have evidently satisfied themselves that their agreement will help them both materially in the event of a divorce suit, and their friends say they are perfectly satisfied with it.

It was, too, the most natural thing for this prospective bride and groom to be the pioneers in such a movement. The divorce records on both sides presuppose a tendency to divorce in any member of both families. On the immediate Vanderbilt side there have been two divorces and two near-divorces. Mr. Vanderbilt himself was divorced by his first wife, Elsie French Vanderbilt. His uncle, William K. Vanderbilt, was divorced, his first wife later marrying Oliver H. P. Belmont. His cousins, Willie K. Vanderbilt and the Duchess of Marlborough, are separated from their domestic partners.

On Mrs. McKim's side the record showed "everybody was doing it." Her sister, Mrs. Jack Horner, divorced her husband and married James McVickar. Then her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Emerson, were divorced, and each has since married again. Mrs. McKim's divorce occurred just before that of her parents. Thus each member of her family has passed through the divorce court.

With these records before them the prospective bride and groom, so the story goes, decided to take this most unusual step. A week or two before the marriage was to be celebrated in the quaint little village of Reigate Borough, England, Mr. Vanderbilt appeared at Mrs. McKim's country estate with several very legal looking documents and his lawyer.

"In the midst of courtship prepare for divorce."

There was the marriage settlement and a new will to be signed, and then this divorce agreement was brought forth and discussed in this manner, according to friends who are fully acquainted with the details:

"We must do all we can to avoid any divorce complications. We have both suffered from too much publicity and newspaper notoriety. It behooves us, therefore, to forestall any such publicity in the event of our marriage proving unsuccessful," announced Mr. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. McKim nodded in assent and pointed out several things to be considered. "We must arrange the financial side, then, so that there will be no fight over alimony—poor mother was always in hot water over her allowance!"

"Quite right," responded Mr. Vanderbilt.

It was, therefore, arranged that Mrs. Vanderbilt, the bride, was, in event of divorce, under no conditions to talk to newspaper people or to give out any information about herself or her husband. Mr. Vanderbilt, on his side, was not to talk to any newspaper people on any subject but horses.

While their marriage continues happy and they live together, Mrs. Vanderbilt's personal allowance is to be, approximately, one hundred thousand dollars a year. Mr. Vanderbilt is to pay all house and stable maintenance.

In case of divorce, if Mr. Vanderbilt is at fault three million dollars are to be settled on his wife. Each girl child is to receive one million and each boy three millions. It is further specified that each child shall spend six months with each parent—no matter what the causes of separation. In case of a son, his entire education is to be arranged by the father.

If Mr. Vanderbilt secures the divorce, or it is secured by Mrs. Vanderbilt, although she be at fault, her allowance will be one hundred thousand dollars annually. Mr. Vanderbilt to pay all expenses for the children and to arrange for their education.

These vital questions fully considered, there were several minor ones to be settled. Not a stone, it is said, was left unturned in Mr. Vanderbilt's grim effort to do away with the divorce troubles that have so annoyed his family. During his previous matrimonial episode every step he took, every breath he drew, was construed as bearing in some way on the divorce case. He did not intend to have this happen again. If he took a long and unexpected journey and his wife followed him on the next train the gossips said that she was chasing him.

"In our life together," said Mr Vanderbilt, "I must be able to travel as I please, without any interference."

"Most assuredly," said his future partner; "and I, in turn, must be allowed to spend as much time in Paris as I wish, without question from you."

"Agreed. Neither your visits to Paris nor my journeys into the unknown are to be considered as grounds for unhappiness," was Mr Vanderbilt's statement.

This was a great step in the right direction. Many wives, in society and out of it, make themselves terribly unhappy when their husbands seek one-sided vacations. This unhappiness frequently leads to the divorce court. Husbands in the millionaire class often object to their wives spending much time and money in Paris, and their objections frequently lead to the same bitter end. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have discounted this danger by their plain and concise pre-nuptial pact.

"Absence must not make the heart grow colder."

In her first marriage Mrs. McKim suffered keenly when her husband reproached her for her devotion to yachting. She would often go with her father on long cruises. Mr. McKim objected bitterly. There were quarrels and so much unhappiness that at last Mrs. McKim had to give up yachting.

With this in mind, Mr. Vanderbilt made further stipulations. "I do not like your fad for cruising, but if you must live on the water I will provide you a beautiful houseboat, where you can spend as much time as you please, and this will not cause me to seek divorce."

"Very well; then I shall not complain when you devote yourself to your horses and when you go on your coaching trips," was Mrs. McKim's counter-plan.

In this stipulation both Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt showed their appreciation of the fact that husbands and wives should display toleration for each other's pleasures. There was one thing more to be considered—friendships.

"You must be friends with my friends if we are to avoid the hazards of the divorce mill," said Mr. Vanderbilt.

"Of course," said Mrs. McKim. "your friends will be mine and mine will be yours. If you flirt with any of my friends I will not object, and if I flirt with yours you are not to object."

This matter of the friendships of husband and wife is no trivial one. Many marriages are wrecked because husbands refuse to like their wives' friends and vice versa. It was frequently said that Mr. and Mrs. Emerson, Mr. Vanderbilt's parents-in-law, laid their first trouble to the fact that neither would make friends with the other's friends. In Mr. Vanderbilt's case this was also true. His first wife would not fraternize with his friends.

Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Whose Unusual Forethought Is Reported to Have Created the Pre-Nuptial Divorce Pact Idea.

A Charming New Picture of Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt (nee Margaret Emerson McKim).

Many of the stipulations in this agreement may seem trivial to many husbands and wives. But they are not. Present-day divorces grow from very small beginnings. An unbecoming hat worn by a wife is no legal ground for divorce. But that hat may actually lead to one! The husband objects to the hat, hates to see his wife wear it, and, perhaps, sees another woman at this moment wearing a hat that makes her look ravishingly beautiful. He follows the hat eventually through the divorce mill.

"It was my wife's hat that did it," he might say.

Thus, in looking out for these minor things, as well as the big ones, perhaps Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have removed from their future many rocks on which other matrimonial craft sink.

If their present marriage proves a happy and successful one, as there seems every reason it will, Society may take the stand that the divorce pact helped. And—who knows—perhaps this may lead to including a form of divorce pact in future marriage settlements. In some such way, perhaps, Society will help to solve the problem of the Twentieth Century divorce.

A Pictorial Diagram Showing the Approaching Fate of Earth as Conceived by Dr. Milton A. Nobles, the Distinguished Geologist. The Old World Is Seen Sinking Into Her Caverns Formed by Thousands of Years of Volcanic Eruptions, While the New World Has Become the Safe Seat of Civilization. While the Drawing Shows the Action Taking Place as One Cataclysm, the Dissolution Would in Reality Cover a Number of Years.

How the Old World Is Collapsing with Age, While the New One Is Just Beginning Life

By Dr. Milton A. Nobles, F. R. S.

(World-Famous Geologist and Expert on Volcanoes.)

THE earth is dying of old age in spots. The dissolution of large areas of the earth's surface is quite imminent. The area principally affected comprises a large portion of the Old World.

At the same time in other quarters the earth is now going through a process of rejuvenation. In the Western Hemisphere the birth of a new world is now taking place.

These propositions may appear startling, but they are fully borne out by recent research into volcanic activity—the factor responsible for the destructive and constructive changes through which Mother Earth successively goes.

It is said that every tissue in man's body dies and is replaced every seven years. This is also true of the earth, though the metamorphosis occurs at more distant intervals.

In the case of the earth, however, many of the processes of destruction of its parts are constantly visible and to a far greater degree than are similar processes in humanity.

Through ages of volcanic activity, certain parts of the earth are now thickly honeycombed with caverns. The masses of lava and molten rocks which these volcanoes have ejected, and which have frequently covered hundreds of square miles to a depth of from one to six hundred feet, have, of course, undermined great areas, and ultimate collapse is inevitable.

This is particularly true of the Mediterranean area which for over two thousand years has presented almost constant volcanic activity. Follow the 40th parallel in the Old World, where Mount Etna, Stromboli, Mount Vesuvius and Mount Olympus have ejected millions and millions of tons of molten rock from the earth's interior and you tread upon huge caverns which, sooner or later, must give way. The collapse of Europe may occur at any moment.

When such a cataclysm takes place, as it has frequently done in the past, the equilibrium of the earth is disturbed and its polar axis is changed. As volcanic activity proceeds there comes the change of axis which has made our present coastal range, once equatorial, now merely a memory of our equator, with portions of its members on three continents.

Careful examination of the mountain ranges of the earth show us that antecedent to this alteration of earth's axis there have been at least two previous changes; the one altering the Asiatic-European range from an equator to its present position, the other making an equal change for our own Appalachian Range, now extinct as to volcanic fires.

We may, therefore, describe the life of a volcanic zone as follows:

First, as the equatorial zone, its fires limited in area surrounded by waters, its duties being the production of our minerals (internally), our limestones and new lands, the fauna of the oceans and the formation of all ocean currents by which waters are prevented from stagnation and rainfall provided for the lands.

Second, as a first deviation from the equator, the mountains emerged from the oceans and forming vast furnaces for the production of climates fitted for the production of land life, the circulation of the atmosphere and the production of surface deposits of minerals, as in the case of our coastal range. During this stage internal fires constantly, by expansion, tend to thrust up these areas to such a degree that elemental erosion does not decrease their height, the caverns, sealed at the crater, spreading laterally.

Third, a period of active eruption for the purpose of pouring off the "slag" formed during the second stage, these slags spreading over the adjacent surface reinforcing it against the internal fires which constantly eat their way upwards and preventing actual lowering of the surface level by the gradual sinking of the earth crust which now covers vast areas of caverns in the lowermost of which are our primary deposits of metallic minerals. These volcanoes, as do those of the second class, aid in giving temperature favorable to land life and to the circulation of the atmosphere, their ascending heat drawing from the nearest Polar regions for replacement great currents of clean, cold air.

In this stage, as it nears its close, the volcanic mountains are again surrounded by water areas, partially due to the sinking of the land surface caused by the sinking in of the caverns and the cooling of their contents.

Fourth—With this stage we are only familiar by such examinations of our Appalachian Range, this being sufficient to demonstrate at once that a great portion of the series of mountains forming this chain for a distance of over 1,000 miles and a width varying from 40 to 200 miles has been utterly destroyed by a series of gigantic explosions.

Nor has nature left us in doubt as to this enormous cataclysm of which I have spoken and which is as normally the "death" of a vast continent along its volcanic range as is the decay of a tree its natural end.

The eruption of Krakatoa, down in the Sunda Straits, in 1883, fully illustrates the point in question. That eruption was to the earth what sudden death is to man.

Krakatoa was a volcanic mountain midway between Sumatra and Java. It had been inactive for 200 years. On the 26th of August, 1883, loud explosions were heard which continued for two days, when the eruption took place.

When investigation became possible it was found that Krakatoa had burst, throwing one part eight miles to the north and hurling the other part completely over Lang Island, seven miles to the northeast.

The great mountain was literally torn up by the roots, as was shown by the fact that soundings of the surrounding waters showed that their depth had been increased no less than 5,000 feet. The area of destruction covered twenty-seven miles by twelve miles.

The bottom of the ocean for miles around was changed and islands that had never been seen before appeared, while others entirely disappeared.

And when it is remembered that the rich minerals of earth formed by actual transmutation within the volcanic caverns inevitably find their way to the lowermost of these, a depth shown by the Krakatoa cataclysm to be at least 10,000 feet below sea level, the absolute necessity for the removal of these vast overburdens of the earth in order that future generations may reach them is obvious.

The enormous area of these caverns may be but dimly conceived when it is known that during the past twenty centuries Vesuvius, Aetna and Stromboli have been constantly discharging as gases, vapors, smoke, cinders, ashes, lava and other molten materials—amounts of matter inconceivably great.

For instance, during one eruption a mass twenty miles long and averaging more than three miles in width and forty feet in depth continued a discharge at the rate of about three miles an hour

In Europe the volcanic area extends from the Azores on the west to Lake Van (Asiatic Turkey) on the east. Communication between the caverns which undermine this section is indicated by synchronous volcanic disturbances.

Bearing in mind then that in the destruction of Krakatoa, the weakening of the mountain walls utterly disrupted and destroyed an area of about twenty-seven miles by twelve miles to a depth reaching 10,000 feet and in the destruction of the Appalachian Range in the babyhood of the earth a region 100 miles long and averaging 100 miles wide was sunk to an even greater depth than was reached by the Krakatoan activity, there can be little ground to doubt that when similar processes operate in Europe the ensuing cataclysm will be of a magnitude sufficient to engulf the whole continent.

Such a course as this is not only the natural end of a continent, as death is the natural end of man, but is a process necessary to the rejuvenation of an ancient and exhausted area and to the uncovering of vast deposits of mineral wealth for generations of the future. It is necessary, too, as the second factor in that great change of Polar axes which demands that all sections of earth's area may pass under the great sequences of changes from equatorial heat and consequent abundance of life to Polar death and cold.

In the meanwhile the New World is now thriving upon just such a foundation as that which the collapse of the old world will yield. Thousands of years ago the region now covered by the Appalachian Range was inundated. Volcanic activity brought this area to the surface and the waters receded.

Even to this day certain portions of this continent are rising as a result of the continued working of internal forces. Only recently Dr. David Starr Jordan wrote to me that recent research in San Francisco revealed that the level of the land there had risen twelve feet within the past twenty-five years.

Eventually, of course, the collapse of portions of the earth will shift the earth's axis so that we may come under equatorial influences. Then we, too, will feel the full force of volcanic activity and the new world, then become the old world, will die the death of all continents. The idea that continents live on forever must be dismissed. Continents, like men, just live their lives and die.

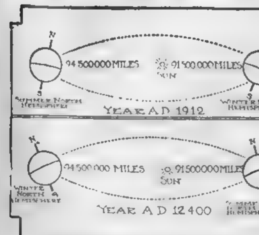
Why We Are Already Beginning Our Next Glacial Age

By Professor Garrett P. Serviss

EVEN if it is true that our earth's surface grows old in spots and is then renewed by the painful processes of earthquake, volcanic activity, the overturning of cities and the subsidence of continents, this would not mean that mankind too had grown old and had to be destroyed. Man has passed through just as serious cataclysms before. Dr. Felix Oswald, the distinguished geologist, recently made the astonishing assertion that from his investigations in Egypt he could definitely say that the River Nile is at least three million years old, and that human civilization has flourished anywhere between fifty thousand and five hundred thousand years in the great valley of Egypt.



HOW GLACIAL AGES ARE CAUSED.

The Upper Diagram Shows the Inclination of Our Poles to the Sun as It Is To-day; the Lower as It Will Be in 12400, When All North America, Europe and Asia Will Be Covered with the Ice Cap as Far Down as What Is Now the Middle of the Temperate Zone.

It has always seemed inexplicable that, if the human race is only a few thousand years old, it could so suddenly have evinced a wonderful state of civilization. This was inconsistent with the evolutionary theory of man's development. It was an argument for the old view of the miraculous origin of man.

The evolutionary theory requires vast lapses of time for the gradual unfolding of man and his advance from a state resembling that of the anthropoid apes to the one which he now occupies. Discoveries in Mesopotamia, Egypt and Crete have shown that from 6,000 to 12,000 years ago man already possessed essentially all the moral and intellectual qualities that to-day place him infinitely above the brute creation. If these qualities were gradually acquired, then man must have existed not merely tens of thousands but hundreds of thousands of years.

But Dr. Oswald's conclusion that the valley of the Nile has been for at least a million years in its present condition offers a solution of the difficulty, because it shows how man could, without changing his place of residence, continue for a thousand centuries his upward progress amid unaltered surroundings. Given that space of time for his gradual development, and it is not difficult to understand how he was able, ten or twelve thousand years ago, to build cities, invent language and record his history in a literary form.

But I am particularly concerned with the astronomical aspects of this indefinitely long career of man on the earth. If he has lived here more than a hundred thousand years, he has seen the heavens swing four times through the great circle of the equinoxes. Four times he has beheld the brilliant star Vega, in comparison with which our present North Star is but a glimmering spark, assume the position of a guide to the pole, which it will be again in between ten and eleven thousand years. Four times he has experienced the effects of a complete reversal of the climatic conditions of the northern and southern hemispheres. He has seen four successive advances of the ice, or glacial periods, in Europe.

In short, if the existence of man is proved to extend over thousands of centuries, then it is not merely the ordinary change from Summer to Winter and back again that, as a race, he has experienced, but account must be taken of far vaster seasons which have successively passed over him—which we may call, for lack of another name, the seasons of the equinoxes. It may be worth while to explain how these immense changes are produced—because we are even now well within the beginning of such another age of ice!

They would not occur if the axis around which the earth rotates once every twenty-four hours were placed in a position perpendicular to the plane in which it revolves, once every year, around the sun. As a matter of fact, that axis is inclined 23½ degrees out of a perpendicular. At the same time the axis keeps a constant direction in space; in other words, it points the same way. We shall presently see, however, that there is a slow change in the direction of pointing. Because of its rapid rotation the axis of the earth is like the axle of a gyroscope. The motion gives it steadiness. No matter how much you move the gyroscope its axle continues to point the same way. Thus it is with the axis of the earth.

From this peculiarity two great periodical changes arise. One of these is familiar to all the world, viz., the regular annual succession of Winter and Summer. Since the axis always points the same way, since the earth revolves completely round the sun once a year, since the axis is inclined from the upright position, it follows that at one time of the year one end of the axis will lean toward the sun, and at the opposite time of the year the other end will lean toward the sun. This is shown in the upper diagram, where N and S show respectively the north and south poles of the axis. From this figure it will be seen that the seasons are exactly opposite in the two hemispheres. In July, when the north pole is inclined sunwards, and when consequently the sun appears high in the sky, it is Summer in the northern hemisphere. At the same time the south pole is inclined away from the sun, and consequently it is Winter in the southern hemisphere. In January, on the contrary, when we have Winter (because the earth, being then at the opposite side of its orbit round the sun, has its north pole leaning away from the sun) they have Summer in the southern hemisphere, because at that moment the south pole leans toward the sun.

Most readers are already familiar with these facts, and I have restated them simply as an introduction to something else, which is not so generally known, but which becomes intensely interesting when we have found reason for believing that it has been associated with the destinies of man on the earth. I refer now to the second great change arising from the inclination of the earth's axis, combined with its tendency to retain that inclination, whatever else happens. This change introduces another set of seasons, which are so long that in an ordinary lifetime, or even in the lifetime of a great nation, men are unaware of their existence. But in the history of the race, when the history extends over a hundred thousand years or more, they become of the highest importance.

This second change is due to the fact that the earth's axis, which, as we have seen, maintains a fixed inclination, is continually subject to a force which would change its inclination if it could. This force arises from the attraction of the sun and the moon upon the equatorial protuberance of the earth. Without going into a mathematical explanation of it, it is sufficient to say that this force resembles that which tends to cause a spinning top to fall. Instead of falling, however, the top simply swings its axis, or peg, round and round. The same thing happens with the earth. When it feels the pull of the sun and the moon, tending to change the inclination of its axis, it swings that axis round in a circle, without changing its inclination to the horizontal plane. This effect is known as the procession of the equinoxes, (and astronomers have discovered that it causes the axis of the earth to make a complete revolution, like the peg of a top (we are not referring to the spinning of the top round its peg), in every 25,800 years. In every 12,900 years, then, the absolute direction in space of the axis is exactly reversed.

To make this clear look at the two representations of the earth in the diagram. In the upper part of the figure we see the position of the axis as it is at the present time. It now becomes important to take into account another fact. The orbit of the earth is not a circle, but an ellipse, and the sun, being situated in one focus of the ellipse, instead of in the centre of the circle, is farther from the earth when the latter is at one end of its annual ellipse than when it is at the other end. The total difference of distance is 3,000,000 miles, and it so happens that at the present time the northern end of the earth's axis leans toward the sun, and consequently it is Summer in the northern hemisphere, when the earth is in [the farther] part of its elliptical orbit, while, o[n the other] hand, our northern Winters occu[r when the] earth is in the nearer part of its

Eastern Continents Honeycombed with Caverns and Ripe for Destruction; Alaska to Be Again a Summer Paradise; New Glacial Age Imminent

By Prof Garrett P. Serviss

ALASKA last Winter experienced extraordinarily warm weather instead of the severe cold which has been its climatic rule. The Governor of Alaska has been quoted as saying that conditions were unexampled in the whole history of the Territory since the United States took possession of it. They were wearing straw hats in Dawson a month before anybody thought of discarding Winter headgear in New York or Chicago. This unparalleled high temperature seem to have continued through the Spring and Summer, showing that the climatic change is not a mere passing phenomenon.

The Hydrographic Bureau at Washington has suggested that the climatic change in Alaska must probably be sought in an alteration in the strength or direction of the great Kuro Siwa, or Japanese current, which flows across the North Pacific Ocean and is the chief agent in giving to our Pacific coast a higher temperature and a more genial climate than the Atlantic coast enjoys in a similar latitude.

If we take the Gulf Stream away from England, the British Isles would be frozen wildernesses. For the same reason if changes in the bed of the Pacific Ocean are forcing the Japanese current closer to the shores of Alaska, then we can expect to see Alaska with the temperature of Japan and Japan with the temperature of Alaska. If this is so then the Japanese will be in very bad straits indeed.

A commission is investigating this theory for the Japanese Government, which is reported to be keenly alive to the dangers of the situation. Positive results of such an investigation cannot, however, be known for a long time.

We shall undertake to show that, in case the reported change in the climate of Alaska proves to be a permanent one, it is extremely likely that an alteration in the Pacific currents is at the bottom of the change. But in the meantime another and more startling phenomenon, which may possibly throw light upon the matter, has recently manifested itself. This is the sudden outbreak of tremendous volcanic forces in Southwestern Alaska.

A Map Showing the Present Course of the Japanese Current, a Change in Which Has Given Alaska Its New Climate. The Stars Represent Portions of the Ocean Bed Which Volcanic Action Is Causing to Rise, Thus Shutting Off the Cold Northern Currents and Diverting the Warm Stream Still Further Toward Our Shores.

The possible connection of this great volcanic outburst with the reported change in Alaska's climate can be made evident by a consideration of the nature of an ocean current, and especially by taking into account the direction of the currents in the north Pacific which arise from the main Japanese current, and from the cold stream that descends from the north through Bering Strait.

While an ocean current is caused principally by the effect of winds blowing constantly in a given direction, like the trade winds, yet it is not confined to the surface waters. The Gulf Stream in the Atlantic and the Kuro Siwa in the Pacific originate in the westward motion of the water, north of the equator, under the constant impulse of the north trade winds. And just as the Gulf Stream turns first north and then northeast after impinging against the American coast, so the Kuro Siwa turns in a similar direction after meeting the western coast of Asia and the chains of islands that lie along it. The great current is conspicuous where it passes Japan, and so it has received the name of the Japanese current. From Japan it crosses the north Pacific, and a part of it skirts it it does not actually enter Bering Sea.

Now, since, as we have said, an ocean current is not confined to the surface water, but may, in some cases, sweep the bottom, it is evident that any change in the configuration of the bottom of the sea may have a very considerable effect upon the direction and the strength of the current.

Looking at the chart of the north Pacific, with the currents roughly indicated there, we see that south of the chain of the Aleutian Islands the warm Japanese current is sheered off by the cool, heavy water coming down through Bering Sea from the Arctic Ocean and passing between the Aleutian Islands. Now, as a chart shows, there is a reversed circulation of the warm waters from the Japanese current in the northeastern corner of the Pacific, between the Aleutian Islands and Sitka. Probably this immense eddy is affected by the cold current striking the Kuro Siwa along the Aleutian chain. But upon the whole it is a warm current, in spite of this cold flank attack.

Suppose, now, that an uprise of the bottom should occur along the range of the Aleutian Islands, between the point of the Alaskan Peninsula and the middle of the chain of islands; then the cold current from the north would be more or less completely interrupted, and as a consequence the Japanese current would encounter less opposition, would be less sheered off, and its warmer waters would more decidedly prevail in the great clockwise revolving eddy south of Alaska. Thus an unusual amount of heat would be conveyed to the Alaskan coast.

Or if, on the other hand, such an upheaval should occur somewhere in the northeastern part of Bering Sea, tending to deflect the cold Arctic current away from the western coast of Alaska, a similar change of climate might be expected to result.

The probability of such changes of bottom is very great, and the recent outbreak of the volcano of Katmai is a proof of it. Nowhere on the globe is the sea-bottom more subject to disturbance than it is just there. Many times new islands, rising hundreds of feet above the surface of the sea, have been thrust up near Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. Some of them remain for years, and then sink back, or are gradually destroyed by the waves. The existence of the Aleutian chain, which, as a glance at the chart will show, extends almost all the way across from the southwestern point of Alaska to Kamtchatka in Asia, attests the relative newness of the sea there. No doubt in times past there was an unbroken connection between North America and Asia at that point.

Some ethnologists have thought that this ancient land bridge served to peop'e North America from northwestern Asia. If this bridge were re-established by an uprisal of the bottom, cutting off the access of the Arctic waters by corking up Bering Strait, the former conditions, when animals and plants of the temperate zone flourished in Alaska, would be resumed. Thus we see how volcanic phenomena, and especially those which cause a change in the configuration of the bottom of shallow seas, may affect the climate and the well-being of vast regions of the land of the globe.

But there is yet another possible way in which alternate upheavals and subsidences of the ocean bottom may affect the climate of Alaska. Take another glance at the chart, and then suppose that the change in the bottom should occur on the Japanese side of the Pacific. This change might be located south of the main Japanese current, and east of Japan. If it were an extensive upheaval, somewhere near the stars on the chart, it would force the Japanese current northward and send it with increased force into the western side of Bering Sea, where it might so far overcome, or moderate, the cold northern current as to produce a marked alteration in the temperature of western Alaska. The cold currents shown on the chart, descending through the eastern part of the Aleutian chain, might be driven away toward the Asiatic coast, and the ultimate result would be nearly the same as that of an interruption of the Arctic stream by an upheaval in the northeastern part of Bering Sea.

It is true that we have been dealing entirely with suppositions, but they are suppositions which are more or less warranted by the existing conditions, and as they serve to account for observed facts, such as the reported climate of Alaskan climate, a certain degree of probability is lent to them by that consideration. The Pacific Ocean has been the scene of tremendous geologic disturbances in the past, and there is no reason to suppose that it will cease to be so in the future. And every extensive alteration in the configuration of its bottom over regions where notable currents flow is liable to change the direction or the force of such currents.

tends to equalize the temperatures of the two seasons in the northern hemisphere. Having Summer when we are farthest from the sun the heat is not as great as it would otherwise be, and having Winter when the earth is nearest the cold is less severe than it would otherwise be. In the southern hemisphere the condition of things is exactly the opposite—but the southern is peculiarly a water hemisphere, having a vastly greater amount of ocean than the northern, and the ocean, in itself, is a great equalizer of temperatre, so that our Southern friends do not suffer as much as we should do from having their Winter when the earth is farthest from the sun and their Summer when it is nearest.

Next, look at the lower part of the figure, which illustrates the state of things as they will be about the year A. D. 12,400. There we see that the axis of the earth has, in consequence of the procession of the equinoxes, assumed such a position (being, in fact, completely reversed in direction), that our northern Winters will occur when the earth is farthest from the sun and the Summers when it is nearest. Then the Winters will be very long and extremely cold, and the Summers, although very hot, also proportionately short (because the earth moves fastest when it is nearer the sun). Inasmuch as we have no such surplus of ocean surface as the southern hemisphere possesses, this will be a serious matter for the northern hemisphere. The accumulation of ice and snow in the long cold Winter will probably be too great to be removed in the relatively brief Summer, and a glacial epoch will intervene, during which the northern regions will become choked with snow, and the cold will extend far into the temperate zone.

Now, these reversals, these world-wide alterations of climate, occur about four times in a hundred thousand years, so that, if man has existed on the earth during some such period he must, as we have already pointed out, have passed through four of these immense epochal changes. If, from the valleys bordering the Mediterranean, he advanced northward over Europe during the genial periods, such as that which now prevails, he must have been gradually driven back by the advance of the cold from the north, while the ice buried many of the lands over which he had ranged. The memery of this catastrophe having perished with the lapse of time, when a new genial period opened, he may have advanced once more toward the north, only to be driven back again in another 12,000 years.

This linking of the fortunes of our race with the great astronomical changes which occur in the solar system offers a vast field to the imagination. Most of the records, if any existed, have been destroyed. We have certain knowledge only of the latest period. Not even traditions exist to tell us anything about the experiences of men during the previous swings of the great climatic pendulum, which produce alternate periods of cold and warm in the northern hemisphere. Perhaps, along with these changes of climate have gone geological changes, vast alterations in the level of continents, leading to successive invasions and retreats of the sea.

In the earlier periods man was not sufficiently advanced in civilization either to understand these immense secular changes on his planet, or to seek to leave records of his life. All that he did has been buried by time and the obliterating forces of nature. But in the latest period he has reached a stage of development which will enable him to leave more permanent records, so that it is not impossible that after Vega has once more blazed near the northern pole and then passed away, and the northern hemisphere has again merged from an equinoctial Winter and entered upon another period of genial climatic conditions, our successors on this half of the globe will find the vestiges which we shall leave of our presence, and will dig out of the ruins of our cities evidence of the former existence of the great empires and the splendid civilization, which now seem to us tokens of a state of things that cannot be changed without involving the destruction of the earth.

But the earth will live on, and the great equinoctial seasons will alternately whiten and make green the continents, even if man perishes. He is but an ephemeral insect, drilling his holes in the bark of a mighty tree, and the Winter that kills him whistles unheeded through its sleeping branches.

Great Convulsions Which Have Wiped Out Entire Continents in the Past.

ALL geologists agree that the contour of the earth has in the course of ages undergone many radical changes. The lost Atlantis, first mentioned by Plato, comprised a large continental island situated in the Atlantic upon which a very highly advanced civilization is said to have flourished for thousands of years. According to Plato, the island was ultimately engulfed by the sea.

The account of Plato has been considered by many as a pure creation of his imagination, and there is little evidence perhaps to justify its acceptance in all its details, but that a continent of the magnitude described by the Greek classic may have existed and disappeared in the manner he describes is by no means regarded as even improbable by scientists who have made a study of the transformation through which the earth has repeatedly gone.

From the fact that Europe and North America present the same species of land animals, geologists do not hesitate to draw the conclusion that at one time the two continents were united by lands now submerged, and where the animals of one continent differ very greatly from those of another, the inference is drawn that those continents, if ever united, must have been dissevered at some very ancient date in the history of the world. The vast disparity between the mammals of Australia and those of Africa is thus accounted for.

On the other hand, there is every evidence to show that South America was probably cut off for a considerable period from the northern half of the American continent, for its lowly organized fauna would otherwise never have been able to have attained such a remarkable development in the later geological periods.

The recent explorations in the South Polar regions are expected to yield corroborative evidence to the theory that at one time Australia and the Antarctic regions were united.

All these great topographical changes have been brought about by volcanic eruptions of immense magnitude.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

OF the latest Fall models I am sending you to-day two examples. One of them is a little eccentric and under no circumstances could be worn by any but the very youngest and slightest women.

It is a new variety of ratine in the new absinthe color. It is lined with pale mauve panne which shows as the wearer moves. There is a suspicion of ermine on the cuffs and collar. The trimmings are made of the ratine.

With this costume are worn gloves of the color of the ermine, while the shoes and stockings are of the same color as the dress.

The hat is pale mauve panne lined with black. On the right hand side is a little bunch of flowers made in orange, blue and various shades of deeper mauve silk.

The very newest variety of ostrich feather of a faded scarabe blue adorns the hat, and the beaded bag is in various shades of this same blue.

The costume is a charming one, but as I have indicated, too extreme for the average woman.

The other gown, made for Gaby Deslys, is suitable for anyone. It is made of lace. The underdress is of white lace which forms two ruffles at the bottom of the skirt. Over this there is a drapery of black Chantilly, slightly gathered about the waist and allowed to fall easily, ending in scallops just above the top white lace flounce. The blouse consists of a hand embroidered muslin fichu draped over the shoulders and held in the front and back beneath a cerise velvet girdle.

[illegible]very woman loves to hear about [illegible]dding garments, and so I—who [illegible] making them, too—am glad to [illegible]ble to send you news this week [illegible]ome dainty dresses for Lady [illegible] Manners, the beautiful bride[illegible] of the Marquis of Anglesey, [illegible]e marriage will provide a [illegible]ndid, not to say sensational, [illegible]h to the season.

And it is in one of my prettiest gowns that the marchioness will start on her honeymoon journey and begin her new life. Imagine first a little slip of an underdress of flesh pink charmeuse on which narrow strips of lace are laid flatly in applique form, and then edged with a tiny ruffling of Valenciennes while at the hem there comes a broad encircling transparency of lace on which circlets of gathered lace are set like so many blossoms and outlined and centred with pipings of pale pink satin. A [illegible] of pale blue comes here and there too, on both the filmy pink ninon of the corsage and the charmeuse of the skirt, for blue means luck, for the bride, you know—and, as I think, for any woman at all times and so it is that in practically every dress I make, there is, somewhere or other, a tiny touch of the lucky and lovely color which, of course, always looks its loveliest in conjunction and contrast with the palest of pinks, it being a favorite plan of mine, you know, to complete such a color scheme with stockings of flesh pink silk and shoes of pale blue satin.

Indeed, I hope that I have already so impressed this fact, and its fascination, upon you, that you have tried its effects for yourself with some "alluring" boudoir gown, or delicate dance dress, and with the happiest possible results. Well, now, to go back to Lady Diana's "going away" dress. You must know that, over the lace-adorned charmeuse slip there comes a veiling of ivory tinted net and lace, very deeply scalloped at the hem where it is all edged with a narrow binding of pure satin, and a ruffling of Val. lace, the depth of these scallops, meaning, of course, that in between you see glimpses of all the inner daintiness of the transparent lace. A box pleating of lace encircles the skirt midway, all its soft fullness being followed by a narrow line of pink picot edged baby ribbon, while above this again there are three graduated folds of satin which all show beneath the short scalloped tunic of lace. The quaint little high waisted bolero corsage being of this same beautifully patterned and toned lace. And now, perhaps, you will realize that the dark-eyed, delicately featured and slim figured bride will be a vision of loveliness in this ethereal attire.

One of her trousseau dresses, my favorite, I think, is of delicate green charmeuse, with a fine ruffled surface in which gloves of golden yellow are imprisoned, the first suggestion of color being eventually concentrated and [illegible]alized in the little knot of sat[illegible] which catches together the lo[illegible]s of the little lace tie. There is a deeply down-turned collar, to[illegible], of ivory-toned lawn as fine as a cobweb broidered with tiny sprays of flowers and edged with lace. This same dainty fabric being folded like a fichu on the corsage and then forming a long, loosely hanging apron panel on the front of the skirt. And between the cross-over folds of the soft, mellow-toned lawn there shows the pure whiteness of a little chemisette of Val. lace. This contrast—a striking as well as a subtle one—being repeated in the undersleeves. And for the waistband I have used a soft, dark blue mousseline striped narrowly with white and further patterned with showers of wee, pink roses. The lilac colored satin which outlines the swathing of the waistband at either side being shown again and more prominently at the foot of the draped skirt where it underlines the hem to a depth of some five or six inches and is brought into outward view by the catching up of the soft charmeuse folds at one side.

A complete contrast to this "picture" dress is a trim tailor-made of dark navy blue coating serge. The coat quite straight and plain and opening over a single-breasted waistcoat of white pique, held in at the waist by a very deeply folded band of black satin. The skirt which completes the costume is of white Jap. silk and has a scarf of crepe de chine—(blue or black or green or purple to suit the mood and the millinery of the moment)—knotted beneath the "polo" collar. The buttons and links which serve for the fastening of the front and the sleeves being such pretty pearl things with a "ribbon and reed" bordering of silver, while they are stitched through the centre, too, with silver. A single button is also set on the point of the little breast-pocket which figures at the left side of the shirt and from which there should peep out the corner of a filmy mouchoir whose coloring, or, at any rate, whose bordering should match the tie in tint. This is, I think, one of the best examples of the plain tailor-suit, which is such an important item in every woman's—and each season's—outfit, and I have also made its duplicate for the bride (and for several other well known society women this season) in natural shantung, with the same effective contrast of white pique and black satin, the crepe de chine ties selected for wear with the shirt being in this case of saxe and China blue shadings. I have seen a new hat, too, which I think must have been foreordained to complete this particular and pet costume of mine. It is in black beaver velours and in that latest and rather large sailor shape, which has a moderately high crown and a rather wide brim, whose slight upward roll at either side is accentuated by a larme made of the same felt, but with the soft plush-like surface worked in the reverse way. It is set well down on the head and at a slight tilt, too, which brings into most piquant position the three central and upstanding white quills which are fastened by a band and a prim little flat bow of white corded silk ribbon. The same shape looks well in bottle green felt, or again in a black Panama straw, the trimming always being of the pure white. But, on the whole, and though this straw is so beautifully light, I think I prefer the soft felt for the modelling of this particular and piquant shape, so perhaps it is just as well that straws have been almost ousted already by the felts, which, ordinarily, we do not begin to wear till, say October. It is really rather quaint that Fashion should have chosen one of the hottest Summers on record for such a choice of headgear, and, furthermore, for a renewal of fur trimmings for the most gossamery of gowns. But the fact remains that she has so chosen and that we, her faithful followers, not to say slaves, are proving as unquestioningly obedient as usual.

The practically untrimmed hat is still a favorite of hers—and ours—too, its latest development being a soft shape of white felt, edged with a band of wool braid in some vivid color, such as purple, yellow, carrot red or emerald green, a band of the same very open-meshed braid being drawn round the crown and tied in a jaunty little bow at one side.

Or, then, again, there will be just dropped down—with most carefully contrived carelessness—at one edge of a rather wide brim, a single long-stalked rose of brilliant crimson, or else a couple of temptingly ripe-looking cherries, while actually I have seen a single strawberry used in this way and looking so startlingly lovely and incongruous in its new and prominent position that one longed to pick it off and deposit it comfortably on a plate! Really, that was just a little too freakish, don't you think?

My Secrets of Beauty.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty

No. 192--Our Bodies Our Servants

MME. CAVALIERI asserts to-day that our bodies are our servants and we can make of them whatever we wish. She recites her sparkling conversation with a Parisienne who had been plain, but became beautiful by exacting this same body obedience. The article is exceptionally valuable.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

THIS morning a brilliant and beautiful Frenchwoman said to me: "Our bodies are our servants. We can do with them whatever we will, make of them whatever we wish."

"Whatever we wish," I echoed. "Do you quite believe that?"

"Quite," she responded with one of her smiles, slow, persuasive, illuminating, that always reminded me of a sunrise.

Then, suddenly, I remembered that she had not always been as she was now, and my thoughts, travelling swiftly back along the path of the years, recalled to me that there had been a time when I had thought her quite plain. Plain—"this radiant creature."

But it was true, and as delicately as I could I reminded her of the transformation, and asked her how it had been wrought.

"You must admit, my dear Yvonne," I said, with a smile of apology, "that you had not always the style you have now; that seems now to be natural."

"Style." She blew imaginary thistledown from the tips of her fingers. "Style is that. Natural style does not exist."

"But some persons look better than others, even though their clothes are the same," I persisted.

"Some persons have more distinction than others," she admitted. "But style, that is, chic, no. No, no. People are the same as to raw material. All persons are equally ugly when undressed. They are like the bare canvas on the easel, awaiting the painter's brush. We paint ourselves with our gowns, our hats, our gloves, our boots."

"Interesting," I mused.

"True," she insisted. "Consider the friends you see within an hour after rising. How do they look? Ugly? Yes. Old? Yes. Sleep is a mystery past solving. It is a form of death. In a sense we die every night and are resurrected in the morning. In that strange coma the muscles of our faces sink."

"You said we can make of our bodies anything we like."

"Ah, yes! And I have proven it. You would have an example? When you knew me first I was becoming stout. I had taken on that too great fullness about the middle of the body that is the defect in the figures of your American friends. My lines are now girlish, are they not?"

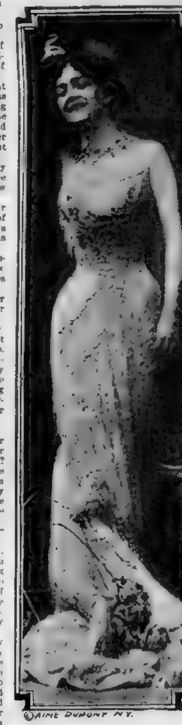
"Resolving to make my body obey me instead of my obeying my body, I began stooping many times every morning. Not content with the usual exercises of bending so that the tips of my fingers touched the floor, my knees unbent, I picked up every pin I saw in the house or on the street. I never passed a raveling from a bit of cloth lying on the floor without picking it up. If I dropped my paper-knife or a letter, or my gloves, I permitted no one else to pick it up. I did so myself. It was by bending from the waist many times a day that I got the muscles of the hips and abdomen again under control. I made my body obey me, with the results you have seen."

"Your hair?" I said. "I remember when it was not so glossy and vigorous as it is to-day."

"You are quite right. It looked dead as a brush heap in Winter. I determined to develop its life and gloss, and I began to give it care; in other words, to give it a chance. What does a doctor do when he wants his patient to live? He insists on his getting more air.

"While my hair was taking the air, it was also taking exercise, for the weight of the hair pulling gently at the roots strengthened the roots of the hair and renewed the circulation in it as the calisthenics develop a puny arm.

"The poise of your head is better



Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

It gives you the air of added height," I suggested.

"Catching a glimpse of myself while my head was lowered, I was shocked at the reflection. I knew my mirror was a true one. I looked older and sad and dull. Raising my chin, in a gesture of surprise, I was amazed to see the difference. At least five years seemed to vanish as by magic. Every day since then I have raised my chin and stretched my neck, repeating the exercise until I had warnings of a headache. This I have never fail[ed] to do four times a day since I received my warning.

"It shocks a woman to catch such a glimpse of herself. It is as though she met the woman she would be fifty years hence."

Beauty Questions Answered

B. S. writes: "I have bunions that cause me hours of agony. Please let me know through the paper what I can do to cure them."

The chief cause of bunions is wearing shoes that are too short or too narrow. This will cause the enlargement and widening of the joint of the great toe. First remove the cause by wearing shoes of reasonable size. Applying cloths that have been wrung out of hot water, relieves the irritation. Applications of the following will relieve both corns and bunions, though I do not claim anything will absolutely cure bunions. In the words of an authority they are, in their nature, more or less permanent.

Salicylic acid...............1 dram

Paint the bunion with this mixture every other day, or, if you are suffering extremely, every day.

N. K.'s request is, "Kindly publish the way, if there is any, of removing a mole besides using the electric needle."

Caustics are said to have removed moles, but as there is always a risk of injuring seriously the surrounding flesh and skin, I do not recommend them.

The means of application is thus described by an authority who differs from me.

If the mole is a raised one, standing out from the surface, obtain a small piece of lunar caustic and fasten it securely upon a quill. Moisten the mole with saliva and rub on the caustic, but be careful not to touch the healthy flesh. Repeat this regularly, say every night and morning. The mole will turn black and peel off. When the spot appears on a level with the flesh use a little healing ointment on it. If the mole has entirely disappeared continue to apply the salve. If not use the caustic again.

If the mole is flat applications with a toothpick or pointed match dipped into muriatic acid or glacial acetic acid are recommended by the same authority. I do not recommend them because they may leave scars uglier than the moles.

In the Wilderness where Satan tempted the Saviour

A Daring Expedition into the Judean Desert Which, Though the Scene of Many Sacred Events, Had Never Before Been Explored

ALTHOUGH the Wilderness of Judea, in Southern Palestine, is known by name to everyone, for it is mentioned many times in sacred history, it is never visited, and remains to-day one of the least explored portions on the earth's surface. This is remarkable for many reasons; in the first place, it is only a day's journey or so from Jerusalem, while in addition to that we have to remember the part the Wilderness of Judea played in the life of Christ and also in the history of the Jewish nation. John the Baptist came preaching in the Wilderness of Judea and it was here that Christ was tempted by the devil and where He fasted for forty days.

As deserts go, the Wilderness of Judea is a mere pigmy in area, for it is but some twenty miles in width and seventy miles or so in length, stretching away south from Jerusalem. But a more desolate and dreary region it is impossible to imagine. It is excessively hot and with the exception of a few scattered wells waterless. It is virtually an arid plateau with small conical hills intersected by deep ravines. It is inhabited by a few roving bands of Bedouins and it is unsafe for small parties to travel among them.

Hearing then that the Dominican Fathers were about to organize an expedition to explore this little known tract of country, they were approached by the writer and arrangements made for some of the members of the American Colony in Jerusalem to accompany them.

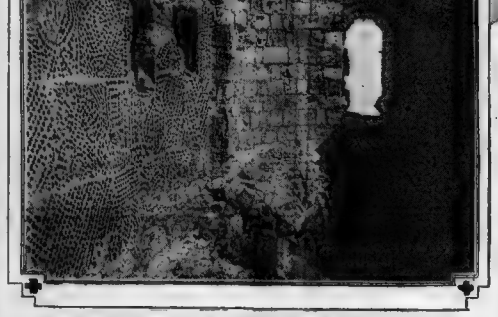
We sent the mules with the camp on in advance to a spot near Tekoa, the birthplace of the Prophet Amos, it is a few miles southeast of Bethlehem. We ourselves took a much longer route, as we desired to visit the Mar Saba monastery, an old Greek convent, now used as a sort of prison for unruly monks, virtually hanging to the sides of a ravine, in the heart of the wilderness, the monastery presents a strange spectacle. It is reached, not as in most other cases, by ascending to it from below, but by descending to it from above. The various buildings cling to it, is composed rest on small areas formed by the aid of massive buttressing walls built up from below, terrace upon terrace. There are grottoes and tiny gardens of flowers and fruit trees.

A peculiar law of the community forbids any woman from entering into their premises.

Early next morning we started for Ain Jidi (Engedi), a place often mentioned in Scripture. It was in a cave in this locality that Saul fell into David's hands and who so magnanimously spared his life. The name Ain Jidi means the Spring of the Goat, and it is still the haunt of the ibex. For the greater part of the day we rode over the desolate desert with hardly a shrub to relieve the monotony of the road. Then all at once, as we approached the mountain overhanging Engedi, we looked down upon a wonderful contrast to the arid wilderness behind us.

A ride of five hours brought us to the foot of Masada. It is one of the strongest natural fortresses imaginable, severed almost entirely from the range of mountains on the west and towering to the height of 1,700 feet above the plain of the Dead Sea. Its sides are not sloped, but [illegible] so that no army could climb. Only on the west is it connected by a narrow neck of land to the plateau, and from this point only could an enemy assail it. We left our horses at the foot of the mountain, and after a hard climb reached the citadel.

Near Saba, an Old Greek-Church Convent in the Wilderness of Judea, Which Has Just Been Explored by an American Expedition.



Rough Mural Mosaics in an Early Christian Church Built on the Summit of Masada in the Wilderness of Judea.

Masada was the last Jewish stronghold that held out against the Romans after the fall of Jerusalem, in the year 73. To it fled a band of the most fanatical of the Jews under Eleazar, who, knowing the natural strength of the location and how Herod the Great had added to it by building a wall around the summit, thought the Romans could never force them to a surrender.

It was here that the most tragic ending happened to the besieged that has ever occurred to any armed force in the world's history. After the Romans had succeeded in taking the first wall and had burned the second one, they decided to storm the citadel next day. The Jews learned their intentions, and to prevent them from taking them captives and exulting over them they agreed to kill themselves and their wives and children rather than surrender. Before doing this, however, they gathered all their valuables into a heap and set them on fire, so that the enemy would find no spoils. Then each ran to his wife and children, tenderly embraced them, and then slew them with all possible haste. Ten of them were appointed by lot to kill the other men and after bidding farewell to each other, each man lay down by his friend and presented his neck for the blow. After the ten had executed their deadly mission they again cast lots for one of their number to dispose of them in the same way, which was done and the last man ran his own sword through himself. There were in all 960 persons who perished by their own hands. Two women and five children hid themselves in one of the underground vaults and when the Romans came next day to assault the place and found no enemy, but a deathlike stillness, they were met by these women with the terrible tale of what had happened.

We have little history of Masada after this siege, but the early Christians must have rebuilt it, as the remains of a Byzantine church proves.

On the plaster walls of this chapel there may still be seen some queer mosaic work. We very reluctantly left this romantic spot and retraced our steps down the mountain to the Roman camp, where our horses were awaiting us. In our descent we had to keep close together, as it was impossible not to start loose stones rolling, which would have have been exceedingly dangerous to any one in advance and below us.

Our ride during the afternoon was close to the shore of the Dead Sea, and the sulphur springs gave a very obnoxious odor to the atmosphere. We visited the salt mountain of Jebel Usdum, which is seven miles in length and about seven hundred feet in height. The only trace of man we could find was a mound of worked stone, probably some ancient tomb. The heat was so great that we were glad to leave the hollow of the Dead Sea and go west up the Wady Zuwera. We camped for the night by an interesting old castle built on a hill in the center of the valley. We could not learn by whom it was built, but it was evidently for the protection of the caravans passing along this route to Petra.

From this point we ascended through the wilderness to Carmel which was the home of Nabal in the days when David was wandering in the wilderness fleeing from Saul who was seeking to kill him. Here David was saved from shedding the blood of the churlish Nabal by the wisdom of Abigail, who, soon after became David's wife. This Carmel is not to be confounded with Mount Carmel in the north near the sea. Here we encountered the first life in the dreary wilderness we had traversed. A crowd of Bedouin men pressed in around us whom we watched closely as, on a former trip, they had stolen a donkey from our Dominican travelling companions lunched near an old pool filled with water from four neighboring fountains. There were other extensive ruins which would repay exploration. From Carmel we ascended to Hebron and thence the next day to Jerusalem.

There Is a Cure for Consumption, BUT--

You can cure drunkenness with education, good pay, good food, cheerful surroundings, freedom from anxiety—POVERTY stands in the way.

You can put an end to crime with proper care of mothers, proper feeding of children, proper playgrounds, decent living conditions—POVERTY stands in the way.

* * *

The little boy sits on the door step of a tenement, coughing, painfully drawing his breath, his weak white hands folded in his lap, his thin, poor feet resting on the hot pavement. He is in the second stage of consumption.

The physician passing knows that he COULD be cured, but poverty stands in the way.

He needs the sunlight, green grass, trees and the running water. They are not far away, but poverty separates the child from them, ABSOLUTELY.

The child soon to die needs good food, plenty of sleep in fresh air and cheerful surroundings. There is plenty of good food, plenty of fresh air in the world—but poverty stands between them and the sick child.

He and tens of thousands like him, in one single great city, are doomed to the sufferings of consumption and to premature death, because poverty stands between them and the cure that is absolute and certain.

* * *

Every man in his day's journey passes such a child as the one in this picture—or knows where many such may be found.

But each passes by, comforting himself with the thought that he gives so much to this charity or that, or saying to himself that it would make no difference if he saved that ONE particular child, or twenty—the result in the long run would be the same.

The world is accustomed and hardened to suffering and poverty, and the general feeling is, "There is no use in trying, conditions cannot be altered, and anyhow I am not responsible." It is the old cry of Cain when asked about the brother whom he had killed, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

The Big Wolf Poverty Stands in the Way of the Sunlight, the Fresh Air, the Food, the Clean Water with Which Consumption Must Be Fought. Poverty CAUSES Consumption and PREVENTS Cure, Just as Poverty Causes Drunkenness and Dirtiness, Ignorance and Vice. The Greatest Curse of All Curses Is Poverty. Man's First Task Is to Abolish Poverty---and Then Use Wisely the Wealth and Opportunities That Will Come When Poverty Shall Have Been Destroyed.

It is the cold logic of the Greek philosophers that said civilization without slavery was impossible.

It is the reasoning indifference of those that saw the galley slaves chained to their oars and sinking with the galley and those that saw the witnesses tortured with the rack and the thumb screw and saw innocent men and women burned in the name of God.

Then as now the cry was, "What's the use, what can I do?"

* * *

Fortunately, our civilization, like the individuals in it, has periods in which conscience comes to life and protest is heard.

We DO establish camps, and playgrounds, stations for distributing food, where children such as the boy in this picture can be saved for a useful life.

We HAVE abolished the slavery of the human body, that the philosophers said must endure always. And we have substituted for the human slaves that rowed in the galleys slaves without nerves, slaves of iron in our steamships, slaves with steel fingers in our mills.

To our mechanical slaves of iron and brass, run by steam and electricity, we still tie down human beings that are wage slaves. Conscience some day will free them, as conscience has freed slaves in the galleys.

* * *

Conscience and human intelligence will some day free from disease, suffering and poverty the child in this picture and the millions of others doomed as he is doomed.

This earth can produce ten thousand times as much as is needed by those upon it. We already possess the power to PRODUCE enough, we lack only the conscience to DISTRIBUTE the needed wealth and drive out the poverty that is the foster mother of disease, drunkenness, crime, ignorance and superstition.

Rome had one great enemy, and in the Roman Senate Cato every day declared "Carthage must be destroyed." And Carthage at length was destroyed, burned, and the site ploughed up and sprinkled with salt.

The cry of civilization, never ceasing, should be, "POVERTY must be destroyed." Poverty is not to be destroyed by charity—which is a makeshift and an aggravation—but by intelligence and conscience, by diverting the power of the ablest men from selfish ACCUMULATION to generous DISTRIBUTION.

Poverty can be destroyed and it is even now gradually being destroyed by public education, public thinking, industrial co-operation and organization.

Great changes come suddenly—as the men of the French Revolution and of every other revolution have proved. The change from dark night to the blaze of day is swift.

* * *

Already men as individuals begin to realize their responsibilities. And where they once left their money after death to save their own souls and bribe the Divinity into selling them paradise, they now spend their money, while they live for the education and the health of their brothers, and trust to Divinity to do the fair thing later without any cash inducement.

Only the ignorant man to-day imagines that he can buy immunity or happiness hereafter. The powerful and intelligent man knows that his money can buy only ON THIS EARTH and he begins to spend it for the benefit of others ON this earth.

Eventually we shall begin to do as a nation, and then as united nations, what the individual is doing already.

Eventually, poverty will be destroyed, and with it drunkenness, idleness, ignorance, superstition, hatred and war will disappear—then such pictures as that on this page will be unknown, civilization WILL BEGIN, and men will wonder how they ever endured and tolerated the horrible conditions of this day.

Poverty must be destroyed.

EVERYBODY EATS PURE FOOD IN WESTFIELD

Girls in Normal School Teach Mothers to Avoid Adulterated Products; Stores Join in Work

Only Goods with School's O. K. Are In Demand by the People.

Ten years ago a young lady attending the State Normal School in Westfield became ill. She was absent from the classroom several days and when it became apparent that she was seriously ill, Lewis B Allyn, instructor in chemistry, became curious and asked: "What has she been eating?"

The question was repeated by fifty seniors in the little school among the hills of Western Massachusetts. They suggested an analysis of the food their classmate had eaten, and it was discovered that a certain jam the young lady brought to school had deranged the process of digestion.

If the work had stopped there the world would have never heard about this story, but it didn't. From that day on every senior in that school became interested in the practical side of chemistry. Through the direction of Instructor Allyn the young women began to study food stuffs, to analyse them, and these are the results:

They have made Westfield the pure food town of America.

They have driven impure foods out of the local markets.

Original Pure Food Town.

They have aroused interest in surrounding towns and cities to such an extent that the ordinary housewife in that zone has become a kitchen chemist. She can determine whether there is starch in the sausage, alum in the baking powder or sawdust in the tomato catsup.

They have so revolutionized the study of chemistry and have so completely routed the fraudulent manufacturer of foodstuffs from that territory that the school has won a national reputation.

So practical is the work of these girls and in fact so simple that every housewife should become a kitchen chemist. The kitchen chemist will not be compelled to grapple with the abstruse theories of science. With a simple equipment and with only an element ary knowledge of chemistry the good house-wife can determine upon the purity of the food products delivered at her door by the butcher, baker and candlestick maker.

One important result will be that the dishonest manufacturer will be driven quickly out of business or shown the folly of his ways.

Stirs Study of Chemistry.

The many pure food laws that have been passed, and the work at the Normal School have stimulated the study of chemistry to such an extent that in several towns in Massachusetts the kitchen sinks have been utilized as laboratories.

Westfield is an example of this condition. Westfield is a delightful hill town of 15,000 people in the western part of the state. In Westfield they make seven out of every eight whips used in the world, but this is not all that has made Westfield famous.

The town is known from the rocky-bound coast of Maine to the golden shores of California as the "Pure food town of America."

An AMERICAN reporter journeyed to the town to learn why this was so and a pure food dinner at one of the hotels and casually asked the waitress to explain why her town had become so famous.

"You will have to see the principal of the State Normal School, Mr. C. A. Brodeur."

That was her reply.

Mr. Brodeur was located in his study at home. He might have been delving into some pure food problem when the reporter called. If he was, he didn't say so.

How Reform Started.

It is unnecessary to go into details here. Mr. Brodeur is the principal of the normal school in Westfield. It is the work of the students at the normal school during the past ten years that has brought fame to the town.

"Under the direction of L. B. Allyn, the instructor in chemistry, the subject has been made one interesting to study. It has done more than that. It has simply run impure and adulterated foodstuffs out of town and also surrounding towns."

"How did this work begin?" the reporter asked Mr Brodeur.

"Ten years ago one of the students became ill," he replied. "Mr. Allyn, and I want him to get all the credit for this work, began to ask questions concerning what the girl had eaten. The girls in the laboratory made an analysis of the food this girl had eaten. It was discovered that she had eaten jam which had deranged the process of digestion. From that day Mr. Allyn broadened out the scope. Girls brought all sorts of food supplies. They were soon able to determine whether there was starch in the baking powder, sawdust in the tomato catsup, etc."

"What effect has this had upon the townspeople and the grocers?"

Result is Widespread.

"It has had a far-reaching effect. The townspeople became interested in what the girls were doing. The work became so practical that the girls prepared a list of food supplies that were pure and the townspeople demanded that the grocers and provision dealers carry those lines of goods. Every conceivable thing came under the eye of those girls. It has reached such proportions that the Board of Health has issued a book containing the names of over 300 manufacturers and wholesalers who handle nothing but pure foods. And remember that the goods of all these men have been tested in our laboratory."

"What is the ultimate outcome of this work?"

"I can see the work spreading all over the country. Each year there are fifty girls graduated from the school. Every one of them is in reality a kitchen chemist. As they become teachers in other cities they continue their chemistry work and guard the health of the children under their care. They join women's clubs and tell the housewives of other cities how to drive out the fraudulent foods.

"In twenty years this work will spread over the entire country. We have foods sent us from every distant part of the country for analysis. We charge nothing. It may be egotistical for me to say so, but I think the O. K. of our school on foodstuffs is as important as the official government seal."

Equipment is Simple.

Mr Brodeur talked about the danger of formaldehyde in milk given babies. He pointed out the dangers of coal tar products as heart depressants. It became so interesting that the reporter asked him how every housewife could be a kitchen chemist.

Mr. Brodeur produced a little book edited by Mr. Allyn. Here is the equipment needed by the American housewife to become a chemist.

Alcohol lamp.
Cup, half-pint, white enamel ware.
Filter paper, one package, five-inch.
Funnel, three-inch glass
Lactometer
Medicine dropper or fountain-pen filler
Sauce dish, three-inch, plain glass.
Stirring rod, glass, eight-inch.
Test tubes, one dozen, six-inch.
Vials, round, two-ounce.

To use the filter paper, fold a circle into halves and then ones at right angles. Place this in the funnel, and open, so that there will be three thicknesses on one side and one thickness on the other

After securing this inexpensive apparatus one will need a few chemicals. A list is given below which properly used will complete the kitchen outfit. Food supplies of all kinds can be analyzed. There is no doubt but what the little laboratory will do more to safeguard the family than the night policeman or local company of militia. The chemicals can be obtained from any druggist. They are:

	Oz.
Alcohol amyl pure	4
Alcohol, grain	4
Ammonia aqua, family size.
Ammonium carbonate, saturated solution	2
Borax	2
Chloroform	4
Ether	4
Fehling's solution	4

Potassium hydrate, 20 per cent. solution	6
Sodium hydrate, 10 per cent. solution	4
Sodium hydrate, 30 per cent. solution	4
Sodium hydrate, tenth normal solution	10
Sulfuric acid, 10 per cent.	2
Turmeric tincture, U. S. P.	2

In Springfield, Holyoke and other surrounding towns and cities the idea of this so-called kitchen laboratory has taken root. Hundreds of housewives are daily making tests. Many are common, some of them difficult. It even goes beyond the realm of food.

How many times is the housewife cheated when buying cloth? The salesman tells her it is all wool. He may tell her it is a pure silk fabric. But if she has the rudimentary knowledge of chemistry she can determine whether there is cotton in these products she has bought. If there is, she will return it and go to some store where she will get what her money calls for. The fraud concern notices its business falling off. "What is the matter?" the managers ask. The answer once more is simple. The women can determine the quality of what they are buying and merchants must conform to honest methods.

Hundreds of visitors view the laboratory in the normal school each year. Then they visit the "rogues gallery." The reporter paid it a visit, too.

In the huge glass cases can be found every conceivable kind of food supplies. On one side are the impure articles, on the other the pure

In Chamber of Horrors.

One writer who visited this place a year ago characterized the room as the Chamber of Horrors. It ought to be called the Execution Chamber. Just think of peeling a butcher knife with a five-inch blade that has been copper plated with copper taken from canned green peas. You can see how much more painless it would be to meet death in a fight against that knife than to combat that copper in your stomach.

There are several exhibits of drugs, and particularly headache powders. Many of these so-called headache cures contain coal tar products. They have been driven out of Westfield, but the exhibits remain in the Chamber of Horrors. Imagine a bottle of milk containing formaldehyde. If you have a kitchen laboratory you can test the milk you give baby. Hundreds of children die each year in this country from this poisonous drug. There are also, beers and ciders in the case. They are preserved with salicylic acid, pepper containing powdered olive stones, and paprika containing worms. How would you like to eat clams and mince meat put up with borax, and red pepper made of sawdust. You wouldn't eat it if you knew about it. They know about those things in Westfield, and get the pure article.

During the time the reporter wandered about the room Mr. Brodeur explained specific cases that had come to the school. He said:

"A family was taken ill a year ago, and the physician sent the food supplies to the school for analysis. Everything appeared all right, and we were at a loss to determine what caused the illness of the family. Finally the landlord brought up some wall paper. It was a sample of what was on the walls in several rooms of that house. The girls tackled it. It was found to contain a large quantity of arsenic.

"There is a bottle of teething syrup with a very pretty label on it," said Mr. Brodeur. "It contains opium. A fine thing to give a baby, isn't it?"

Candies such as are sold to children are shown to contain coal tar products, also lac, lamp black and ordinary furniture glue.

"The whole story" said Mr. Brodeur, "is this. We have by a practical demonstration proven that pure milk can be served the people, the packers in the West can send fresh meat, and candies can be made pure and yet give the manufacturers a good, substantial profit."

It was shown how two bottles of whiskey are used to make "dope." An ounce from one bottle and two ounces from the other added to a gallon of the cheapest grain alcohol makes a gallon and three ounces of what is sold for whiskey.

Rivals Dr. Wiley.

It would take a page to explain the wonders of that room. All of the work, the analysis of all those products has been done by the students. Is it any wonder that Westfield demands pure food? Is it any wonder that the town gets it?

And the big factor is the public support which the girls get. Two years ago Mr. Allyn and three of his chemistry students went to New York and ran an exhibit at the Pure Food Show in Madison Square Garden. These girls demonstrated to the women of New York, and, in fact to the women who came there from every section of the country, what it means to have pure food, and also how simple it is for the housewife to determine whether food is pure.

In justice to Mr. Allyn it can be said that his work equals in many respects that of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the pure food expert. What Dr. Wiley has taught Mr. Allyn has put into every-day use.

Must Have School's O. K.

Mr. Allyn is a native of Massachusetts, and is himself a graduate of the Westfield Normal School. He has been an instructor there for ten years. Mr. Brodeur, the principal, has been at the school for eleven years.

Chemistry is taken by the seniors for a period of fourteen weeks. It can readily be seen how little knowledge one has to have in this science to analyse foodstuffs.

Mr. Allyn is very enthusiastic concerning the kitchen chemist and the good she can do. In Westfield the AMERICAN reporter found that all the merchants with any standing carry goods which bear the O. K. of the school. At the drug stores butcher shops, paint shops, dry goods stores and other establishments one can buy only what bears the seal of approval from the normal school laboratory.

Historic Structures Rival Europe's in Design and Associations

THE Sunday AMERICAN today begins the publication of a series of remarkable pen and ink drawings of Boston scenes by Charles Arthur Lawrence, the distinguished Boston artist. These sketches are of great artistic beauty and deep historic interest. They will prove of great educational value, and school pupils and college students of New England may well make a study of them.

"There's nothing worth sketching in Boston."

Men and women competent to judge such things declare that scenes may be found in this city fully as beautiful and picturesque as in Europe or any other foreign country.

The first picture of the series is of the Old State House, which is closely linked with Revolutionary history and stands in the heart of Boston's business district.

The pictures will be accompanied by historical sketches by the Hon. Samuel Abbott Green, former Mayor of Boston, and librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Probably no one is abler fitted to write of Boston landmarks than is former Mayor Green.

By SAMUEL ABBOTT GREEN.

Former Mayor of Boston and Librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Mr. Pennell tells us there is nothing of the picturesque in Boston to inspire his genius. What about the Old State House? Where in Europe can you find more interesting street views than in Boston?

This fine picture of the Old State House appeals to me strongly, both for its own excellence and for its associations. The State Legislature, or Great and General Court, used to sit here. When the change was made to Beacon Hill, the Speaker's desk passed into the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society. The fine old relic can be seen there any day by those interested in its preservation.

From the balcony, looking toward State street, many proclamations were read to the people, and from it George Washington spoke to Boston's citizens.

The record of the building is thus set forth:

"On this spot stood, until its burning, October 3, 1711, the first town-house of Boston, founded in 1657, by the liberality of Captain Robert Keayne. Here, in 1713, was erected the second town-house, whose walls endure to this day, as do the floors and roof, constructed in 1747, after a second fire had devastated its chambers. Here the loyal Assemblies obeyed the Crown. Here the spirit of liberty was aroused and guided by the eloquent appeals and sagacious counsels of Otis, Adams, Quincy, Warren, Cushing and Hancock. Here the child independence was born.

"Here Washington received the tribute of an enfranchised people; here was installed the government of a new State; here for ten years our civic rulers assembled, and here, by the vote of the City Council of 1881, have been reconstructed in their original form the Council Chamber and Representatives' Hall—hallowed by the memories of the Revolution."

After many years of occupation by business offices, the Old State House was rehabilitated in 1882 and restored to its ancient colonial form. A little more than a year ago much work was done on the building, leaving it in the fine state in which it stands today.

There are people in Boston, as there are in all large cities, who care nothing about the past and to whom the deeds of the patriot dead are as meaningless as the winds of a year ago. To such as they, the Old State House is an eyesore. It blocks traffic; how out of kilter with the times it is, with its dingy little window panes and low-studded ceilings; what a grand site its location would make if the old structure could only be demolished!

The day will never come when Boston will gratify the sordid whims of such croakers as these.

Every brick in the walls of the Old State House, every nail in its stairways is dear to the pride of the Bostonian that is patriotic and that loves to make the glories of the past endure.

Adventures of the Hunters

CHAPTER X.

"WELL," remarked Hunter, having that morning returned from court, where he paid two overspeeding fines, "have you any more suggestions for vacation?"

"I hope," said Mrs. Hunter, sweetly, "you do not think my mental capacity is limited to nine thinks?"

Hunter grinned.

"That's so," he said; "we have tried nine places and something has been wrong in each place. You've got one more guess"——

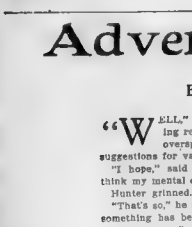
"Aw, geo!" said little Willie, "we've been everywhere; let's stay home awhile."

"Good for you, son; that is exactly what we will do," beamed Mrs. Hunter.

"Is it possible?" said Hunter. "I was hoping for this, but didn't think you would be satisfied"——

"You know, John Hunter, that I didn't want to go anywhere for a vacation; I objected"——

"Right-o, Fanny," said Hunter so suddenly that his wife looked at him with suspicion; "right-o, you did not want to go anywhere; you merely wanted to go everywhere. And, of course, you wanted to stay home. I was getting along fine here drinking a few iced ones and reading sporting extras when you broke in and insisted on going to the mountains—shore—lake and every other place on and off the map. Now"——



"If it's a yellow one, she will look horribly in it," said Mrs. Hunter, breaking in on his oration.

"Huh?" he asked, inelegantly; "what's that?"

"Oh, weren't you talking about Judge Parker's wife getting a new car? I thought you were," and Mrs. Hunter looked as innocent as a man higher up.

"Well, of all the dish-dinged"——

Hunter paused for breath.

"We'll screen in the back porch, add a great awning and a shelter tent for the back lawn, and set out a few little tables, and it will be really delightful, and the"——

"NOW what are you talking about?" asked Hunter.

"I thought you were planning with me to have an outing in our own back yard," said Mrs. Hunter, plaintively.

It was no use; Hunter gave up in despair and got busy with his back yard. By evening it was in splendid shape. The refrigerator was out in a corner of the back porch, with ice, lemons and other ingredients handy. There were hammocks and easy chairs about and electric lights.

Willie was chasing fireflies in the back yard, Mrs. Hunter was working on some embroidery and Hunter was reading the sporting extras, and oft, and then twice as oft, sipping a cooling beverage wherein ice clanked right merrily.

"This is delightful," murmured Mrs. Hunter.

"Great!" exclaimed Hunter; "this peace and quiet is just what I have been longing for; I"——

"Whatisit;" growled Hunter.

"Mercy!" exclaimed Mrs. Hunter.

"Aw, geel the durned old gramofone'll scare all my fireflies away," complained Willie.

"Willie!" said Hunter, "come here and let me whisper to you."

Willie came.

"Where's your air rifle?" whispered Hunter.

"Up in my room," said Willie, whereupon Hunter disappeared.

Across the way on the side porch of the Clatterlys the phonograph was wheezing out the strains of the delirious agony experienced by the young man when he waltzed with his lady fair, when——

"P-s-s-t!"

Instantly following this sibilant sound the Clatterlys' phonograph said "Gr-r-row-e-e-p!" There was a shower of scattered wax record and then silence.

This was followed, in turn, by loud exclamations of wonder from the Clatterlys.

"I never knew one of those records to explode before," declared Miss Clatterly, and during the chatter Hunter came out on his back porch, sat down in his easy chair and finished his long cool drink. Then he reached for his papers, but he could not hide the light of satisfaction in his eyes.

"Who? Me?" asked Hunter.

Mrs. Hunter shrugged her shoulders, by no means satisfied.

"De-rink to muh on-lee with-thi—nize!" wailed the phonograph. Evidently the Clatterlys were not afraid of exploding wax records.

Hunter sat there trying to read, but after half a minute he silently sneaked into the house.

Again came that sibilant "P-s-s-t!"

Again the Clatterlys' phonograph went "Ge-r-rowp!"

Again the record new to bits and the Clatterlys shrieked in their dismay.

"Something is wrong with the machinery; it breaks every record!" bemoaned Miss Clatterly.

"Never mind," said her brother. "I'll get out my mandolin."

At this point Hunter reappeared on his back porch and quietly seated himself. The Clatterly youth kept his promise and soon the air was vibrant.

Hunter sighed. Mrs. Hunter watched him out of the corner of her eye. Once more he stole into the house. Willie was still busy chasing fireflies and Hunter did not notice that Mrs. Hunter had kicked off her pumps and was following him.

Up to Willie's room went Hunter. Willie's air rifle was standing beside the window, which overlooked the Clatterlys' house. Being dark in Willie's room, Hunter was unobserved—from the outside—although Mrs. Hunter was glaring at him from the hallway.

Hunter kneeled at the window.

He was not praying. He was taking deadly aim with the air rifle.

"P-s-s-t!" it went.

"Click—pung-g-g-g-g!"

That was the noise of the buckshot hitting the mandolin.

"OW-OY! What bit me?" yelled young Clatterly, dropping his mandolin and springing to his feet.

Hunter sat down on the floor and rocked in silent laughter until his wife marched in and snatched the air rifle from his grasp.

"So, John Hunter! That was you all this time! Are you crazy? Shooting up our neighbors? Suppose you had hit them in the eye or something? If they ever found it out, and they are such swell neighbors, too! You march down on the back porch with me and stay there."

Still chuckling, Hunter came down on the porch.

Mrs. Hunter, in her excitement, brought the air rifle along with her and placed it on the refrigerator. For an hour they sat there in comfort. There was no more music from the Clatterly verandah. But little did the Hunters know young Clatterly had found the shot in the bowels of his punctured mandolin, and had promptly arrived at the logical conclusion that "that young Satan of a Hunter boy" had shot him.

And so, an hour later, an officer dropped around the side path and complained to Hunter that his boy was shooting up the neighbors.

"Ah! here's the rifle, I see," said the officer, picking it up from the refrigerator. "I'll have to take it as evidence. Now, where's the boy"——

"Willie hasn't been his air rifle tonight!" quickly exclaimed Mrs. Hunter.

"No—er—you see, I was shooting—cats, very noisy," lamely explained Hunter.

"Strange you smashed two phonograph records and a mandolin, to say nothing of the finger-nail of young Clatterly, who was playing the mandolin—and it was the nail he picks the strings with"——

"Good!" ejaculated Hunter. "That is, I meant 'Good land!'"

"They'll bring suit for damages and also a criminal suit," said the officer, taking his departure and the air rifle. "See you in court in the morning!"

Considerable silence.

"NOW, John Hunter, see what your idiocy has got us into! Fine lot of scandal, shooting an innocent"——

"Talking machine!" snorted Hunter.

"What!" yelled Mrs. Hunter.

"I didn't mean you, I meant the phonograph"

"Well, now you just take us all on a long trip through Europe until this thing blows over," declared Mrs. Hunter, in a tone that Hunter knew meant no denial.

Dotty Data About This and That Music.

MUSIC was invented so that Beethoven, Handel, Chopin and all of the other composers would have an excuse for wearing long hair and saving the expense of being barbercued.

Music is used at weddings to make a man forget what he is going into, and it is played at funerals to make widows forget the easy jobs they are losing. If there was no music half of Broadway could close up and 2,319,874 chorus girls would have to go to work. While the bass drum player doesn't carry much weight it takes many pounds to run up the scale. It is the man with the brass plates that leads the cymbal life.

Music is played on musical instruments; also on the bass drum and bag pipe. Music was first invented in 1800 B. C. (Before Cornets) by Jubal and it has been heard at Jubalees ever since.

It can be truthfully said that a professional harmonica player lives from hand to mouth. A banjo player cannot claim to make his living with the pick. The Irish harp on playing a stringed instrument. Serenaders frequently guitar and feather.

Among the great composers are ether and chloroform. Hymn musicians in churches cannot play on their organs are out of orde..

Boarders.

BOARDERS were made so that there would be some use for canned vegetables in the country.

There are many kinds of boarders, but very few of them who hold positions of minor responsibility. We have yet to meet a common stenographer, a dredging clerk or a plain mechanic at a boarding house. Everybody is a superintendent of this or that, a manager of something or other, a private secretary or a petty officer. These are the roomers one hears.

One meets the greatest cranks at the dining table. One will only eat eggs from a Plymouth Rock hen because her husband is in the stone business. Another asks for milk from a sterilized cow and another lives on onions to make him strong.

Then there is the boarder afflicted with rancreatitis. He takes everything but a rest. You hardly reach the house when he wants you to sit for a picture. You tell him you would rather sit for a meal, but he begs so long for your picture that he makes you believe yourself some kind of a Beau Brummel or a Venus, and then after he yanks you into shape and takes your picture and prints it, he tells you he was experimenting with some blue paper and you had better take the plate for he won't lug it home.

The habitual dressers are another nuisance. You have to dress for breakfast, dinner and supper because they do so, and if one insulted you and you threatened to make her eat her words, she would feel embarrassed on account of not being properly dressed for the meal.

Then there are the insistent walkers who lug you around to see a whole lot of things that wouldn't be looked at in the city. They walk, walk, walk and yet these same would rebel at walking two blocks in the city if there was a healthy taxi in the neighborhood to gobble them up.

Then there are the know-it-alls who tell you how the streams used to run up the mountains instead of down and how they used to know the huge mountains surrounding us when they were only small hills.

There are many other kinds of boarders who spend week-ends in the country, but whose weakest end proves to be their tongue.

Dancing.

DANCING was invented to provide some respectable method of hugging, and Noah—we don't remember whether that was his first or his last name—preserved all of those animals in the Ark so that we would have something to name our modern dances after.

It seems strange that a modest maiden that will reprove the fellow sitting beside her on the stoop because he attempts to grapple with her hand, will allow him to take her upon a well-lighted ballroom floor, encircle his arms about her anatomy, hold her up against his vest pockets and do the grizzly bear. Then he is all the whirled to her.

Some of the modern fays who trip the light fantastic make a great deal of money dancing, yet we learn that even in Biblical days maidens danced for a prophet. It is frequently hinted that some of our up-to-date stage dancers are take-offs on the ancient ones. They can hardly take off much more, however.

At balls of brewery associations the dances are hops. We do not care rabbit about the Bunny Hug.

Three Minute Tragedies

Scene: A suite in an apartment hotel. At the rise of the curtain the Woman and the Man are discovered locked in each other's arms. They wear motor clothes. No words pass between them. They have stood looking into each other's faces for a long time, when a step is heard in the hall and a key is turned in the outside lock of the door.

Without entirely loosening their arms they turn toward the door. The movement causes the Woman's veil to fall about her face. The door is flung open and the Other Man springs into the room.

THE OTHER MAN—So I have caught you. I have suspected a long time!

THE MAN—Who are you and how dare you intrude?

THE OTHER MAN—What? You have the impudence to ask me why I should not come into my own apartment?

THE WOMAN—Yours? When——

THE OTHER MAN—You would remember, if your mind had not been wrecked by this unholy passion, that we came yesterday!

THE WOMAN—Yesterday? Why, for three years I have heard Albert's words of love in this——

THE OTHER MAN (becoming more angry and more irresponsible each minute)—Enough. You are together for the last time (draws pistol from inside pocket). One question first. Do you love each other?

THE WOMAN—Passionately! We are just back from——

THE OTHER MAN (firing at each in turn)—This will fix that!

THE WOMAN (continuing)—Our marriage ceremony and—— (expires).

THE MAN (dying)—Helen, my wife—

THE OTHER MAN—Helen? (tearing veil from woman's face)—Eternal Mike! What have I done (looking about the room)—I am in the wrong apartment?

A MOUSE as timid as the rest of his kind went frisking around a cellar and came to a pool made by a leak from a whiskey barrel. He drank a little from the pool and went away. Then he came back and drank a little more. He came back and forth a half dozen times. The last time he sat up on his haunches, glared around and said:

"Now, show me that cat.

THIS is a story I always ask Frank Craven to tell whenever I see him. Frank was coming home from a cemetery and met the undertaker. In the course of the conversation Frank admitted his calling.

"H'm," said the undertaker. "I know a lot of actors; at least, I've laid out a number of 'em, though maybe you wouldn't call that meeting them!"

A BOARDER behind in his reckoning greeted his landlady one morning with: "I'm not able to pay you to-day, Mrs. Brown, but I hope I can to-morrow. Anyway, I guess you won't miss it for a week or so. I wish I had all you have."

"If you did you'd have sciatica," was the response.

A WOMAN who was breaking up her Summer home telegraphed her husband of her troubles about engaging two new servants. "Had a couple of Germans, but they insisted that the washing be sent out," was one wire.

"Two Irish girls, excellent references, but both engaged to marry policemen in the holidays," said another message.

"Two Swedes, healthy, but untrained, have applied." The series of wires brought from her husband the suggestion:

ED was a mighty bright negro belonging to a family in Columbia, Tennessee. He had been a faithful servant for many years, and by saving and carefully investing his wages he had belied the usual thriftlessness attributed with more or less justice to the majority of his race.

His master was an attorney, and one morning, before he had arisen, the lawyer was called upon by Ed, who said:

"A mortgage?" asked his master. "What do you want a mortgage for?"

"Well, Ah's done lent Unc' Lisha five dollahs, and I wants a mawgidge on his cow an' calf."

"For how long have you lent the money?"

"Fo' one mont."

"One month! Why, the interest on that amount for that time wouldn't pay for the paper a mortgage is written on."

"Boss," said Ed, scratching his head, "Ah ain't carin' nuffin' fo' dat intrust—Ah jes' wants dat niggah's cow an' calf."

"I WILL tell you why I don't marry," said a confirmed bachelor. "It is because of one incident in my life which has made a deep and lasting impression on me."

His lady hearers were all attention, scenting a romance.

"I once went to a sale. Never mind what I went for or whom I went for. I went. Of course, there was a tremendous crush, and one had to push to get to a counter and shout like fury to attract attention. Well, I accidentally stepped on a lady's skirt and nearly tripped her up. She turned quickly, and the scowl on her face would have made a more timid man bolt. She was evidently about to address some fierce remark to me; then a change suddenly came over her face.

"'Oh, I beg your pardon,' she said, sweetly; 'I thought you were my husband!'"

I WENT home the other evening determined to end the quarreling between Lucy and myself, no matter how it was to be done.

"Look here, Lucy," I said, "we can't go on living like this if we are to be quarreling every day."

"We haven't been quarreling that I know of," replied Lucy.

"Why"—— I began.

"You may have done a lot of quarreling," went on Lucy. "I never quarrel. My disposition is too peaceable, for one thing. Mother often tells me I'm a fool to let you have everything your own way."

"Why"——

"But I tell her," Lucy went on, "that I'd do anything to avoid a quarrel."

"Why"——

"And here you come home evidently with your mind fully made up to start a scrap the minute you set foot inside the house."

"But I"——

"The very minute you enter the door," continued Lucy, "you accuse me of quarreling. You know perfectly well that all I want is peace and quietness."

"I wanted to end our quarreling, Lucy," said I.

"We've never quarreled," said Lucy.

"Of course we have. What's the use of arguing about it?"

"I'm not arguing. I hate arguing. I only say that we've never had a quarrel."

"Look here, Lucy, you'll have to admit"——

"I won't admit anything. And if you think you're coming home here to browbeat me you've got another think to think. I know your game. You come home to start one of the arguments you seem to find so much pleasure in. But you can't get me to argue with you. I'll give in to whatever you say, only I tell you we've never quarreled."

"Why can't you be sensible, Lucy?" said I. "You know perfectly well we're quarreling now."

"We're nothing of the kind. How can you say such things? You come home absolutely determined to have an argument with me, and when you find I won't argue with you you fly into a fury and begin to abuse me like a pickpocket."

"Lucy, you must listen to me," I began.

"I won't listen to you. I'm sick of listening to you. If you think you can treat me like this you're mistaken. I'm going right home to mother."

"I'll do nothing of the sort. You're mistaken if you think you can throw your wife out of the house. I'll stay right here and show you you can't get up a quarrel with me."

"All right; I'll go," I said.

And out I went.

WHERE YOUTH OF BOSTON IS TRAINED

Wealth of Opportunity for City's Young Folks to Go to School.

Much has been said about the lack of opportunity for young men and women to learn trades in and about Boston.

It has been frequently stated within the last ten years that if a boy wanted to learn a trade he had to get committed to some reformatory or prison where mechanical professions are taught.

Gradually conditions have been changing and the whole question of industrial training has received at the hands of the Commonwealth a thorough investigation followed by recommendations that have materialized not only in State industrial schools supported partly by the State and partly by the town in which they are placed but in an increase of opportunities both public and semi-charitable.

The following list is by no means complete, but gives most of the institutions and classes which are giving industrial and trade training in the city of Boston. The facts have been taken largely from studies made by Thomas C. McCracken, who is employed as research agent by the Woman's Municipal League. The statements have been condensed and changed from the original form on account of space.

Canton Girl Studied Five Years Abroad and Will Tour the United States.

After five years in Germany where she was a student in the Konigliche Hochschule, Miss Helen Keller of Canton has returned home to win substantial fame for herself with her violin. Miss Keller, who is one of the best known young women of Canton, exhibited signs of genius when a small girl and her career in the famous violin school in Berlin was marked by so many astonishing achievements that the wonder of her instructors was aroused—and German instructors are not easily aroused.

For the last two years Miss Keller has studied with Professor Willy Hess, who is well known to Americans, and especially Bostonians, through his association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

While abroad Miss Keller played as soloist with the Hochschule Orchestra, directed by Professor Hess, an honor rarely accorded a student and a marked recognition of her rare ability as a musician. She was also one of the violinists selected to play before the Kaiser on his recent visit to the Hochschule.

German critics who have heard Miss Keller predict for her a brilliant future. She has been lavishly praised for her temperament and technique. Miss Keller will begin her professional career with a tour of the principal cities of this country, after which she will return to Germany to give a series of recitals.

PLAYS OF AUTUMN AT BOSTON THEATRES

Tremont Theatre.

A. H. Woods has a record for many successes in the field of music and comic opera, but if all his promises are fulfilled his latest importation, "The Woman Haters' Club," which comes to the Tremont Theatre tomorrow evening for a three weeks' stay will be the best thing he has offered to the American theatregoers. The story is new and novel, the book is replete with fun and the music is said to be of the kind that is well remembered. Manager Woods will make a lavish production in the way of scenery and costumes. The company is a large one, including eighty people, and comprises Sallie Fisher, who is specially engaged and will remain with the company until her new play is finished, in which Mr. Woods is to star her. Dolly Castles, the Australian prima donna, imported for this production; Walter Lawrence, Joseph Santley and Leslie Kenyon also have important parts.

Shubert Theatre.

AMERICAN readers will remember the thrilling story "A Butterfly on the Wheel," which ran in this paper early in the year. It told in narrative form the story of one of New York's success of last season—the British drama, "A Butterfly on the Wheel," written by Francis Neilson, M. P. and Edward G. Hemmerde, K. C., and produced by Lewis Waller. Tomorrow evening at the Shubert Theatre Mr. Waller will give local theatregoers an opportunity of seeing the play, Winona Shannon appearing as Peggy. The play is said to be realistic and sympathetic. The characters embrace the social elect of England and the four acts are divided between Paris and London.

Gaiety Theatre.

Gordon & North's "World of Pleasure" company will begin a week's engagement at the Gaiety Theatre, beginning tomorrow afternoon. The show comes this season with the stamp of approval of all the cities in which it has played. Heading the cast is Will Fox and Harry Marks Stewart, supported by a galaxy of burlesque stars, among whom are Harry Yost, Ed Dwyer, Bob Watson, C. Hall, Thomas Herbert, Phyrnette Ogden and Lanier De Wolf. The performance is in two acts, showing a race track in the first act and Luna Park at Coney Island in the second act. There are numerous specialties introduced during the action of the piece.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

One of the greatest bills of the season is promised for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. With Joseph Hart's production, "Honor Among Thieves"; the great Jungman troupe and Robbie Gordon, the posing Venus, the week will be exceptionally notable in novelties. "Honor Among Thieves" tells a most interesting and amusing story of life among the crooks of New York city. Robbie Gordon is one of the most beautiful young women on the stage. She will present a startling series of studies in living marble, including "The Lion's Bride." The great Jungman troupe is a company of high-wire artists and aerialists. Others on the bill will be Van and Schenck, in a novel act; Mullen and Coogan, two funny comedians, Puck and Lewis, a clever boy and girl, and Will Seron, the double-voiced vocalist.

Globe Theatre.

Globe patrons have no cause to complain. For the week beginning tomorrow morning there will be an unusually varied bill. DeWars circus, with the funny mule, Dave Rafel's big scenic ventriloquial novelty, "On the Farm;" Burbank and Danforth, Carter and Bluford, Carl Green, Al Edwards, the Monmouth Four and the Eclipse Trio will be seen. The Pathe Weekly will head the picture program and the vaudeville as well as pictures will be changed on Thursday. Tuesday night amateurs will be added to the regular bill and Wednesday and Friday nights the Country Store will be the extra feature.

St. James Theatre.

The gorgeous scenic production of "Thais," a dramatization of Anatole France's celebrated novel (which has been known in Boston only through the operatic version), which is being given at the St James Theatre, has scored such an enormous success that it will be played for another week, with the regular matinees on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. The play requires the entire strength of the St. James Theatre company for the leading roles, and in addition there are half a hundred supernumeraries for the minor parts.

Castle Square Theatre.

In "The Third Degree," which John Craig is producing at the Castle Square this week, Charles Klein has written a drama that is thoroughly up-to-date. Its theme is the devotion of a young wife for her husband when he is unjustly accused of murder, and the principal characters are these two people, and the lawyer whom she induces to take the case and comes to his defense.

The timeliness of the plot is increased by the manner in which the dramatist makes use of the device known as the "third degree," whereby the police acting as both judge and jury, attempt to force a prisoner to proclaim his guilt against his will. This is one of the most powerful incidents in Mr. Klein's play.

The role of Annie Jeffries in Mr. Craig's production of "The Third Degree" will be acted by Mary Young, and she will be fully equal to all its feminine power and emotion. The role of the lawyer will be in Mr. Craig's hands, and it will be made as effective by him as was his business man in "The Lion and the Mouse."

Plymouth Theatre.

When a fact has been so firmly established that it has become a by-word there is hardly any need for repetition. This is the case of "The Man From Home," the play in which William Hodge will begin a new week at the Plymouth Theatre tomorrow. Both play and star have scored one of the greatest success on the American stage.

"Woman Haters' Club" Opens One of Members a Heavyweight

DOLLY CASTLES AND JANE BLISS, AT TREMONT.

Jane Bliss and Dolly Castles will appear together at the Tremont Theatre tomorrow in the first Boston performance of A. H. Woods' new musical comedy, "The Woman Hater's Club."

Miss Bliss weighs 253 pounds, and Dolly Castles tips the scales at 118. The former is an American and inherited her avoirdupois from Papa Bliss, who is one of Boston's big, good-natured native sons. Miss Castles brought her 118 pounds all the way from Australia and tomorrow night will mark her first appearance in a big American city.

If Jane Bliss did not weigh 253 pounds she would not be on the salary list of "The Woman Hater's Club," as the part she plays calls for a maiden of her size. She has an arrangement with Mr. Woods that when the company travels she is to have a seat in the railway coach all to herself, and as the company usually travels in its own private car and there is no excess on human freight Mr. Woods agreed to her demands.

A remarkable coincidence in the lives of the two women is that big Miss Bliss and little Miss Castles were both born on holidays, the former on July 4 and Miss Castles on New Year's Day.

Park Theatre.

Acting of exceptional quality by a star whose personal following has been gained by meritorious past performances is the guarantee that Rose Stahl has settled down at the Park Theatre for a prosperous engagement. "Maggie Pepper," the Charles Klein department store play, pleases all classes of playgoers, for it treats of people one meets in everyday life.

Majestic Theatre.

"The Million" will enter upon its fifth and last week at the Majestic tomorrow evening. Judging from the success of "The Million," both in its year in Paris and nearly the entire season in New York, a high standard of farcical excellence is set. After this week "The Million" will visit a few New England cities.

National Theatre.

In honor of the first anniversary of the National Theatre the management will inaugurate a new form of entertainment in Boston as an experiment. The famous London system of running a musical hall will be attempted. This will consist of a musical comedy of one hour's duration, followed by a series of high-class vaudeville acts. It has been a tremendous success in all the large European cities and should prove a big feature in Boston. The Empire Musical Comedy Company the first week will present the one hour of perpetual laughter, entitled "The Lady and the Prince." There are fifteen people in this company.

Boston Theatre.

"The Greyhound," a melodrama of novelty, character and incident now playing at the Boston Theatre, will enter upon its third week at that playhouse on tomorrow evening. All of the scenes except one are aboard an ocean going liner, and so vivid is the representation of the deck of the Mauretania that the spectator seems to be looking upon reality rather than fiction.

Colonial Theatre

"The Quaker Girl" enters upon its third week at the Colonial Theatre tomorrow evening with not the slightest sign of abatement in the popularity to this tuneful and highly entertaining musical show. That the demure maiden will entertain Boston for many weeks to come seems a certainty.

Orpheum Theatre.

Among the many vaudeville acts to appear at the Orpheum Theatre this week are James F. Fulton and Mattie Choate, in a comedy sketch, "The Mayor and the Manicure," Grace De Mar, "The Girl with the Big Brown Eyes," Robert and Robert, in the "Two English Bulls;" Mlle. Vanity European danseuse; Sully and Larsen comedy acrobats; Freedland and Clark, in a musical comedy playlet, "The Wrong Mr. Schultz," and Leo Beers in a pianologue.

Hub Theatre.

At the Hub Theatre this evening Geoffrey L. Whalen will lecture on the "Coming of Columbus." There will be a moving picture to illustrate the lecture.

Casino Theatre.

Ed. Lee Wrothe and "The Ginger Girls," one of Joe Hurtig's productions, will entertain the patrons of the Casino during the coming week.

Durbar Pictures.

More than 160,000 people have seen "The Durbar in Kinemacolor" during its nineteen weeks at Tremont Temple, where it has proved the most popular attraction of its kind ever shown in Boston. Because of the plan to produce festivals of travel in the wonderful color films, the Durbar run will be interrupted within a few weeks for the new subjects.

Scenic Temple.

The entertainments at the Scenic Temple this week will include several specialty numbers. Besides the interesting olio, there will be motion pictures.

Grand Opera House.

The Pacemakers burlesque will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House beginning tomorrow. Mae Yuir, Margie Catlin, Leslie Hunter, Lew Hilton, Bert Lewis and a host of others will be seen in the cast.

Howard Athenaeum.

The burlesque show at the Howard Athenaeum this week will be given by Teddy Simond's Auto Girls, a cluster of beauties from New York City, who have made an enviable reputation in burlesque.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

New York Boats.

A most delightful salt water trip at this time of year is that offered by the Eastern Steamship Corporation. The steel steamships, Massachusetts and Bunker Hill leave India Wharf week days and Sundays at 5 p. m., for New York direct. The running time is about fifteen hours. These steamships are equipped with wireless telegraphy, submarine signal service and all facilities to insure security and comfort of passengers.

Norumbega Park.

Following its usual custom of closing its regular season about the middle of September, Norumbega will bring to an end tonight a season of remarkable success. The usual Sunday night concert will be given in the open air theatre.

Convict Ship.

That the proprietors of the old British convict ship, which now lies at Warren Bridge, near the North Station, were justified in paying Boston the compliment of being the first American port at which to exhibit her, now seems amply evident by the crowds that throng her decks daily.

'AZALEA' FILLED WITH HUMAN CHARACTERS

Lifelike Touch Given Creations in Story of Kentucky Blue Ridge Range.

"Azalea," by Elia W. Peattie, a story of the Blue Ridge Mountains, is not only one of the most interesting books published this Summer, but treats of the people who live in the moonshine belt in a new way. It dwells strongly on kindness shown toward many a Union soldier fleeing from some Confederate prison pen in the unhappy past, and which in this instance is aroused by a little circus girl whose mother died in a wagon on the road.

The child is adopted by the McBirneys. Ma, Pa and Jim, and hides in a cave until the showman who wants to enslave her has moved on. Afterward Azalea is kidnaped and taken back to the circus, but she bides her time until even Tige, a bulldog, relaxes his vigilance and she can escape in the darkness, through sombre woods and by lonely paths and regain loving arms in a log cabin perched high in Tennessee hills.

Learns Secret of Birth.

But she is a captive long enough to learn her dead mother's sad life story and that she herself, although now so humble, is of the old aristocracy of the South. But when she gets back to "Ma" McBirney, and can return to the ancestral home if she likes, she prefers to stay with the simple folks of the mountain and repays love with gratitude.

It is a story which old and young folks can be interested in, and is quite as wholesome as any that ever came off a printing press. Good writing and human interest are among its strong qualities and a reader cannot help feeling in the end quite intimately acquainted with Haystack Thompson, the McBirneys and some other characters who walk through the pages.

Have Human Touch.

They have the human touch and the kind of quality, too, which is not strained through any sieve of verbosity. It is an action story all the way, and as before intimated, the author has not traveled along a track worn deep by previous literary perambulations through the Blue Ridge country.

The chapter which tells of Azalea's sequestration in the home of the Summers family is worth more than one reading. Rev. Mr. Summers sang hymns while doing morning chores and found a runaway girl asleep in the woodshed, displays real narrative art. This book is published by the Reilly & Britton of Chicago.

Heard in The Greenroom

"THE GREYHOUND," now playing the Boston Theatre, is not a play of canine life, as some people have been led to suppose. It takes its name from the fast ocean liners, the Mauretania in particular, although one of the characters in the ocean drama is known as "The Greyhound." Every scene—and there are five of them laid aboard ship—is modelled in minute reproduction of the big Cunard liner. A representative of the steamship company went to the Wagenhals & Kemper scenic studios when the scenery was first started and remained until the last drop of paint had been put on the top of the stage ship's stacks. With the original charts and blueprints from the designers of the Mauretania he supplied scale drawings so that even the smallest detail was in harmony with the general proportion of the big liner.

"FEIGNING a faint to me," says Winona Shannon, "is like falling into a black bottomless pit. If I were a great actress like the divine Sarah I suppose I could stimulate this condition without having it effect my nervous system. But I employ realism to such an extent that I feel every emotion, and more than once I have really swooned and had to be carried to my dressing room."

Miss Shannon plays the part of Peggy, the butterfly wife, in "A Butterfly on the Wheel," and, in the divorce court scene, due to the heckling of her husband's lawyers, she is obliged to fall fainting on the rail of the witness stand. "Every performance," she says, "I am afraid I will not go through this scene, and when it is ended I am completely exhausted, mentally and physically."

* * *

A KEEN sense of humor is one of the characteristics of Miss Rose Stahl, the star of "Maggie Pepper" now playing at the Park. Here is one of her stories:

"When I played my last engagement in British Columbia with 'The Chorus Lady,' I was anxious to know if they would understand Patricia's slang up there. I felt that if they did it would be a sign that we would succeed in London where Mr. Harris had planned to send us at the close of our tour, because, you know, they are very much more English in British Columbia than they are in England.

"So, as I always like the verdict of every-day folk on the opening night in Victoria, I gave my room waiter, an Englishman, a pass, telling him to pay particular attention to the play as I wanted to ask him about it the next day. The next morning when the waiter brought my tea and toast I asked him how he enjoyed the performance.

"'Oh, it was quite all right miss,' he said.

"'But did you understand all of the slang?' I asked.

"'Well, no, miss; not quite all of it. But my sister, who was with me, has just come out from London, and she explained it to me, because, she says, you use the latest London slang.'

"Of course I didn't tell him that Patricia's slang was then five years old."

Coming Events.

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow" is in preparation at the St James Theatre. It will be the offering to follow "Thais."

* * *

Through the Marinelli Agency, Gaby Deslys has notified the Shuberts that she will be unable to extend her contract with them longer than the stipulated period. Her tour, as previously announced, will begin in Boston the last week in October.

* * *

"Oliver Twist" will come to the Plymouth Theatre on September 30.

Among the acts booked for early appearance at B. F. Keith's Theatre are: Harry Tighe and company; the Great Tornadoes and the Hickman Brothers.

MISS GRETA BYRON, BOSTON GIRL WHO IS TO STAR HERE

The legitimate stage is not to have an exclusive field in the presentation this season of dramatic expositions of Chinese atmosphere and character.

Grace George's announcement that she will appear this season in "lowrnadet," a play of Chinese life and character, following the plans of George Tyler to present in this country this season "The Daughter of Heaven," a play of modern China by Pierre Loti and Judith Gautier, is now succeeded by the announcement by Eddie Corbett, also well known theatrically, that he will present in vaudeville in Boston in the late Autumn a short tragedy of Chinese life in New York's Chinatown, entitled "Ching Foo's Wife."

Of pertinent interest to local patrons of vaudeville is the supplemental statement that the title role of the playlet has been entrusted to Miss Greta Byron, a young actress, a native of Boston, who has a good half dozen years of theatrical success behind her. Mr. E. J. Byron, father of the star of the new playlet, is known to thousands of Bostonians through his official association with many fraternal orders of the State.

NEW PLAYERS THIS YEAR IN SYMPHONY

Owing to the retirement of some of the older members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the resignations of others who are going into other classes of work, there will be several new faces when the first rehearsal is held on Monday, October 7. Of the older members that have retired, both Paul Fox of the flute section and Carl Schumann of the horn section, have completed thirty-one years of continuous service. August Sautet of the oboes and Mr. Regesttin of the bassoons and Mr. Reitberg of the percussion department have long and honorable years of service behind them.

Mr. Krafft and Mr. Eichheim have resigned from their positions in the first violins, Mr. Krafft to take charge of the music in the Copley-Plaza Hotel and Mr. Eichheim to devote himself to teaching, while Mr. Barleben, for many years the leader of the second violins, has retired on account of ill health.

Goes to Frisco.

Mr. Schroeder has retired from the 'cellos to devote himself to concert work, while Arthur Hadley and Ralph Smalley have left this season, the first to become solo 'cellist of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, of which his brother is conductor, and the second to join the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. There have been a few other changes in the rank and file.

The work of replacing these men has been done with the utmost care and the management feels confident that the musicians who are joining the orchestra this year will be most valuable additions and do much to increase the orchestra's efficiency. In Mr. Schroeder's place to share the first desk of the 'cello section with Mr. Warnke will come Otto Urack of Berlin. Mr. Urack is regarded as one of the most brilliant 'cello virtuosi in Germany. He is a Bohemian by descent, but is a native of Berlin, and for the past several seasons has been 'cello soloist in the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra. Mr. Urack also brings with him the reputation of being a conductor of great promise. Despite his youth, for he is still in his twenties, he has conducted opera in Barmen and Elberfeld and has conducted many concerts in the Lower Rhine cities.

Special pains have been taken to make the second violin section stronger.

In Violin Section.

Several changes are noted in the viola section. Mr. Spoor is transferred to the second violin section, and Mr. Werner has been transferred from the second violin section into the violas, taking the place of Mr. Hoyer, whose illness last Spring compelled his retirement. A new viola player will be Mr. Berliner, who season before last was the leading viola of the Boston Opera House.

The total strength of the orchestra including the conductor, will this year be an even hundred, as compared with 101 a year ago, there being this year one less man in the percussion department.

The return of Dr. Muck has stimulated interest in the orchestra beyond all expectation. For the five Thursday night concerts in New York less than one hundred seats scattered throughout the house have not been taken by subscription. For the first time every box in Carnegie Hall has been sold for these concerts. For the Saturday afternoon concerts there are a few over one hundred seats that have not yet been taken by subscription, and to counterbalance these there are more than enough applications now on file to sell every one of them. No condition comparable to this has been recorded in the history of music in this country, and from reports that are coming in from other cities where the orchestra gives a series of concerts a similar state of affairs is promised. The full prospectus of the season will be published next week.

SALLIE FISHER IN "THE WOMAN HATERS CLUB" AT THE TREMONT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

ANOTHER American premiere of an imported comic opera will claim the attention of local playgoers tomorrow. It has become almost a habit with the producing managers this year to let Boston have the first glimpse of new entertainments, and while it may be something in the nature of a doubtful compliment to concede to Boston the honors formerly given to Bridgeport and Norwich, it at least serves as a mild remedy to the complaint of Mayor Fitzgerald a year or so ago that Boston is compelled to wait too long before the arrival of the big shows. There will be but two changes at the downtown theatres tomorrow, "The Woman Haters' Club" moving into the Tremont, and "A Butterfly on the Wheel" taking quarters at the Shubert. In the case of "The Woman Haters' Club," A. H. Woods believes he has discovered a musical play that will outdistance any importation of recent years. Firm in his conviction he has embellished the piece with costly scenery and expensive cast—a habit that is growing on Mr. Woods. He is no niggardly producer. Nothing in the drama has been more sensational or astonishing than the rise to power of Mr. Woods in the $2 field of entertainment. He is not only the best, but the only living example of the value of training for the big game found on the old melodramatic circuit. Low-priced melodrama was a hard game—the returns were small, and business instinct was needed to carry a producer over the rough roads. With the passing of melodrama all of the men who were a part of its managerial organization moved out of public notice—all except A. H. Woods. It is said that Mr. Woods can see further into the future of the drama than any man engaged in the work, and that his judgment of theatrical values, in a business sense, is as perfect as it is possible to expect in a field so dominated by speculation. At any rate, there is a great deal outward evidence that the $2 drama has no more terrors to Mr. Woods than the flimsy melodrama of popular price. In testimony thereto, Mr. Woods is one of the most extensive producers of the new season.

NOT even "The Quaker Girl" is free from the attention of those who are laboring for the purity of the drama. Probably the cleanest and least objectional musical play that has visited Boston for many months, yet that did not keep one horrified citizen from demanding an inspection by our public play censor, Mr. Casey of the Mayor's office. In pursuance of duty, Mr. Casey gave "The Quaker Girl" close investigation—and then laughed. There is plenty of room for improvement in most musical plays, but nothing could be more ridiculous than to attempt to brand "The Quaker Girl" as improper. If the self-appointed uplifters of the stage would only turn their attention to some of the really lurid spots in the drama a measure of good might result, but when an entertainment like "The Quaker Girl" is attacked it is time to doubt the sincerity of the assailants.

THIS is anniversary week at the National Theatre, and much is expected in the way of proper and fitting celebration of the event. It is the National's first birthday and, if you can believe the man who promotes publicity for the place, the occasion will be honored by the appearance on the bill of the Empire Musical Comedy Company, which will supply an act that runs more than an hour. The National Theatre has become pretty thoroughly established as a vaudeville house and all signs point to a continuation of prosperity.

THE many times repeated rumors that John Cort is to have a theatre of his own in Boston appears to have had some foundation in fact—that is, if there is any truth in the big real estate sign on the Columbus avenue side of the vacant land once occupied by the Boston & Providence Railroad station. This particular sign calls attention to the fact that a certain parcel of the land has already been sold and that a theatre for Mr. Cort will be built on the site. This will be good news to everybody but the managers of other theatres. The public will be benefited by Mr. Cort's coming to the city, but inasmuch as there are already too many theatres in Boston to allow more than two or three of them to show any substantial return in the shape of annual profits, it is not easy to see how Mr. Cort's new house will add any comfort to the situation. Mr. Cort, who is one of the biggest men in the drama, with interests in the West that eclipse those of any other individual or group of managers, is doubtless beset with the theory that Boston needs a new theatre. The public, at any rate, will not complain, for Mr. Cort has progressive ideas and will easily make himself a strong factor in the business. Mr. Cort's coming is emphatically a good thing for the playgoers.

IN these days of advanced art in make-up, the actor troubles himself but little over the adjustment of artificial whiskers. He is generally able to deceive the eye of his audience with small effort. This brings us to R. A. Roberts, who for two weeks has been playing a much bewhiskered role in "The Fortune Hunter" at the Castle Square Theatre. It may not be in good taste to question the appearance of an actor's beard—one is seldom required to do it. But there was something uncanny about the beard that decorated the face of Mr. Roberts last week. To the man in the audience it was not like the familiar decoration that is usually seen on actors at work. Mr. Roberts was under suspicion for some time—it may have been thought that he had lost the art of wearing a beard. At any rate, there was something wrong with it and it was right that the auspicious ones in his audience should know the facts. How cruel is false suspicion. A close survey of Mr. Roberts' face revealed that he knew more about beards than anyone in the Castle Square company—for his was the genuine article, carefully grown and cultivated during the Summer and brought to Boston especially for "The Fortune Hunter." It was a beard worth seeing. He expects to shave on Tuesday morning.

AS might have been expected the Rosenthal murder, with its surrounding incidents, has broken into vaudeville. At Keith's this week you will see the whole business exposed to view in "Honor Among Thieves," a lively little melodrama that deals with the bad men of a great city and their relation to the police. It is not all melodrama, however, for in one amusing situation a policeman, who had been a vicious gunman in his day, is called upon to arrest a burglar and former pal, who has robbed two other thieves living under a cloak of respectability. This, you will see, has many elements of real humor.

Society Goes Tramping in Woods and Dales

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

As the forests unfurl their flaming banners and the first wild, sweet tang of Autumn crisps the air, society en masse, yielding to the wooing of the woods and the lure of the open road, turns to tramping as the never-wearying and most enchanting of diversions

High-born "hoboes," indeed, and New England woods are full of them. Some one with a mania for boiling everything down to figures has estimated that during the past Summer more than half a million persons have spent a certain portion of the hot months rusticating in the forests of America and Boston's elect have contributed generously to this half million

"Back to the woods" is now the bugle call of the Berkshires that none who may respond can resist, and so it comes to pass that all the world of society has either gone or is planning to go a-gypsying

The society "hobo-in-chief" is of course the vibrantly buoyant Roscoe Sears, who can out-tramp the most tireless. Among her close seconds are the Misses Christine Hunnewell, Alice Thorndike, Elizabeth Porter, Adelaide Jackson, Elizabeth Sears, Rosamond Dixey and numerous others.

Of the woods "woodsy" is the pretty group of girls who are this coming Winter to make their initial bows to the great world of fashion and who are now storing up sufficient energy to last them throughout the gay Winter.

The brides of the Autumn, too, are among the most ardent of these woods lovers and every moment possible to spare from the details of their near-at-hand weddings is spent tramping through the woods. Speaking of brides—one of the most important of the past week was Miss Lassell, whose wedding to Mr. Verdi took place yesterday.

Miss Merrill a Bride.

Another interesting wedding yesterday was that of Miss Alice Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Merrill of Cincinnati, and Daniel Blisdell Huggins of Jamaica Plain. The ceremony took place at the Summer home of the bride's parents at Biddeford Pool, Maine.

The bride's sisters are Mrs. John C. Edwards of Warren street, Brookline, and Mrs. Robert Gorham Fuller of Dover.

It was a decided surprise to the many friends of pretty Laura Merriam of Washington, sister of Mrs. John T. Wheelwright of Boston and well known in the society set here, to learn that almost on the eve of her marriage to the former Congressman from Missouri, Theron Catlin, to whom her engagement was announced about six weeks ago, the engagement was broken. The wedding was to have taken place in October, and wedding gifts had already begun to arrive, while the trousseau was in readiness for the occasion.

Neither family gives any reason for the sudden change of plans. Mr. Catlin, who is a member of a wealthy and prominent St. Louis family, is well known in Boston, where he figured prominently in society during his course at the Harvard Law School. Miss Merriam is an intimate friend of Miss Esther Slater, daughter of Mrs. Horatio N. Slater, and one of the most prominent buds last Winter.

Miss Drury Bride of Fall.

An October wedding of interest will be that of Miss Amy Hyacinth, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Francis Drury of Tower House, Weymouth, to Ensign Nelson Winslow Pickering, U. S. N., of Boston. The announcement was cabled over from England.

The marriage of Francis Henshaw Dewey, Jr., whose engagement was announced recently to Miss Dorothy Bowen of Providence at Narragansett Pier, is to take place in the early Spring.

Mr. Dewey is a Williams College man and graduated from Harvard Law School last June. Miss Bowen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bowen and was a debutante of last Winter.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Grace Sunsey Dana, daughter of the late Rev. Stephen Winchester Dana and Mrs. Dana of Philadelphia, to Lyndon Baldwin Hardwick of Quincy.

Mr. Hardwick is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick. He was educated at the Groton School, graduated from Williams College and is at present connected with a banking house in Philadelphia.

Since the residency of Ambassador and Mrs. Guild in Russia, St. Petersburg and Moscow have become favorite stamping grounds for prominent Bostonians. Among those there recently have been Mrs. Horatio N. Slater and her pretty daughter, Miss Esther Slater; Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Burrage, and their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Francis H. Burrage (nee Misses Marie and Eulalie Iasigi, Mrs. George C. Cutler and Mr. and Mrs. William Covey.

Prominent among recent arrivals on the North Shore are Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hollingsworth of Devon, Pa., who are guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Howard Clark, who have recently arrived at their Manchester villa.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Livingston Hoyt and their son-in-law and daughter are about to leave the North Shore for the intermediate place, The Point, Stockbridge-on-the-Hudson.

Miss Emily Beebe, daughter of J. Arthur Beebe, has concluded her visit at Bar Harbor and is at the Redmans villa in Stockbridge for the early Autumn.

Mrs. Charles S. Tuckerman, who is summering at her fine estate at Ipswich, has as her guests Mrs. Charles FitzGerald and her children of Baltimore.

Miss Leslie Bradley.

One of the most interesting weddings of the Autumn will be that of Miss Leslie Bradley, the second daughter of Mr and Mrs. Robert Stow Bradley, to Roger Wilson Cutler of Brookline, whose engagement was announced in June.

Miss Bradley, who is a tall, slender blonde, one of the handsomest girls of her exclusive set, is a prominent member of the Vincent, New Riding and Chilton clubs. In the Winter she resides with her parents at their town house in Commonwealth avenue, and in the Summer at their shore home at Pride's Crossing.

She has travelled much abroad and has taken a conspicuous part in all the recent performances of the Vincent Club. She was the prime mover in the recent Country Fair and Horse Show given at Montserrat. She is one of the most expert horsewomen of her set and has ridden and driven her thoroughbreds at many of the important shows.

The steamer Laconia, which arrived from Liverpool last Wednesday, carried among its many saloon passengers Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert and their three sons of No. 401 Commonwealth avenue. Mr. Steinert, who is a member of the Boston Art Commission, and his charming wife were the recipients of many social attentions from the leading people in the cities which they visited in the course of their automobile tour through Switzerland, England, Scotland and France. Their Summer home, "Stonelegs," located on the extremity of Hospital Point at Beverly, has been reopened for their occupancy during the remainder of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., of the Westwood colony since the shooting season with the Alexander Cochranes in Scotland, are now motoring on the continent.

Miss Rachel Warren is the fiancee of Rogers McVeigh of New York. She was a debutante of two winters ago.

WEDDINGS HOLD INTEREST OF SOCIAL SET IN MEDFORD

City Clerk Allston P. Joyce officiated at a romantic function at Medford last week, when he united in marriage, Henry F. Colvin, aged seventy-four years, of Philadelphia and Harriet Flowers Gabell, forty-three years old, of No 62 Quincy street, Medford. It was the groom's second venture on the matrimonial sea. The couple first applied for the license but were informed that five days were necessary before a license could be issued. After some difficulty they obtained permission from the court to have the license issued. The delay at first threatened to spoil the honeymoon plans for all traveling accomodations had been secured.

The death of a clergyman, Rev. I. P. Codington, who was to have performed the ceremony, still further delayed their plans. City Clerk Joyce was then called upon to perform the ceremony which he did at City Hall. The young lady clerks at City Hall officiated as witnesses. The bridal couple then departed on their honeymoon and will live at 3,806 Fairmount Park, Philadelphia.

THE COMB'S MORNING STORY

Day by day, a few more strands are added, of hair that is turning grey, losing its vitality, its strength and its health.

Grey hair is as unbecoming as old age. Natural pride should have its own say. You wish to look young and it is your DUTY to appear so. You can't even LOOK young if the silver threads begin to show.

RELIABLE METHODS OF BEAUTY CULTURE

FINE BLOOD-MEDICINE — The thousand and one ills which come from impurities in the blood can be easily prevented or overcome with this old-fashioned home-remedy: Get from any drug store one-half pint alcohol (not whiskey) and one ounce kardene; mix these together, then add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a quart. A tablespoonful of this splendid tonic taken before each meal will do wonders in restoring lost appetite and correcting a sluggish liver. It builds up the system and makes one energetic and healthy.

FOR CURLY, SILKY LASHES — Plain pyroxin applied at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger makes the eyelashes grow long and curly. Rubbing pyroxin on eyebrows with forefinger causes them to come in thick and glossy. Use care and don't get pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

SPLENDID EYE-TONIC — For eyes that have that tired, overworked feeling the following inexpensive tonic will prove very strengthening and soothing. Dissolve an ounce of crystos in a pint of cold water and put a few drops of this in each eye twice daily. It will not smart or burn and is very fine for weak, inflamed eyes and granulated lids. A few treatments with this crystos tonic will make the eyes bright, sparkling and full of expression.

SPLENDID HAIR-TONIC — Perhaps the best hair-tonic known to science can be made at home at small cost by dissolving an ounce of quinzoin in one-half pint alcohol (not whiskey), then adding one-half pint cold water. Rub into the scalp twice a week: those having hair and scalp troubles will soon find their dandruff gone, and no more itching of the scalp or falling hair. It is said this hair tonic stimulates hair growth and wards off premature grayness.

BEAUTIFIES THE COMPLEXION — To whiten and beautify the complexion permanently, no better preparation can be found than a lotion made by dissolving four ounces of spurmax in one-half pint witch hazel or hot water, then adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This removes that shiny, muddy look and will make any lifeless, sallow skin clear, smooth and velvety. It does not show or rub off like powder, and for removing tan and freckles it is unequaled.

REDUCES ENLARGED PORES — A most satisfactory remedy for reducing those large, dust-collecting pores, which so frequently appear below the eyes, is made by stirring together an ounce of almozoin, one-half pint cold water and two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let stand a few hours before using. This cream-jelly will remove all pore dirt and fill out wrinkles when used for massaging. It is greaseless and very fine for treating freckles, blackheads and skin roughness. This almozoin cream-jelly makes the skin very clear, soft and velvety.

FOR HOME-SHAMPOOING — Washing the hair at home can be greatly simplified by using a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. The lather of this shampoo removes all dirt and dandruff and rinses out easily. The hair will dry very quickly and be much softer, glossier and fluffier than when soap is used. This shampoo has been found very beneficial to the hair and scalp, as it does not bleach or destroy the lustre of the hair, making it brittle like alkali in soap does.

HOW TO TAKE OFF WEIGHT — The safest and surest way to reduce weight is by means of the celebrated parnotis treatment. Dissolve four ounces of parnotis in one and one-half pints hot water and take a tablespoonful before each meal. This remedy is harmless and inexpensive and can be had at any drug store. It is useless to starve and exercise to excess, as parnotis reduces rapidly without these unpleasant features. This treatment leaves the skin smooth and firm.

FOR UNDER-DEVELOPMENT — Scrawny necks and flat chests respond quickly to the vaucaire treatment. This is easy to prepare — just dissolve one and one-half cupfuls sugar in a pint water and pour in one ounce galol. The dose is two teaspoonfuls before meal. This acts on the shrunken, stunted tissues, develops the figure and rounds out the bust.

THIS REMOVES HAIRS — Make sufficient paste with powdered delatone and water to cover the hairy surface. Apply thickly and after two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have completely vanished. No possible harm follows the use of delatone and the skin is always left firm and smooth.

The Contest

The Boston AMERICAN'S $40,000 Contest is a subscription and voting competition which is open to every man, woman and child in New England, irrespective of age, except employes of the AMERICAN and their families. Forty thousand dollars in Cash and Prizes will be awarded. The contest opens next Sunday, Sept. 22, 1912, and ends February 28.

The Candidates

Every man, woman or child who is a legal resident of New England is eligible to compete. Participation in any previous AMERICAN contest does not debar anyone.

The Enrollment

Each candidate must be regularly enrolled from his or her permanent address on the ENROLLMENT BALLOT provided for that purpose, which appears daily in the AMERICAN.

The first Enrollment Ballot received before the contest opens on next Sunday, Sept. 22, will count for 1,000 votes. Only the FIRST ENROLLMENT will count for a vote credit.

The Vote Coupons

Vote coupons from the daily or Sunday AMERICAN will count. One vote coupon will appear in each issue of the AMERICAN (daily and Sunday) during the life of this contest. Each vote coupon in the daily AMERICAN will be good for 5 votes. Each vote coupon in the Sunday AMERICAN will be good for 25 votes.

Each vote coupon will be good for two weeks from the date printed in the AMERICAN and valueless if received after two weeks.

Vote coupons should be tied together in bundles of 100, keeping the 5-vote coupons separate from the 25-vote coupons. All contestants are requested to use a rubber stamp containing contestant's name and address and district number. Only the top three or four coupons in each bundle of 100 need be stamped. Votes should be sent in one bundle, with contestant's name and address and district number and the total number of votes said to be contained in package marked on the OUTSIDE of the WRAPPER.

The Subscription Plan

A vote credit will be allowed for subscriptions turned in for the Sunday AMERICAN (subscriptions to the daily AMERICAN will not be received).

You do not have to collect subscriptions in advance, but as an evidence of good faith each Sunday AMERICAN subscription turned in must be accompanied by a small cash GUARANTEE payment.

The GUARANTEE payment is required to make the contest absolutely fair and equal to everyone, and as an assurance of the good faith of the subscriber in giving the order and of the candidate in turning it in. The GUARANTEE PLAN will help all candidates greatly, because only a SMALL AMOUNT in cash is required, and that simply as an evidence of good faith.

Length of Subscription.	Guarantee Required.	Vote Credit.
6 months	25 cents	1,500
12 months	50 cents	3,500
36 months	100 cents	7,500

This cash guarantee, in each case, will be deposited with the AMERICAN'S Auditing Department as an evidence of good faith on the part of both subscriber and contestant. Every person who subscribes to the Sunday AMERICAN agrees to accept and pay for the paper regularly at the regular newsdealer's rate during the term subscribed for. The guarantee received in each case will not apply to the cost of the subscription until near the time of expiration. All subscribers must begin to pay for the paper regularly, beginning with the newsdealer's first delivery, with the understanding that the guarantee paid in each case will be deducted from the cost of the LATTER PART of the subscription in copies of the Sunday AMERICAN without charge TO THE AMOUNT of the guarantee (whatever it might be).

Delivery of Papers

Each subscription blank will contain a blank space in which subscribers may write the name and address of any newsdealer or newsboy whom subscribers may prefer to have deliver the paper.

Just as soon as the subscriptions are received at the Contest Department an order will be sent to a newsdealer or newsboy in subscriber's district, giving instructions for immediate delivery of the Sunday AMERICAN for the term subscribed for. The newsdealer will then start delivery of the Sunday AMERICAN and will collect from subscriber each week except for the term at the LAST END of the subscription, covered by the guarantee paid, at which time he will deliver copies of the Sunday AMERICAN without charge to the value of the guarantee amount paid.

The Winners

The one who receives the largest number of votes, irrespective of districts, will be awarded the capital prize. The ones who receive the largest number of votes in each district will be awarded the prizes as scheduled. In the event of total votes for any contestants who win being tied, similar prizes will be given to each winner so tied.

Special Notice

The AMERICAN will not be responsible for any subscription sent in through the mails in any form other than postoffice money order, express order or certified check, addressed to American Contest Department, P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass. Cash sent through the mails will be sent at the risk of the person sending it.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt of same by the AMERICAN.

The AMERICAN reserves the right to amend these rules and conditions from time to time, if it may seem necessary, in order to protect all contestants from any possible contingency which may arise.

The Contest Editor will decide all disputed questions carefully and in good faith, and his decisions shall be final and conclusive.

HEARTY GODSPEED AT REDMOND START

GREAT IRISH PRIEST DIES

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Accompanied by his wife, whose charming personality won for her years ago a host of friends in Boston, William Redmond, brother of the Irish leader and member of Parliament for East Clare, is on his way to America to be present at what will be the last Irish National convention of its kind to be held on American soil.

Before another two years have passed, the Irish home rule bill will have become law and, Ireland, after more than a century of humiliating provincialism, will be enrolled in the sisterhood of self-governing nations.

The coming Philadelphia convention will not be by any means the last assembly of the Irish people in America. There will be many and even greater assemblies of the sons and daughters of Erin on this hemisphere. But they will not be gatherings of gloom.

The delegates of the future will not meet to gaze upon the figure of their motherland prostrate in despair; they will meet in dignity and with hearts filled with hope and courage, to send messages of congratulation to those charged with the destinies of re-awakened Ireland.

The American-Irish convention of the future will be joyous and exuberant. Ireland's night of sorrow and lamentation is nearing the dawn.

Boston as a Leader.

Boston will be strongly to the fore in the convention hall at Philadelphia. A distinguished member of Congress, who is a member of the national committee of the United Irish League, wrote to the Sunday AMERICAN yesterday:

"We anticipate a great convention and as usual we depend largely upon the good men and women of Boston who have, in season and out of season, been the backbone of the Irish movement in America."

At a meeting of the Boston Central Branch, United Irish League, held at the American House last Thursday evening, it was voted that the Massachusetts delegates start for Philadelphia on Sunday, September 22. The convention will be opened on the following night with a great meeting in the Academy of Music, at which the speakers will be the Governor of Pennsylvania, the Mayor of Philadelphia, Mr. Redmond, M. P., and National President Ryan.

Mr. Redmond sailed on the steamer Baltic from Queenstown on Thursday. He was escorted to the tender by deputations of the Queenstown Urban Council, the Cork branches of the United Irish League and of the A. O. H. and other public bodies and organizations.

Just before the ship sailed, Mr. Redmond, replying to addresses of farewell from the escorting committees, said:

"I will bear to Ireland's friends in America a message of confidence as well as of gratitude for the assistance America has rendered in this struggle. The Home Rule cause has passed the point of danger. An Irish Parliament within a very short time is assured."

After the Philadelphia convention, Mr. Redmond is coming to Boston. On Tuesday evening, October 1, he will be tendered a grand reception in Tremont Temple.

Passing of a Great Priest.

Irish Catholics throughout the world will mourn the death of the great Jesuit priest, Fr. Matthew Russell, who has just died in Dublin at an advanced age. With, perhaps, the exception of Fr. Bernard Vaughan, the late Fr. Matt. Russell, as he was affectionately called in Ireland, was the most widely read member of his great order in the English speaking world. Like his illustrious brother, the late Lord Chief Justice of England, Fr. Russell was a speaker of rare eloquence and power. He was also a delightful writer and an able editor. Under his guildance the Irish Monthly became a publication of vast influence throughout the Catholic world.

The Russells were a great family. Socially and religiously they filled a place in Irish life of similar power and prominence to the Vaughan family of Plymouth, in England.

A sister of the late Father Russell alone remains of her generation. She is Mother Superioress of a convent in San Francisco.

Travelers returning from Ireland report one of the rainiest Summers in a long series of years, with consequent devastation to the hopes of the tillers of the land. Ireland is not, however, the only sufferer.

Travelers coming back from the other countries in Europe, bring similar stories of rain-ruined crops all over England and throughout France and Switzerland. One gentleman who spent seven weeks in England and on the continent told me on board the Laconia, at quarantine, on Thursday that in all forty-nine days, he was able to enjoy but two fine days! As we were speaking, thunder rolled and rain fell in torrents driving everybody on the Laconia to shelter except the officers and crew, who, despite the sultry atmosphere were forced into rubber boots and oil skins. All of which went to show that whether he rules in Cork, or in Kerry, in Lancashire, the Valley of the Rhone or in Massachusetts Bay the weather clerk is impartial in his gifts.

The Midlothian election is a blow to the Asquith ministry. But it loses force in the light of its cause, the desertion by certain labor leaders of the best friends the cause of labor has ever had in the history of England.

Splendid Charitable Work of the Guild of St. Elizabeth

Cardinal O'Connell Honorary President of the Organization

One of the Big Features of the Guild Is Its Care of Neglected Babies.

The Guild of St. Elizabeth, whose home is at No. 59 East Springfield street and whose honorary president is Cardinal O'Connell, is one of the most valuable institutions of its kind in Boston.

Formally stated, the object of the guild is "carrying on benevolent work among children." In living up to its motto splendid results have been achieved. These are gratifying in every way to the ladies who are so generously devoting so much to the various activities of the organization.

The departments of the guild are numerous, but each has its special field and its particular bands of workers, so that everything is systemized. Among these departments are day nursery; classes for the older children in sewing, dressmaking, cooking, millinery, stenography, and typewriting, embroidery, physical culture and gymnastics, drawing and painting; mothers' sewing class; home savings society; stamp saving society; vacation school, library and kindergarten.

Beds for the Babies.

One big feature of the guild's work can be found in the row of little cribs. Each shelters an otherwise neglected baby. For $25 benefactors can name a crib for one year. No question of race or creed is ever raised. During the past year, white and black, Americans, Irish, French, Germans, Swedes and Hebrews have shared alike in its charities. The aggregate attendance in all departments was 19,065.

The nursery is intended only for the accommodation of women who are obliged to work. It is open from 7 in the morning until 6 in the afternoon every day in the year except Sundays and holidays, and on Saturdays from 8 to 12. The children are served with a simple but nutritious lunch at noon each day, supplemented by milk and crackers in the afternoon. The milk for the infants is sterilized and they are fed according to their age or by special orders from the visiting physician. Close medical supervision is kept over all the children.

Busiest in Summer.

Unlike many charitable organizations whose activities cease with the approach of warm weather, the Guild continues its work through the summer and finds July and August two of the busiest months of the year. The Guild conducts a Vacation School for six weeks in midsummer. The fame of the school has spread throughout the neighborhood and its success has been repeatedly demonstrated.

The sewing and dress-making class for women, inaugurated in 1909, has proven a great boom to the mothers. The materials used are supplied by the Guild to the women at wholesale prices and in this way garments and dresses are completed at a minimum cost.

A branch of the Home Savings Society was established at the Guild house in February, 1910, for the purpose of encouraging the saving of small sums of money in the home. The idea of laying aside a few cents every week to provide against sickness or any emergency that might arise, met with the approval of the mothers who still continue to save their pennies. In lieu of a bankbook a card is given to each depositor on which the amount saved is recorded.

A depositor may withdraw her money at any time. When she has saved $5 or $10 she may open an account in her own name in a savings [illegible]. The Guild has many calls for clothing during the year and an urgent appeal is made to its friends to send discarded clothing suitable for children, especially girls' dresses, underwear, boots, shoes and baby clothes to the Guild house, where they will be properly distributed.

Mothers' Day Off.

To those engaged in the work of the Guild it has always seemed that no part of its activities was more satisfactory than the mothers' meetings, which take place each month in the big sunny upstairs room of the Guild House. Here come, on the third Fridays, from thirty to fifty women, mothers of families—hard-working, uncomplaining, devoted—and for many the little "entertainments" offered makes almost the only break in a life of drudgery and care. The mothers make an inspiring audience and their enthusiastic applause and responsive shouts of laughter are very pleasing sounds to those who realize the monotony of their days. At the end of each meeting refreshments are served.

Cardinal Honorary President.

The organization of the Guild of St. Elizabeth is as follows: Honorary President, His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston; founder, Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College; board of directors: president, Miss Maud M. Rockwell; vice-president, Mrs. Warren M. Hill; treasurer, Miss Alice F. Murray; secretary, Miss Mary Josephine Bleakie; active members: Miss Marie Blake, Miss Margaret Carey, Mrs. James H. Carney, Miss Alice Cronan, Miss Alice Dunne, Miss Mary Dwight, Miss Marie Egan, Miss Alice Falvey, Miss Louise B. FitzGerald, Miss Elizabeth S. Fitzpatrick, Miss Grace Fitzpatrick, Miss Genevieve Flatley, Mrs. Matthew Fox, Miss Helen Galvin, Mrs. Thomas H. Hanley, Miss Frances Hill, Mrs. James W. Hinckley, Mrs. Granville Johnson, Mrs. John P. Leahy, Miss Anna McAloon, Miss Josita MacMuikin, Mrs. J. T. O'Brien, Miss Mary E. O'Connell; Miss Alice O'Meara, Miss Alice E. Rockwell, Miss Adelaide Smith, Miss Ethel Thompson, Miss Mary Travers, Miss Marie Webb, Miss Christine Woollatt; visiting physician, Dr. J. W. Hinckley.

MEDFORD CHURCH WILL OPEN SOON

St. Clement's, Harvard Street, Will Be Completed in November.

By the first Sunday in November it is expected that the Church of St. Clement on Harvard street, Medford, will be completed and ready for service. The parish was the first to be established by Cardinal O'Connell after his elevation.

Rev. Thomas F. McCarthy was transferred from the parish of St. Francis de Sales in Charlestown and promoted to the pastorate of the new church. Without parish house or funds, he started to work and in a few weeks had raised enough to start the new church.

In the meantime, mass has been said in a large tent on Boston avenue, in a lot adjoining that where the church is being erected. A nearby dwelling has been converted into a rectory. To assist Fr. McCarthy, the Rev. Michael Callahan has been appointed as curate.

SUIT AGAINST JOHN D.

Foreign Mission Society to Take Action Against Magnate.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The Catholic Foreign Mission Society will not wait to locate in Pocantico Hills. It is rumored that the society will shortly take up its permanent residence on a splendid acreage between Ossining and New Castle and in view of the Hudson River.

It will continue, however, its action against Mr. Rockefeller and the vendor, who, after a written contract with the society, attempted to sell to the former at an advance of some $23,000.

It is also learned now that Mr. Rockefeller's agent was not aware that a written contract had been drawn up between the owner of the property and the Foreign Mission Society until after $10,000 of the oil magnate's money had passed into the hands of the owner.

The new seminary has announced that it will open about the middle of September, and has already accepted several students of philosophy and theology.

The committee has extended a general invitation to all societies and organizations to participate in the parade, which will be the great feature of the day. Official facts of each organization, the number of men to parade, and whether they will have a band should be sent immediately to John F. Dever, director of public celebrations, at City Hall. Through Mr. Dever these communications will be forwarded to the proper officials so that the important details may move along rapidly.

The co-operation of the organizations and societies does not comprise the whole scope of the committee's plans. SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS FROM THE CAPITALS OF EUROPE

IDA RUBENSTEIN GOES A-HUNTING; SO DOES PEER'S GOOD SON

Hon. Rupert Iveagh's Trip with Beautiful Dancer Brings Grief to the Guinness Family.

SHE'S AFTER "BIG GAME"

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The truly good and pious—among them the Hon. Rupert Iveagh's father and mother—are deeply shocked and grieved by gossip about him which is being whispered in the boudoirs and clubs.

This gossip links closely with Rupert's the name of Ida Rubenstein, the beautiful mime of the Russian Imperial Ballet. Her last public appearance was in a saintly role, that of St. Sebastian in Gabriel D'Annunzio's play of that name. Report had it that D'Annunzio was much in love with her, as he was once with Duse, but the Rubenstein was very frigid toward him.

No one has thought Rupert Iveagh saintly, but he has been regarded as a rather estimable citizen. He is thirty-eight, old enough to have settled down. He fought in the Boer war, and has been a member of Parliament and of the London City Council.

He seemed to be quite worthy of his father, one of the Guinness family, the immensely wealthy brewers, whose splendid beneficences won him a title. Besides, Robert Iveagh is married; his wife was Lady Gwendolyn Onslow, elder daughter of the Earl of Onslow, and they have two children. And Lady Gwendolyn, a pattern of piety and respectability, will not receive her husband until he explains away the gossip about himself, and is contrite if there be truth in it.

Mlle. Rubenstein's Hunting.

Not so long ago Mlle Rubenstein announced in Paris that she was going to "hunt big game" in British East Africa. She is fond of that sport and has killed an elephant, but the Paris wits insisted that she caught bigger game than D'Annunzio, of whose importunities she had wearied. The dancer, whose beauty is her greatest gift, disappeared from Paris.

Some weeks afterward a fine yacht anchored off Mombassa, a port whose name should be familiar to Americans, for it was there that Colonel Roosevelt made his lion-slaying entry into Africa. On the yacht was Robert Iveagh, three or four British officials and residents at Mombassa, who had gone to Eton with him, were glad to see him; "put him up" at their clubs and arranged to give him a welcoming dinner.

A Diana for Companion.

To their surprise Iveagh was very "stand-offish," refused all their invitations, and declared he had to hurry up country as he had an urgent engagement Naibrobi. Offended, the Englishmen at Mombassa made inquiries and learned that Iveagh's companion on the yacht was none other than that Diana, Ida Rubenstein.

In due time, letters reached here, expressing the opinion that the Honorable Rupert Iveagh is not so truly good as he seems to be. It is added that Iveagh's frequent excursions to Paris are explained; that Iveagh, to whom his father's deep purse has been open always, spent much money on the Rubenstein's productions at the Chatelet Theatre, where she made one gorgeous failure after another.

So goes the gossip, but, as the thirsty and penurious Navvy remarked when he called for a ha'penny pot, "ye can't draw beer without froth."

HOLY TRINITY GETS BISHOP.

Right Rev. T. A. Jagger Will Occupy Long-Vacant Pulpit.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—The difficulty of finding a chaplain for the most beautiful American church in Europe, namely that of Holy Trinity, in the Avenue de L'Alama, has been only partly overcome by inviting the Rt. Rev. Thomas A. Jagger to accept the pastorate. Bishop Jagger is the spiritual head of the American churches in Europe. Since the death of Dr. John Morgan, a cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan, it has been found very difficult for Holy Trinity Church to find a pastor. Several invitations were sent to New York clergymen, but all were somewhat strangely declined.

AMERICAN GIRL WINS.

Miss King Victor in Notable Dancing Contest.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A young American society girl, Miss Gwendolyn King, has covered herself with glory at a dancing contest at Dinard. Miss King is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert King of New York, who usually spend the Winters with the Pau hounds, and their Summers in fashionable Dinard.

In the recent contest, in which the best French and amateur foreign dancers took part, Miss King not only carried off the prize of honor, but also a first prize. The prize of honor was offered for the Boston, while the first prize was for the one-step.

UNIQUE BERLIN HOTEL.

Six Hundred Rooms Will Solve Boarding Problem.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—Berlin has a new toy, a truly colossal caravansary, modelled on the lines of the giant "apartment hotels" of New York. You cannot build "skyscrapers" in Germany, so instead of shooting up forty stories into the air, the builders of the "Boarding Palace" in Kurfustendam have spread it over an enormous area. The "Boarding Palace" hopes to end the misery of homeless families and bachelors who have hitherto had to content themselves with precarious existence in a German boarding house. It has 600 rooms, with baths, restaurants, coffee-rooms, grills and "American bars."

AMETHYST WITH HISTORY.

Beautiful Stone Originally Owned by Napoleon.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A beautiful amethyst now among the treasures of the museum at Sens has a most interesting history. It was originally purchased by Napoleon, who presented it to Countess Walewska, who left it to her son. Count Walewska offered it to the great Rachel after a signal triumph in "Tartuffe." Rachel had it made into a scarfpin, which she gave to her doctor, M. Guillaume.

NEW MIKADO OF JAPAN AN ABLE MAN

Emperor Yoshihito has had the advantage of a thorough modern education at the public schools. After he attained manhood he traveled to every corner of the empire and acquainted himself with the country and the people he would be called upon to rule.

Japan's young ruler. From a recent direct camera study.

TOKIO, Sept. 14.—Emperor Yoshihito, the new and youthful ruler of Japan, takes up next week the full and active burden of State affairs, following the elaborate ceremonials attendant upon the royal obsequies of his late father, Mutsuhito.

All the representatives of Western nations who have come in contact with the young Emperor are convinced that he will administer wisely and strongly the affairs of the Empire.

Yoshihito has had the advantage of a thoroughly modern education at the public schools. There he mixed from day to day with worthy companions. After he attained manhood and the title of Crown Prince he set about acquainting himself thoroughly with the country and people which he would be called sometime to rule.

He journeyed to every corner of Japan and even to Korea. There is not a corner of his dominion now with which he is not familiar.

As Crown Prince he took great delight in appearing among the country villages alone and ahead of his retinue. Before his identity became known he would have opportunity to observe the residents.

Among the representatives of foreign nations who have been here as special ambassadors to the obsequies of Mutsuhito are Secretary of State Knox of the United States, Alfonso, the Spanish Infanta; Prince Henry of Prussia, Prince Arthur of Connaught and other high officers of rank. Each special ambassador placed a wreath on Mutsuhito's catafalque. Mrs. Knox, who accompanied her husband to Tokio, was received by the Empress Sadake.

M. Freycinet Calls Kaiser Peace Lord

Famous Statesman Declares Emperor of His Nation's Ancient Foe Does Not Desire War.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—The aged savant, Senator, academician and former Minister of War, M. De Freycinet, takes the occasion of the German Emperor's visit to Switzerland to declare him a leader of peace. M. De Freycinet, who has taken no part in public life since the Dreyfus trial at Rennes, says:

I am satisfied that Emperor William is a sincere friend of peace. I do not believe now that any conflict is coming, nor did I believe that war was approaching even in the critical days of Agadir, when a German battleship was sent there. Those around me said that Germany desired war, but I, knowing the Emperor's sentiments, thought and knew differently.

The present system of alliances is against war, rather a strong guarantee of peace, and, as neither France nor Germany desires war, we may settle down to the cultivation of the arts of peace. I recognize the peaceful character of the Triple Alliance; our own triple alliance is similarly peaceful, and the double alliance, as well as the entente with England are similarly peaceful. They form a perfect equilibrium on both sides. There will always be some restraining power whose interests will be for peace.

As for making the Swiss Republic the theatre of war in case hostilities should break out, this idea was never contemplated. It would be unworthy of statesmanship. No minister has thought of violating the Swiss neutrality, or treating the Helvetian Republic other than as a friendly neighboring power. Violation of Swiss neutrality is a legend we must destroy. I have confidence in the sincerity of the German Emperor when he declares for peace. His acting on the principle, "If you wish peace, prepare for war," does not shake my confidence.

MRS. ELKINS IN LONDON.

She Will Give Dinner Parties Before Going to Italy.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—An interesting visitor and hostess to London will be Mrs. Stephen Elkins, who is expected here at the end of this month. She probably will take a small house in Mayfair if she can find one to suit her. Miss Katherine Elkins is with her mother and they are to give a series of dinner parties at the Ritz Hotel before leaving to Winter in Italy.

FOUNTAIN FOR M'CORMICK.

Rockefeller's Son-in-Law Gets Latest Parisian Ideas.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Paris environments have inspired the making of a beautiful fountain for Chicago. While Parisian in inspiration, it is American in workmanship, for the sculptor is Miss Janet Scudder of Indiana.

The fountain will play in the grounds of the beautiful Chicago home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick, and its spray may soothe the brow of John D. Rockefeller when, fevered with finance, on the occasions of his visits to his daughter, Mrs. McCormick.

During the preparatory period of the fountain's construction Miss Scudder studied the chief fountains of Paris, and the far-famed ones of Versailles, and then followed the electric system in making her design for the McCormicks.

American Restorers of Ancestral Ruins

England's Decayed Estates and Rotting Manses Built Up by Bright, New Dollars.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—England and her ancestral homes owe much to the sympathetic and generous treatment of American tenants who are ever ready to spend their dollars in the improvement of estates which they rent. Indeed, but for the American invasions, many famous old houses would now be crumbling to ruins.

For instance, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who is entertaining a succession of large parties at Holwick, a fine estate which her husband has leased from the Earl of Strathmore, has brought her excellent taste to bear on the interior of the house, while Mr. Whitney has spent thousands of pounds in improvements and alterations, and the estate is now a credit to the countryside, which is more than could be said for it under the rule of its owner.

Again, Mr. and Mrs. John Magee are having a number of friends at Urie Castle before they leave on a Winter trip to India as guests of Sir George Rooskeppel, agent to the governor-general. Mrs. Magee a remarkably handsome woman and brilliant conversationalist, has entirely renovated the interior of Urie Castle and beautified it with many objects of value, while under Mr. Magee's lavish rule, the shooting has immensely improved.

BATTLE FOR A BEAUTY.

New Yorker Defeats South American in Bout for Her Smiles.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—North and South American have done battle for the sunny smiles and glances of Miss Ruth Menges, the younger sister of Roberta Corwin Hill, sometimes known as the "Belle of Sheepshead Bay," and credited with being more beautiful than the "Belle." The battleground upon which an Argentinian and a New Yorker contended for the fair prize was Trouville. The gallant New Yorker is "Billy" De Witt, while the Argentinian rejoices in the name of Suaros. The Argentinian tried to win Miss Ruth with costly presents such as only a Monte Cristo can buy, but realising defeat, he withdrew, leaving De Witt master of the situation. Miss Menges played spiritedly during the whole gambling season, invariably beginning with a big pile of one thousand franc notes in front of her.

2767 MASTERS OF DANCING ENDORSE THE STAID BOSTON

MOVE BALLROOM REFORM

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Two thousand seven hundred and sixty-seven dancing masters have unanimously declared themselves in favor of maintaining the great American dance known as The Boston. This, they have done in the Annual just published under the auspices of the International Academy of Authors, Masters and Professors of Dancing and Deportment. Dancing men of all nations are represented in this academy.

While they are unanimously in favor of maintaining the triple Boston, the two-step is also favored by 2,311 votes. The waltz is also popular with the professors, having received 2,530 votes. The polkas, quadrilles and lancers are retained in the class of "respectable" dances. With crushing unity the whole faculty condemned such dances as are not correct of character and which favor epileptic rather than supple motions. This ruling includes the Tango, the Grizzly Bear, the Bunny Hug, the Turkey Trot and such like from correct ballrooms and respectable dancing academies. For these are not dancing but decadence, says Maurice Donnay.

The decision of the dancing teachers of the world is a great triumph for the Boston, and all the more so as it was unknown in Europe until twenty years ago when it was introduced by an American who took to dancing because he failed at baseball. I mean George Washington Lopp, the founder of Washington Palace, Paris.

Among new dances, the Sjerlockinette, inspired by the prowling movement of the famous detective of fiction, Sherlock Holmes, and the Aviation Step, which comes from the newest form of applied mechanics, are both recommended. But for gracefulness, the professors tell us that the minuet must always hold a first place.

STAGE SEEKS AMERICAN.

Daughter of Samuel Morse Receives Offer.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Consequent upon her recent marked success in amateur theatricals, a handsome offer to go on the stage has been made to Mrs. Loonen of Indianapolis and Paris. Mrs. Loonen is the only daughter of the late Samuel Morse, who was Consul-General at Paris during the second Cleveland administration.

Mrs. Loonens' recent theatrical success was made down at Dinard, where she played the leading role in a piece called "The Virgin of Prompt Secours," a play written for the occasion by Mme. Judith Gauthier. Though the other actors and actresses were all professionals from Paris, Mrs. Loonen's playing was easily the best.

OPEN ANCIENT MUSEUM.

Maisons-Laffitte Chateau New Attraction in Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—France has another museum to her credit this week. The old chateau of Maisons-Laffitte, which was built in 1642 by Rene de Longeuil, has, after many vicissitudes, been opened as a museum to the public. Longeuil, after his disgrace, sold his castle, where Louis XIV. and Louis XV. each spent some time. It then passed into the hands of the Comte d'Artois, who was to become Charles X. of France, and who had a magnificent dining hall added to the castle by the architect who built Bagatelle. On this one hall he spent $120,000, which was an enormous sum for the period. Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette often drove out from Paris to dine at the chateau.

HALF-MARRIED, HE BALKS.

Groom Refuses Sign Register Because of Bride's Remark.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A half-finished marriage is reported from Ville, in Corsica.

Jean Duboc and Marie Lan had pronounced the binding words before the Mayor, and the register was about to be signed, when on a remark from Mme. Lan concerning a property settlement, Jean threw down his pen and refused to sign his name.

He was legally still unmarried, he declared, and he intended to remain so for the present.

The bride went home in tears and now has appealed to the law for a pronouncement that the marriage is valid, even without her husband's signature.

WILHELMINA BEST DRESSER.

VIENNA, Sept. 14.—According to an Austrian paper, the most extravagant in dress among her peers is Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, who spends annually $24,000 on personal attire.

Empress Victoria Augusta devotes $12,500 to her toilettes, which are invariably ordered in London or Vienna.

The Czarina is the least luxurious of royal consorts. Having a predilection for black, and a severe style that obviates trimming and accessories, her dressmaking bills are almost insignificant.

ENTERTAIN A PRINCE.

The Schellings Score Another Social Triumph.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schelling of New York have added another link to their lengthening chain of social successes by having as their guests at Geneva a reigning prince, namely, the Prince Regent of Brunswick and his Princess, otherwise the Duchess Johanna Albrecht of Mecklinberg-Schwerin. The Schellings have entertained a great deal since they settled in Switzerland two years ...

Bernhardt Gives Her Recipe for Unfading Youth

Confessed to 68 Next Month and a Great Grandmother, She Still is Agile at Tennis.

HOW TO BE YOUNG AT 68.

2—Rest by the sea two months.
3—Exercise.
4—Be altruistic.

MOTTO:

"Rust consumes quicker than labor wears."

By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Bernhardt, "the Divine Sarah," whom time caresses, has returned to Paris and is preparing for her London season.

For two months the Rachel of today has been boating, shrimping, playing tennis with her son, granddaughter and great-granddaughter at her Seagirt home at Belle Isle.

Asked to betray the secret of her perpetual youth Bernhardt made this illuminating statement to the I. N. S. correspondent today:

First, I am not as old as people say. I shall be only sixty-eight on October 23, whereas people say I shall be sixty-nine.

The real secret of youth is work, hard work. The more I accomplish the younger I feel, the old idea of retiring and rusting out is exploded. Rust consumes quicker than labor does.

Furthermore, labor does not wear if one takes suitable holidays. I enjoy two months every year by the sea. I like boating in the rough sea and sometimes handle the tiller and sheet myself. Tennis is another favorite outdoor exercise of mine. I have two other recreations which I enjoy much—painting and sculpture; you know I have won prizes in both.

I feel as young as I did fifty years ago, when I won a prize at the Conservatory. Altruism is also an excellent way of keeping one's youth. Too much introspection wears. The world is getting better, and nowadays few live for themselves alone. Yes, I have written my memoirs and they made me live in the past, but I prefer acting in and living the present.

Alexandra Fails as Royal Matchmaker

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Queen Alexandra has gone to Scandinavia bitterly disappointed at the failure of one of her pet projects. The queen mother, who is an inveterate matchmaker, had set her heart upon a marriage between her favorite nephew, Prince George of Greece, and her grand-daughter, the young Duchess of Fife.

The young people met once or twice, but as the Fifes are in deep mourning and Prince George was being feted everywhere by ambitious hostesses, there was little opportunity for much quiet intercourse. The young Duchess was, however, fully conscious of the arrangements that were being made for her and took no pains to conceal her dislike of them. In this she was supported by her mother, the Princess Royal, who, being of a very retiring disposition herself, fully sympathizes with her daughter's wish to marry outside of the circle of foreign royalties.

The late Duke of Fife would have eagerly desired a royal alliance for both his daughters. As for Prince George, he shows no inclination to settle down. He lost his heart last season to several pretty English society girls, and is what may be described as a young man of promiscuous affections.

The Duchess of Fife is a nice, quiet girl, rather near sighted, with a poor figure and only moderate good looks, but her sister, Alexandra, is far more attractive. They have a trying time with their mother, who suffers from terrible attacks of melancholia, alternated with fits of great irritability. Both girls will be very well dowered as the late Duke of Fife was far wealthier than was generally supposed.

Women's Stockings in Filigree of Gold

They Will Be the Most Striking Feature of the Fashionables Next Winter.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—The most striking fashion for next season will be in women's stockings. Next Winter our fashionables will wear stockings in filagree, and in filigree of gold, at that.

This means that not only at street crossings, but continually, more stockings will be shown than ever. Already the French woman has the reputation of being able to show gracefully more hose than her sister of other lands.

Yet, the very essence of fashion is changed. To stand still were to perish. Stationary fashion is not fashion and would mean the death of our frock, frill and furbelow, and hat shops and such like, as make up half of Paris, and keep all our young girls at work.

Duke of Sutherland in Financial Straits

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Rumors persist as to the sale of Stafford House, the palatial London residence of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, but there is no truth whatever in them, for nothing has yet been decided. The final word rests with the Marquis of Stafford, the Duke's eldest son. The Duchess is at present in Canada with the Duke and her visit will have a decided effect one way or the other on young Lord Stafford's decision.

The Duke, of course, has invested an immense amount of capital in Canada, but though he is an amiable little man, he has not a good business head on his shoulders.

S. R. GUGGENHEIM FOUNDS SCOTTISH CLAN O' THAT ILK

This One of the Copper Kings Hires Highland Castle and Takes on Dignity of Laird.

PIPER SKIRLS AS HE DINES

By CHESTER OVERTON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Solomon R. Guggenheim of New York and Long Branch, has been playing the Laird to perfection at the Scottish Castle, the House of Farr, which he leased for three weeks at a cost of $5,000. In effect, he has founded the Clan Guggenhein, which, while newer than the Douglas and the Gordon, should endure, founded as it is, on copper.

Laird Guggenheim's house party of twenty-four has just dispersed from the House of Farr. He entertained them with his usual prodigal hospitality, everything was done on a scale of magnificence that astonished the natives.

Piper Plays at Dinner.

As became the menage of a Scottish chieftain, when Mr. Guggenheim's guests sat down to dine, a piper marched around the table, playing on the bagpipe such airs as "The Campbells Are Coming." The piper filled the interludes by delivering flowers of speech in blank verse, reciting the virtues of the Clan Guggenheim, and lauding the members of the family, "who hae wi' Wallace bled."

Those who know of Mr. Guggenheim's open-handed hospitality, will readily understand that everything was perfectly arranged, and all agreed that better grouse shooting and salmon fishing have never been experienced.

The Countess of Lanesborough, whose daughter recently married the Marquis of Stafford, the Duke of Sutherland's son and heir, was the guest of honor. She will present Miss Guggenheim at one of next year's courts.

Mrs. Guggenheim a Beauty.

Mrs. Guggenheim, who is a beautiful woman, wore some wonderful Parisian toilettes and jewels in the evening, though dressed with correct simplicity in tweeds on the moors in the daytime.

One evening gown was carried out in amethyst chiffon velvet, draped to the figure, and made with a long pointed train, just below the hips, giving a modified pannier effect, and also showing, near the feet, just a glimpse of simulated underskirt, in pale mauve satin, lightly embroidered in amethysts and diamonds. The bodice had a V-shaped opening with a corsetlet in amethyst velvet bordered along the top with a band of mauve satin adorned with the same precious stones. The short sleeves were of amethyst mauve chiffon. With this gown were worn a tiara and necklace of amethysts in a setting of old Spanish gold filagree work.

BRIDE FOR YOUNG PRINCE.

Russian Grand Duchess Olga Said to Be Chosen.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—While the young Prince of Wales, who is really nothing more than a mere child as far as character goes, is certainly not troubling about getting engaged or married, his relatives are constantly on the lookout for a suitable princess bride, and it is now rumored that the final choice has fallen upon Grand Duchess Olga Nicholaievna of Russia, daughter of Czar Nicholas of Russia. It is well known that the plan has the hearty approval of the Czar and Czarina as well as King George and Queen Mary.

Queen Alexandra, however, is said to oppose it, and her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia, is taking sides with her, both protesting against the constant intermarrying of young princes and princesses so closely related.

BUST OF MINNIE TRACEY.

Unveiled Before an Admiring American Audience.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Rarely has a bust called forth so much admiration as that of Miss Minnie Tracey, which was unveiled to an admiring American audience yesterday in the studio of the Russian sculptor, Yietlin. Miss Tracey, who is a niece of the late Colonel John Tracey of New York, has lived and studied and sung in Paris during the past quarter of a century. She is the most popular of our foreign prima donnas and was a lifelong friend of our great composer, the late M. Massenet, who makes honorable mention of her in his memoirs recently published. Next year Miss Tracey goes to American to sing, and the mascot she will take with her is the bust by Yietlin.

TO ENLIGHTEN PARIS.

Los Angeles to Present Ideas of an American.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Convinced that the City of Light has been long enough illuminating America, Mrs. F. J. Nellis of Los Angeles, has decided to return the compliment and enlighten Paris. With this laudable object in view she will give a series of philosophical lectures here this Winter.

The lectures are the result of studies at Los Angeles and the University of Berlin, where Mrs. Nellie made a special pursuit of German philosophies and these, distilled through a Los Angeles brain, will be one of the delights of Paris this Winter.

FALLIERES' SUCCESSOR.

Three Mentioned as Possible Presidents of France.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—President Fallieres' term of office comes to an end next February, and there is already considerable talk in Paris as to his successor. The name one hears oftenest is that of M. Leon Bourgeois, who will undoubtedly be elected if he becomes a candidate. Failing M. Bourgeois, M. Georges Clemenceau and M. Antonin Dubost, president of the Senate, are possible candidates.

BUSINESS HEN AND THE AVERAGE FARM

MONEY FOR POULTRYMAN

Experience of Practical Chicken Farmer with Medium Flock Under Careful Methods.

By C. E. PLEAS.

I WISH to show the advantage of better stock and better methods of poultry raising on the farm, and to advocate only such improvements as can be put into practice on the average farm.

On all farms we find more or less poultry, mostly just common stock raised in a haphazard way with little care, allowed to shift for themselves and exposed to all kinds of danger and adverse conditions; with little thought taken as to their improvement and whether or not they are yielding the utmost profit.

The business hen is one of the most important factors in America's wealth today, the annual income from poultry being six hundred millions of dollars—almost equal in value to the wheat crop of the entire country.

This is well worth looking after, and I am sure farmers would keep thoroughbred stock if they could realize the advantages to be gained, and know how easy it is to get a start and maintain it. It is not necessary to go to several hundred or a thousand dollars expense in buildings and fixtures to have thoroughbreds, and I would not advise it to begin with; but any farmer can afford to buy a few chickens or a setting of eggs to make a start.

First Have Good Home.

Perhaps the first essential is a roomy, well ventilated house for the fowls to roost in at night. There is enough old lumber lying around on many a farm to build a comfortable hen house, if one cannot afford better; or the farmer can cut a few trees and have lumber sawed, or rive out boards to make it.

It should preferably have a close board or cement floor, and the cracks in the walls should have strips nailed over them to prevent drafts. The perches should be arranged low, and all on a level, so that there will be no crowding for the highest places. We prefer 3 by 3 inch scantling for perches, laid loose on crosspieces 18 inches high; their own weight holds them in place, and they can easily be removed for cleaning out.

I believe I can best illustrate my meaning by describing our own methods. Not that they are the best there are, but the best suited to our present conditions and circumstances.

Aims at Utility Chicken.

The best breed for one to start with is largely a matter of choice, and one is more likely to succeed with his favorite breed than with some other. Our choice is the Barred Plymouth Rock, and our aim is the best "utility chicken." A year ago we bought 12 full-blooded hens from a neighbor, and got a cockerel; today we have the finest flock in the county, consisting of 60 odd laying pullets, three roosters, and many chicks, with more to hatch.

We usually have two breeding pens, with 12 to 15 hens and one rooster in each, during the breeding season. At other times we let all the hens run together, keeping the roosters by themselves and marking any special ones that we want to keep for another season. Thus we get more eggs, and they keep better.

The main house is 10 by 20 feet, with a 6-foot shed along the South side, the shed being open along the side and closed at the ends. The wall on the side next the shed is boarded up 3 feet from the bottom, the upper part being open and covered with heavy fencing wire, allowing free circulation of air. The floor is 18 inches off the ground, affording shelter without the chickens having to stay inside. This also supplies the dust bath, as does the shed in front.

The space inside is sufficient for 75 hens, and has a partition from front to back to accommodate two breeding pens. Rows of nests with slanting tops, hinged to admit easy access, are arranged along the walls, with the openings toward the walls, so that the hens can lay in seclusion and semi-darkness.

Pine straw makes the best material for nests and we use glass nest eggs, costing about 20 cents per dozen. The main door is in the near end of the house and is kept locked at night, while the chickens go in from the shed, through holes just large enough for them to enter. About an inch of clean sawdust is kept on the floor and is changed every week.

Feed Hoppers and Diet.

Under the shed are also nests, and feed hoppers to hold a week's supply, so that if we wish to leave home for a few days we will not have to call on the neighbors to care for our poultry. However, we mostly scatter the feed on the ground among litter, and make them scratch for their living.

In the mornings we give them a feed of mixed oats and barley; about a pint for every four hens in Winter and less in Summer. At 2 o'clock they are given about the same quantity of bran mash, with table scraps mixed in; and at night a mixture of corn and oats. We do not consider this the best ration for them; but having to buy all our grain, we cannot always get what we want. But we expect to raise our own feed in the future and shall endeavor to give them a greater variety of grains.

A water fountain is kept in the runs, and boxes of charcoal, crushed oyster shells, sharp grit and broken mortar or limestone are kept by them all the time. They also have free access to a coarse, dry bran mixed with cottonseed meal, in self-feeding hoppers, under the shed.

We mix 100 pounds of bran to 20 pounds of the meal. The meal, to a great extent, takes the place of meat scraps, but it is very important not to increase the amount of cottonseed meal, as too much will cause them to shed feathers, or it may kill them. We also give them an occasional feed of cut bone, chopped fine with an axe. We keep green stuff growing for them all the time; such as barley, oats, turnips, mustard, kale, cabbage, etc., so they can either pasture it or we can cut and throw to them.

Occasionally, we turn our poultry out and let them have the run of the place, when there are no crops for them to injure. Under no condition do we allow our chickens to annoy our neighbors. This is one reason we like the Rocks, a four-foot netting fence being sufficient to keep them at home. They are also among the best layers. Their eggs are large and of a rich brown appearance. And right here is a point I wish to touch upon—demand.

By having thoroughbred stock, and keeping them away from all sorts of filth, giving them clean, dry nests, and gathering the eggs every day, we get clean, bright eggs of top-notch quality. I notice that when I take a basket of them to market, the merchant or his clerk sets aside a dozen or two for his own table.

Special Marketing of Eggs.

I never take eggs to market packed in cottonseed, bran, sawdust or litter of any kind, as the eggs absorb the odors and never look so nice. I notice that it is usually the packed eggs that get broken. Last Summer, I got 20 cents per dozen for every egg I could furnish, when the market price was 15 cents. I am now planning to furnish a hotel regularly at a uniform price for the entire year; which will net me a little above the regular market price. I can do it, and so can any other person who can furnish a first-class article, guaranteed to be absolutely fresh.

There is much more in the care for poultry than there is in the breed, for we were taking eggs to the market by the basket-full, last season, from our 12 hens, when none of our neighbors were getting any, and there were none in the stores. There were only three days last year on which we failed to get an egg, and that was due to three or four feeds of musty bran that made the entire stock sick. So much for the value of clean, pure food.

Aside from furnishing eggs for market, we also supply many to private parties for hatching at breeders' prices. We also sell many chickens for breeding purposes, which shows the advantage of keeping thoroughbred stock. We never inbreed, and keep our flock healthy and vigorous by adding new blood each year. Of the 161 chickens hatched last season, we raised 159 and never had a sick chick until we got the unwholesome bran mentioned above. We watch them as they are growing up, and pick out and mark the choicest, thriftiest ones for breeders.

While we use incubators, it may not be advisable for all to undertake to do so, as they require very close attention; yet, in the most successful raising of poultry they are as essential as good stock. When setting the incubator we set one or more hens at the same time, and on testing the eggs, on the seventh and fourteenth days, we compare them with those under the hens, to see if they are developing properly.

All infertile eggs are removed, as a dead egg stays colder than the live ones and has a tendency to weaken them in vigor by chilling them in spots. All chicks are removed from the hens as soon as hatched, before drying, and are thus sure to be free from lice or mites. Those in the incubator are allowed to remain until dry, and all are placed in fireless brooders, about twenty-five to the brooder, as that is about the limit that will succeed well in one colony.

Modified Philo Brooders.

We use a modification of the Philo system, making our own brooders and coops as best suits our needs.

The brooder coop, or run, is 2½ by 6 feet square, and 18 inches high, with a water-tight lid hinged at the back, and a frame covered with wire screen resting just inside the top. Half the bottom is floored over with a partition at the end and a door in it. On this platform are set the feed boxes and water fount. The unfloored end serves as a scratch-room and runaway and is kept dug up. Glass is fitted along the front, and the top can be raised to let in air and sunshine. A door in one corner, over the platform, admits the chicks direct from the brooder, and they may be shut either in or out by sliding a thin board between. The partition is to keep the chicks from scratching dirt into the water and feed.

THOUSAND DOLLARS PAID FOR ONE PLYMOUTH ROCK ROOSTER

Breed Making Records as Egg Layers and Winning Large Share of Prizes

R. C. Caldwell Tells of the Merits of Fowls That Hold High Place in East.

A NORFOLK County poultryman keeps three breeds—White and Barred Rocks and Rhode Island Reds—because he believes the Barred Rocks are the best all-around breed on earth, because his wife likes the Whites and his boy demands the Reds. Every breed has its supporters who insist the particular variety they favor is the most desirable from every point of view.

R. C. Caldwell, a breeder of White Rocks the variety which has attained remarkable prominence in southeastern Massachusetts, tells in the following article the reason for his belief in the noble birds, some of which have sold for $1,000 each:

By R. C. CALDWELL.

A fact that cannot be impressed too strongly upon the beginner is the necessity of procuring the best breed obtainable in order to insure his future success. In this respect, I will explain why White Plymouth Rocks should be selected in preference to any other variety.

One of the first things to impress the beginner and influence him in making his choice is beauty in both color and outline. That this is a prominent characteristic in the White Plymouth Rock must be at once admitted. Practically everyone admires a clear, snowy white fowl. Combined with this, the stately carriage, bright red face, comb and wattles, and the rich yellow legs and you have qualities that make them one of the most beautiful fowls on earth.

Rank High as Layers.

Going a step further and considering the utility values, no breed excels the White Plymouth Rock as layers. In this day of the 200 egg hen, when everybody is clamoring for a heavy laying strain, you can pin your faith to the White Plymouth Rocks, as you will find by careful investigation, that they have as high individual records as any other variety. In this regard, a writer in the White Plymouth Rock Club Catalogue says: "In all laying contests in competition with other varieties, they have invariably given a good account of themselves. Away back in 1894-95, in an egg contest conducted by one of the prominent agricultural papers of the country, in which 143 pens competed, pens of White Plymouth Rock pullets won first and third honors, with an average per pullet of 289 and 280 eggs respectively. In my own experience, I have, during a bitter cold and stormy January, when my fowls had to be kept indoors practically all the time, averaged three dozen eggs per day from two pens of thirty each."

It has been noted in many instances where birds were purchased from some of the best show strains in the country, where practically no attention was paid to egg production, that they have proven to be prolific layers with but very little tendency to broodiness. White Rocks are natural layers, and one of their chief characteristics is the production of eggs in the Winter, at the time when eggs are at the highest figure. For year-around layers, they can't be beaten. They average well up to two hundred eggs each per year, with the best individuals well over this mark.

Excel as Table Fowls.

I have given two of the qualifications possessed by White Rocks, but to complete the list, and show that they possess all the requirements of a fancy and utility fowl, we must mention their superior qualities as a table fowl. The White Rocks with their broad, full breast, deep kneel bones and fine-grained flesh, produce the much desired plump carcasses, with yellow legs, long bodies, clean yellow skin, free from unsightly pin-feathers, assuring the intending purchaser plenty of tender, deliciously flavored meat of high quality, for which he will gladly pay a fancy price.

Very few breeds or varieties are to be seen in larger numbers at our shows, both large and small, than the White Rocks, and the White Rock alley is always a main centre of attraction. In many instances they have carried off the honors of the best bird in the show, all varieties competing. Some of the highest prices ever paid for single specimens of any breed have been paid for prize winners of this variety. Records show that prize winning males have been sold for prices ranging from $250 to $800 while in several instances, $1,000 has been refused for others. This would indicate that the breed had exceptional value for exhibition purposes.

GREATEST APPLE SHOW AT BROCKTON FAIR

BOSTON AMERICAN TO CONDUCT EXHIBITION

THAT New England may realize the possibilities of the apple industry, the Boston AMERICAN has decided to conduct an exhibition in conjunction with the Brockton fair, on October 1, 2, 3 and 4.

The AMERICAN'S New England apple show, which will be one of the important features of the big fair, will enlighten thousands who lack an adequate idea of the fact that the Eastern States are producing fruit which excels the product of the far West and can, with the more general adoption of progressive methods, supply every demand now met by the Pacific regions.

Marvelous enterprise in the exploiting of the West has convinced a large part of the population that the East is not a rival of the Pacific States in the production of apples. The apple districts of those States have been boomed as the only sections in which the fruit could be produced in large quantities and of extra good size and quality. An effort has been made to create the impression that the East would be going without apples if the Western orchards were not supplying the market's demands.

To the West must be given credit for unusual enterprise in the boosting of their country, the selling of land and stock in orchards, as well as for the producing of apples.

Those who have thoroughly investigated the claims of the West with a view to investment, find that the East is the place in which to start orchards. They find that the statements to the effect that the Pacific Coast is supplying the Eastern markets are not borne out by the facts, one small town in Virginia shipping more apples than the whole of Oregon.

> ONE LESSON APPLE SHOW WILL TEACH
>
> The renovated orchard is destined to play so large a part in the development which is due in New England. It has been proved that the task of reclaiming a run-down orchard, if attacked with energy and skill, will be well repaid An orchardist with a fifty-four acre farm, purchased at a price of $2,200, spared no reasonable expense and neglected no opportunity.
>
> Every year the return equalled the entire investment.

Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and, to some extent, Montana, have, by the use of modern methods, usurped a certain trade in the East. The large apples these States are sending to Boston are only the best, the grading system is excellent and the business is conducted through a system of co-operation which has attained the perfect stage.

An expert has estimated that a third of the nation this side of Mississippi is good apple country. To New England is given the credit for having ideal soils and conditions.

The freight on a box of apples from Spokane would be a good profit to the Eastern orchardist. To produce perfect fruit is no more expensive in Massachusetts than in Washington, and the "market at the door" assures profit in the East when the West will be having difficulty in paying freight charges.

The AMERICAN will endeavor to awaken the New England States to a realization of the wonderful opportunity of which few are taking advantage. The show at Brockton will enlighten those who have misunderstood or been misled.

At the apple show they will learn that the East is now raising apples that are every bit as good as those coming from the Pacific coast; that land is cheaper in the East and the market is within easy reach.

All that is lacking in New England are the methods of the West, the care of orchards, careful picking of the fruit, proper grading and the abandonment of some of the old-time conditions which have had a tendency to make the buyers suspicious of the contents of the barrel.

The AMERICAN'S show will be conducted in a tent, right inside the main gate. Aside from a big display of New England apples, there will be experts to explain the merits of New England orchards and enlighten those who seek knowledge regarding the possibilities of raising and marketing fruit.

There will be cash prizes, medals, a cup and ribbons for the best displays. The exhibition, it is expected, will be the largest ever held east of the Berkshires.

THE RURAL MAIL-BAG

RURAL MAIL BAG:

Is alfalfa good for hogs? I am planning to raise more hogs and am looking ahead to feed problems. If I can depend on alfalfa pasture next Spring I can sell considerable corn this Fall that I would need for feed.

B. M. B.

Alfalfa is a good pasture for hogs, but the Oklahoma station has carried on experiments that show the advisability of using corn with it. Young hogs when fed a full ration of chop corn as well as alfalfa gained more than four times as much in three months as when on the pasture only.

PRETTY PACKAGES SCORNED.

RURAL MAIL-BAG:

I have a very promising apple crop. Probably I shall have 10 or 15 barrels of very fine fruit, quite above the grade of the rest. Do you think it would pay me to put these choice apples up in pretty prize-package baskets and try to sell them in the city? It seems to me that a good apple is a good apple and ought to bring the same price no matter how it is packed.

NO PRETENSE.

Which of two horses equally good makes the best appearance, the one that is well curried and driven in neat well-kept harness, or the one that is rough and driven in worn, rusted, broken harness? Which house will sell better, the one that is in good repair but lacking paint, or the well-painted house in a well-kept yard? There is no pretense in making the full excellence of an article apparent. If you can reach a city custom that likes to have fruit tastily packed, use your business sense and supply the market.

SILOING CORN.

Rural Mail-Bag:

What is a sealed silo? What is the right time for cutting corn to silo

DAIRY FEEDER.

A silo is sealed when it is made as air-tight as possible after the forage is put in. The method of water sealing seems to be preferred by many now. By this method, water is turned into the silo at the top until the upper silage to a depth of six inches or a little more is thoroughly soaked. This water-logged layer keeps the air from penetrating further down and prevents the silage from spoiling. Other farmers, however, merely pack the silage very tightly at the top, with or without a top layer of from twenty-four to thirty inches of straw. The time for cutting corn for the silo depends mostly on the state of the corn rather than on the date. Green fodder in the silo shows too much acid, and overdry fodder does not pack well, so that air gets in, causing more or less of the silage to spoil, usually with dry mold. The corn should never be as mature as it needs to be for shocking. Some farmers guide themselves by the foliage, cutting when the lower leaves wither, and others go by the state of the ear, cutting when the grain begins to show gloss and reveal the notch at the end. In packing the silo, reverse the rule followed in stacking grain. Keep the sides full up with the centre, and as well packed down.

DISPOSE OF POOR COWS, SAVE BEST

One of the most encouraging lines of work which the United State Department of Agriculture is carrying on in the South is the institution of herd records on dairy farms. By this means the unprofitable cow is detected and can be disposed of for slaughter. The heifer calves from the profitable cows are raised to take the place of the unprofitable animals. In this way the quality of the herd is steadily improved. The daily weighing of the milk and the testing for butterfat enable the dairyman to feed the individual animals according to the production and to select such feeds for the ration as are shown to give the best results.

The department receives many letters from dairymen of the South bearing on the value of this work. J. K. Morrison, a dairyman of Grenada, Mississippi, writes:

"I write to express my great appreciation of the work done for me by your department.

"From the records kept I found two cows that produced over $200 profit. One, $110.88, the other $103.80. A two-year-old heifer made $97.50 net profit. I began to test with six cows. I have sold two of them, as they were unsatisfactory. I have four more that have not finished the year's test, but I will probably sell three of them and replace with registered stock."

SELECTING FARMS FOR MEN FROM CITIES

Professor Neal Answers Those Who Would Go Back to the Soil.

By PROF. R. W. NEAL.

FREQUENT inquiries come to the AMERICAN asking the location of land suitable for farming. It is impossible to give answers to all such inquiries on this page, especially when the answers would interest only a single person; but as far as may be personal response is made to all such correspondents. For the information of the large number of readers in the towns and cities, however, who think of taking up agriculture, the following general principles will be valuable:

1.—First of all, decide what branch or branches of farming you prefer or can best follow. To do this, study the situation carefully. You had better wait a year and know where to leap, than to leap at once before looking. Talk with farmers engaged in the same kinds of farming, and with commission men and dealers if possible. Find out what products there is the best market for, which cost the most relatively to produce, which give the surest crop, and so on. Follow the market reports in the daily papers, and either subscribe for or read in the public libraries several of the best agricultural papers. Seek out any special sources of custom, such as hotels, boarding houses and local shippers and buyers.

Know All the Facts.

2.—Get all the information you can about the branch of farming you intend to follow. First, consult the agricultural experiment station or the agricultural college extension department. Ascertain the soil, climate, temperature, moisture, labor equipment, expense and cultivation conditions demanded, and other like matters. A personal visit to the station or college would pay. Correspondence courses such as those given by the Massachusetts Agricultural College are inexpensive and helpful. There are standard text books upon such subjects too, by means of which one can learn the leading facts about his intended crops. The Department of Agriculture at Washington will supply free many bulletins and circulars about farm subjects and crops.

3.—Pick your farm where the natural conditions are most suitable for your purpose. The advice of the agricultural experts about soil and so on will be most valuable. Find out the frequency of drought. Avoid districts infested with pests or plant diseases.

4.—Pick your farm as near the market as possible. In some forms of agriculture, distance from the market is fatal; for instance, in truck gardening. In others, distance is not so all-important, although it is always important.

Good Transportation.

5.—Pick your farm where transportation is good. Poor roads add out of all proportion to the necessary selling price and often make successful competition or large sales impossible. Inquire about freight and express rates. Not infrequently under present conditions rates are unequal and unfair, often prohibitive from certain territory. Seek territory in which there is competition between transportation companies, if you can find it.

6.—Pick your farm with its educational and social environment in mind. Successful business amounts to little unless it brings the good things of life.

7.—Take plenty of time to investigate and find the best place you can afford. Go to real estate dealers, but make outside inquiries. Dealers get larger commissions for handling high-priced farms. Often the "snaps" are not in their hands. Go through the neighborhood on your own hook, making your own inquiries.

8.—Finally, if you can get one, take an agricultural expert at your expense to see the farm before you make the deal.

EDITOR'S ACRE

SILO FIGURES.

THE feeding value of silage can be indicated in convincing figures. Of Indian corn, at least 40 per cent. of the value is contained in the stalk and roughage. Reduced to silage, an acre of corn yields from ten to thirteen tons of feed. A satisfactory ration for one cow is thirty pounds of corn silage, with thirteen pounds of clover hay or about fifteen pounds of alfalfa hay. This would be the main ration; it would need to be supplemented with a little unsiloed corn, and possibly oil meal or the like, especially for animals intended for the butcher.

Now ten tons of corn silage is 20,000 pounds. At thirty pounds a day per animal, this would feed one cow 666 days, two cows nearly a year and four cows some five months. At fifteen pounds a day per animal, five tons of alfalfa hay—the other main part of the ration—would last about the same time. That is, one acre of corn and one acre of alfalfa are enough to feed two cows or steers a year.

The value of the silo seems manifest. Incidentally, another conclusion presents itself from these figures. With skilful management it should be possible to produce beef cattle at a profit on small farms.

THE OLD HEN ON THE JOB.

THE million-dollar baby is not in it with the Massachusetts hen, who in 1909 laid more than four million dollars' worth of eggs—according to returns and estimates together, $4,280,000. The census man, who "eats 'em alive" when it comes to figures, counted nearly 160,000,000 of eggs that year, and he may have overlooked some even then, hidden out in the hay-stack and underneath the barn.

Although the old hen laid only 537 thousand dozen more eggs in 1909 than she did ten years earlier, so far as actual returns go, yet they brought in the market $1,455,000 more than the "lay" of 1899—an increase that is worth cackling over. But the census man explains that really there were more eggs than he counted in 1909 by some 836,000 dozen, which would add $256,000 to the valuation figures for the latest census.

On a similar basis, the old hen herself, along with the chicks, the pullets and the rooster, numbered in Massachusetts 3,212,000, and was worth $2,411,000, counting her as hen and not as eggs. Ten years earlier she was worth $1,408,000.
